KIDNAPED BANKER FEARED MURDERED

Today

Robert E. Lee's Birthday.
Six Months, Five Presidents.
Mrs. Roosevelt on War.
The Judgment of God.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

AT STRATFORD, Westmoreland County, Va., on January 19, 126 years ago, was born Robert Edward Lee, son of Gen. Henry Lee and Anne Carter.

He graduated at the head of his class in West Point, 105 years ago, and led the armies of the South in the Civil War. He was a man of admirable character, and of true military genius. His memory and his birthday are honored today.

CARLOS MENDIETA, new President of Cuba, is the fifth President within the last six months. Sixty years old, Mendieta succeeds the youthful Carlos Hevia, who started his presidential term last Monday, and did not last long. Various revolutions in Cuba have been largely the work of young men, including students, enthusiastic promoters of a "youth" movement.

But to keep a government going, after youth establishes it, experience appears to be needed. The new president Mendieta has been battling in Cuban politics for forty years.

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT says war is "utter futility and deadly stupidity." In her opinion "anyone who thinks, must think of the next war as he would of suicide. But most people don't think."

Mrs. Roosevelt's observation on thinking is even more important than her condemnation of war. If people really did think, that would settle war questions.

HOWEVER, TO call war stupid and futile, two good adjectives, does not answer the question: How will you solve the racial problems of the earth, if science conquers disease, prolongs life, produces unlimited food?

We might begin to worry about population, without the plague, war and famine that have regulated population hitherto. You ask yourself:

"When we have fifty thousand million human beings on earth, instead of fewer than two thousand millions, fifteen thousand million Mongolians, fifteen thousand million blacks and twenty thousand million whites, how will you prevent race wars?"

Of course Providence has a plan that will work perfectly, but it is not revealed to us.

MOHAMID HESSEIN, an Arab, as you will guess, told the judge he was not lying and to prove it he would place his tongue on a red hot iron. His tongue would not be burned, proving that he had told the truth.

This revival of the ancient "Judgment of God" was rejected by Judge Ferguson. Once, such tests, also combats between plaintiff and defendant, were almost universal.

A man accused of robbing the widow and orphan could challenge his accuser to mortal combat. If he won he was innocent. The accuser, if old or crippled, might appoint a substitute to fight for him.

LADIES ACCUSED of being no better than they should be were invited to walk barefoot over red hot ploughshares. If their feet were not burned they were innocent.

In at least one case, a lady of considerable charm walked on the ploughshares with perfect success, and was declared innocent. The ploughshares had been painted red, not heated.

OPINIONS ON human needs are various. The virtuous Thomas 'a Kempis advised:

Wendell Phillips did not agree with that. He said:

MRS. FAY WEBB VALLEE, wife of Rudy Vallee, who croons, would suit Wendell Phillips exactly.

Now he and his wife have reached what is called, pathetically, "the parting of the ways." Rudy Vallee thinks she should get along on $100 a week. She says she needs, and he ought to provide, the following:

One thousand dollars a month for maintenance of a home, medical expenses, recreation, groceries and entertainment.

Two hundred dollars a month for secretary's salary.

Mr. Vallee, with foresight such as few crooners, or husbands of any kind, possess, had installed a dictagraph in his house and relies on the dictagraph's narrative to convince the court that Mrs. Vallee can get along with fewer servants, certainly without the masseuse.

UNDER THE new scheme for insuring deposits in banks, the substantial total of fifteen thousand, two hundred and ten million dollars is now insured.

The insurance plan is interesting, and the fact that people have more than fifteen billions of dollars in deposits is extremely interesting, for the insurance guarantee is limited to twenty-five hundred dollars, so that all the really "big money" in bank balances is excluded from the insurance scheme.

BOARD RULE SIDESTEPS UNION

Captive Mines Ordered Sign With Officials, Not Union

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The question of union recognition does not enter into the dispute between the H. C. Frick Coke Company and its employes now before the National Labor Board.

The board so ruled today in declaring that whether a contract negotiated between the operators and United Mine Workers of America officials as representatives of the miners does or does not mean union recognition is not a question properly before the board.

As provided in an agreement President Roosevelt negotiated with the operators of captive mines—mines operated by steel companies to supply coal for their own operations—and the United Mine Workers, employes o fthe Frick mines held elections to name men to represent them in collective bargaining with their employers.

OFFICERS ELECTED

John L. Lewis and Philip Murray, president and vice president respectively of the United Mine Workers of America, were elected by the employes.

The company argued that recognition of their union titles would mean recognition of the union.

The decision was given in the cases of the National Mining Company, the Sharon Limestone Company and the Frick Company, all subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation. The board decision said:

"Whether a contract made and executed in this form (designation of union titles) does or does not, as a matter of law, amount to a recognition of the union, is a question not before us and which needs not here be decided.

"It is clear that the contract contemplated by the presidential agreement is to be made with the elected representatives and that such representatives may be officers of the United Mine Workers of America."

CHECKOFF FAVORED

The board ruled in favor of the UMWA standard checkoff system—deduction of union dues from employes' salaries — but added the provision:

"That this agreement should not deny employes, not members bers of the United Mine Workers' Association, the right to make voluntary assignments of their wages for dues or payment to any organization of which they are members or for any other purposes."

The decision then added:

"The parties will now resume their negotiations in the light of the foregoing decision, and if no final agreement is reached within 15 days from the receipt by both parties of this decision, either party may notify the board to that effect and the board will then consider any controversial matters other than those disposed of herein."

ISABELLA MESSMER . . . FANCY MEETING BILL AND HARRY!

$1 RUM, 90c GIN ON NEW LIST

HARRISBURG, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Blended whisky at $1 a fifth and domestic gin at 90 cents were announced today by the Liquor Control Board in a new price list, effective Monday.

At present the lowest price whisky on sale in state stores is $1.25 a fifth and the cheapest gin is $1.

Seventy-seven items are added to the present list.

Among the newcomers are applejack at $2.25 a quart and a new line of cordials, including Cointreau—a necessary ingredient to the popular pre-prohibition cocktail, the "sidecar"—at $1.85 a bottle.

To meet the increased federal tax on whiskies, gins and other beverages, the prices are increased from 15 to 25 cents a bottle.

Domestic wines generally are exempt from the tax increase and

TWO-GUN GIRL JAILED AGAIN

A couple of visiting Pittsburgh sleuths saw little Isabella Messmer as she was boarding a northbound train and tossed her into jail.

Isabella, it seems, got the itch to handle one of her pistols the other day so she levelled it at a guy and separated him from $900—so, the police say.

So once more Isabella, who got in a jam in Pittsburgh last October, will have to explain that she is only a little miss of 18 and an innocent and very pretty tap dancer with a carnival, and she didn't mean any harm by her antics.

Isabella provided a busman's holiday for Bill Sullivan and Harry Mellon, who are just "bulls" in Pittsburgh, but are nicknamed Foreign Legion detectives in Miami because, with sleuths from other cities, they are sunburning themselves this winter as guests of this city.

Well, Bill and Harry are hanging around the depot watching the train pull out and wondering whether they can make the grade in Hollywood on account of this Foreign Legion angle when who do they see but little Isabella hopping onto a Pullman.

They remember that Isabella was found strolling harmlessly about Pittsburgh last year with a couple of gats, so they invite her to the hoosegow for target practice.

There she is identified by Carl Friend, a prominent person in Miami, as the miss who shoved a pistol under his nose in his own home and tapped him for $900, Isabella being an accomplished tap dancer.

Isabella beat the rap in Pittsburgh about a month ago. She was paroled by Judge Sylvester J. Snee.

Fisher, Noted Painter, Dies After Operation

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Harrison Fisher, 56, noted illustrator who painted the world's most beautiful women but never married, died today in Doctors Hospital after an emergency operation.

Fisher had been critically ill for more than four months and was taken to the hospital yesterday. The operation was performed last night.

During his long career Fisher himself once estimated that he had done portraits and sketches of more than 15,000 women—among them Julia Sanderson, Jane Cowl, Elsie Ferguson, Justine Johnston, Kay Laurel, Olive Thomas, Marion Davies, Anna Q. Nilsson, Alice Joyce, Billie Burke, Marguerite Clark and a host of others.

To those who asked him why he remained single, he would quote Kipling:

"He travels fastest who travels alone."

Born in Brooklyn, Fisher was a frail and sickly child, but when he was 6 years old his family heeded the advice of a physician and took him to California.

Beginning his career on the San Francisco Call, he later went to New York, where he found many of the San Francisco newspaper artists he had known—Tad, Bud Fisher and Jimmy Swinnerton, all on William Randolph Hearst's New York American.

One day, in the studio of the late A. B. Wenzel, Fisher hastily sketched a pretty girl model and Wenzel advised him to "stick to it."

DR. WYNEKOOP TRIAL FACES LONG DELAY

Condition of Woman Brings Postponement, Her Death Feared

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The murder trial of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop was postponed today until Monday because of the 62-year-old defendant's physical condition.

Defense attorneys announced that Dr. Wynekoop's condition was grave and that she had spent a bad night, aggravated by nausea. Her pulse was given as 100 and her temperature as 99.6.

Dr. Earle Gray, a heart specialist, warned that the woman's condition was such that her life was in constant danger. He said a stroke might come at any time.

Looking extremely tired and her face an ashen gray, the aged defendant was wheeled into court a few minutes before the trial was scheduled to get under way, but she was soon wheeled out again.

TRIAL POSTPONED

After a conference of principals for half an hour in the judge's chambers it was announced that the trial would be postponed until Monday.

A conference of members of the Wynekoop family and relatives was called in Judge David's chambers, and the judge announced he would appoint a physician to determine whether Dr. Alice was sufficiently strong to survive the ordeal of the remainder of the trial.

Two physicians, Drs. Earle Gray and Chauncey Mayer, examined her last night and reported her condition was "very perilous."

Defense Attorney W. W. Smith said he refused to take the responsibility of keeping his client on trial. He asked:

"Can you blame me? She may die of a stroke at any moment."

Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty would not concur with Smith in asking the postponement of the trial. In discussing the matter with Judge David, he said:

"As I understand it this woman may live for 10 years, or she may drop dead in 10 minutes."

SPECIALISTS NAMED

The judge appointed Dr. Arthur Byfield, heart specialist, and Dr. Francis McNally formerly of the Coroner's office, to examine Dr. Wynekoop this afternoon and make a report to the court.

On that report, the judge will decide whether the trial shall continue.

Before postponement of the court, a reported "confession" by John Van Pelt, janitor at the Wynekoop home, to the slaying of Rheta caused Judge David to order all newspapers kept from the courtroom.

Both prosecution and defense said they had "heard reports" of the confession, but insisted that so far as they knew it had not been made to anyone in authority.

POLL TAXES ABOLISHED BY STATE

Pinchot Also Signs Permanent Vote Registration Bill

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 19.—Tax qualifications for voting in Pennsylvania were abolished today when Gov. Gifford Pinchot signed the bill of Senator William D. Mansfield, Allegheny, revising the election laws in conformity with the constitutional amendment adopted last November.

Gov. Pinchot also signed the Pittsburgh permanent registration measure sponsored by Senator Frank Harris.

Gov. Pinchot signed seven other bills, his office here announced, and vetoed four. This leaves eight measures passed at the recent special session yet to be acted upon before Sunday.

Among the bills signed were the two Blumberg bills creating an old age pension system in Pennsylvania. Gov. Pinchot slashed $2,000,000 from the appropriation, reducing the amount for aged assistance to $4,000,000.

Persons over 70 years of age are entitled to relief under the bill at $30 monthly for one individual and $15 additional for other dependent members of a family. The bills become effective December 1, 1934, and the $4,000,000 was appropriated from state liquor store receipts for the remainder of the biennium.

TWO BILLS VETOED

Two of the measures vetoed were the Harris and Rice bills intended to prevent discrimination against Negroes and non-residents of the state in public works project employment.

Gov. Pinchot approved the two Lose bills setting up a blind pen-

AGED COUPLE SAVED IN FIRE

Three families were routed by smoke and damage estimated at $3,000 resulted from a fire today in the Dale Apartments, 211 South Dithridge street. An aged couple was carried to safety by police.

The blaze, confined to the roof and fourth floor, was discovered in the eaves by Miss Mary E. Armstrong, residing on the fourth floor. She ran through the building, spreading the alarm and called firemen.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Wright, the former an 81-year-old invalid, were carried out by Patrolmen T. J. Simpson and T. J. O'Connor.

There are 10 apartments in the building, eight of them occupied, mostly by students of Carnegie Tech. All of the students were attending classes.

Coughlin in Birth Control Clash

Katharine Hepburn's Mother Opposes Priest's Stand

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The widely varying birth control opinions of Father Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit, and advocates led by Mrs. Thomas N. Hepburn, of Hartford, still echoed today as a House Judiciary Committee reopened hearings on a bill for wider distribution of birth control information.

Birth control controversy was called "inconceivably distressing and disgusting" by Dr. Howard Atwood Kelly, of Johns Hopkins University, the first witness today. He told the committee:

"Think of an elaborate conference on birth control in the Mayflower Hotel!

"Such a thing would have been inconceivable 20 years ago; and a great social gathering, too, at which details were talked over. Disgusting!"

A fresh rose adorned his buttonhole. He told the committee he was the father of nine children.

He spoke critically of college campus morals, into which, he said, seniors introduced freshmen.

Dr. Henry J. Crosson, speaking for Dr. William Gerry Morgan, former president of the American Medical Association, said there was "not one scintilla of truth"

University Physician Calls Conference 'Disgusting'

Dr. Henry W. Cattell, of Philadelphia, 47 years a physician, author of 100 books, challenged Mrs. Margaret Sanger to tell why she did not respond to a request to debate the subject at Galveston in open forum.

He said his belief, as a Presbyterian, was that birth control

Kidnaped Banker

MALONE TO GET SUPPLIES JOB

Conferences between Mayor William N. McNair, James F. Malone and Democratic Councilmen have led to the tentative decision that the Mayor shall not submit Malone's name to Council as safety director, but shall appoint him head of the Department of Supplies, to which place he would be confirmed.

The name of John M. Henry, to whom McNair subsequently offered the safety post, got lost in the shuffle of the conference, and the Mayor intimated he would not send a Henry appointment to Council.

Instead the Mayor suggested Fred W. Weir and George E. Evans, both of whom, as well as Henry, are acceptable to the Democratic councilmen.

But Weir probably would turn down the job now.

Councilman John J. Kane has told the Mayor that if Henry's name is presented he will move its confirmation, a statement which surprised His Honor, who thought he was taking a dig at his party associates for their refusal to approve Malone, a Republican.

BLOOD FOUND ON MISSING MAN'S CAR

Aged Father Calls Off Police; Ready To Pay $200,000

ST. PAUL, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Blood stains on both front and rear seats of Edward G. Bremer's automobile today inspired fears for the safety of the 37-year-old bank president, held for $200,000 ransom by kidnapers who have threatened him with death.

Adolph Bremer

Splotches of blood smeared the front seat of the Bremer sedan when it was found in an outlying residential district shortly after 10 a. m. Wednesday, it was reported today.

Indications were the kidnaped owner and head of the Commercial State Bank, whose aged father, Adolph Bremer, is a personal friend of President Roosevelt, was brutally slugged over the head when he resisted his captors as they invaded his car.

DRAGGED INTO AUTO

Then, presumably, sources close to the family said, the unconscious man, who at 8:15 a. m. Wednesday, had left his daughter, Betty, 8, at the exclusive Summit Grade School, and started for his office, was dragged into the back seat, which also was blood stained.

A ransom note, left at the home of Walter Magee, wealthy contractor and friend of the missing man, gave instructions for assembling $200,000 for his freedom and warned he would be killed if the police were summoned or the newspapers notified.

FEARS FOR SON'S LIFE

Fearing his son's life was in jeopardy, Adolph Bremer, chief owner of the Jacob Schmidt Brewing Company here, last night begged law enforcement agencies to desist in their efforts to hunt down the abductors. He said he was ready to meet the ransom demand.

However, there was no word from his son's kidnapers, who were expected to attempt contact with negotiators yesterday, and this added to the uncertainty surrounding the case. A special detail of investigators from Washington has been ordered here.

'Peeping' Butler Slapped, Says Heir

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Testimony that he had slapped Emil Kiechele, butler, was given yesterday by Richard Crane Gartz, son of Mrs. Kate Crane Gartz, of the wealthy Chicago Crane plumbing manufacturing family, in trial of the butler's $85,000 damage suit.

Gartz said he found Kiechele "looking into a bathroom" at the Gartz home, where there were some women guests, and struck him.

GLASS CHALLENGES DOLLAR DEVALUATION BILL LEGALITY

GUFFEY LINKED WITH CWA PATRONAGE

Disclosure Follows Leader's Blast At Pinchot

Developments in the squabble over "politics" in the state civil works program and the progress of the CWA activities today were these:

1—Joseph F. Guffey, state Democratic leader who attacked Gov. Pinchot for "playing politics" in the CWA administration, was revealed as having a hand in appointment of men to supervise CWA payrollers.

2—Prof. Francis D. Tyson charged Guffey was misinformed as to politics in state CWA operations.

3—Federal CWA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins said a decision on the complaints of political domination in the Pennsylvania CWA would be reached today.

4—While Washington dispatches said a halt was called in the CWA job-giving program, the State-Federal Employment agency here had received no orders to discontinue placing of employes. It was said also the hours of men employed were reduced.

Joseph F. Guffey, state Democratic leader who charged Gov. Pinchot with "playing politics" with the state CWA program, today was revealed to have had a hand in the appointment of men who will supervise work of 1,485 persons on a CWA payroll.

Guffey recommended the political appointments of 15 supervisors paid by the Department of Commerce to conduct a state business census. The 1,485 enumerators under them will be taken from the relief rolls.

The business census is a federal CWA project over which the state CWA administration has no jurisdiction, other than that the enumerators will be drawn from the federal-state employment service rolls.

PURPOSE OF SURVEY

The purpose of the survey is to determine the amount of sales of all businesses in 1933.

Thomas J. Donahoe, public accountant of McKees Rocks, was appointed supervisor for Allegheny, Washington and Greene counties. M. E. McGinley, of the Department of Commerce, Washington, is area supervisor for Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio.

McGinley said the census had been delayed by the controversy over the methods of administrating the state CWA program. The only preparation made thus far has been to set Donahoe up in an office of the Commonwealth Building Annex, with two office workers loaned by Democratic headquarters.

DATA IN DEMAND

The census will be the same as that made in 1930. McGinley said the data compiled then was much in demand. The work is expected to require two months. There will be 153 enumerators in Allegheny County.

Guffey said in Washington yesterday that the handling of the CWA in Pennsylvania "is a rotten mess," and charged Gov. Pinchot is using it for political purposes. Eric H. Biddle, state CWA administrator, was taken over for that job from his post as head of the state emergency relief organization.

Speaking before the Henry George Club at noon, Dr. Tyson said:

"I don't know, but I believe Joseph F. Guffey doesn't appreciate the extent to which services at Washington are administered with impartiality. Guffey was misinformed when he charged a degree of political manipulation in the CWA in Pennsylvania.

Both PWA and CWA have been administered with impartiality under the supervision of Henry Hopkins and Eric Biddle."

NO ORDER RECEIVED

Proceeding with the assignment of Civil Works jobs at the State-Federal Employment Agency, Ralph W. Gibbs, director, said today he had received no order to discontinue the placing of employes.

According to an Associated Press dispatch, all CWA job-giving throughout the country was called to a halt by federal officials. The only exception was to be in the replacing of workers who had quit and been paid off.

Indications were given in Washington that existing funds might have been exhausted within little more than another week if immediate retrenchments had not been made.

All 30-hour work-weeks, it is said, are to be cut to 24 in cities of 2,500 and over, and hours in smaller communities are to be reduced to 15 a week.

SHOWDOWN DUE IN CWA FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Decision in the Pennsylvania CWA squabble will be reached today, Civil Works Administrator Harry L. Hopkins announced after a series of conferences with Administrator Eric H. Biddle, who is here from Harrisburg.

Whether Biddle would resign was not revealed by Hopkins, although he intimated that the CWA work in the Keystone State would stand reorganization. After meeting Hopkins yesterday and again today, Biddle spent several hours in conference with subordinate officials of the administration.

Hopkins stated that he had not seen Joseph F. Guffey, Pennsylvania Democratic leader, and reiterated that he had no appointment with Guffey or any other Pennsylvanian beside Biddle. He refused to comment on Guffey's attack yesterday on the state CWA activities.

It developed today that the 30-hour week for CWA workers would be restored about February 10, at which time funds for the work are expected to be replenished by an appropriation of $350,000,000 from Congress. This amount will enable the relief employment to be continued until May 1, through a system of "staggering" the number on the payrolls.

FLOOD CONTROL BILL IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Congressman Clyde Kelly today introduced a bill in the House providing for appropriations in the river and harbors budget to finance the Pittsburgh flood control project.

It asks for funds to carry out work recommended in the report of United States engineers approved August 24, 1933, providing for improvements in the Allegheny, Monongahela and Youghiogheny Rivers and their tributaries.

Kelly's measure would permit the project to be taken up at once an dto be carried on with appropriations from oCngress as needed until its completion.

'WATER' DOLLAR SEEN BY REED

YORK, Pa., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—David A. Reed, of Pittsburgh, who is seeking re-election to the United States Senate, likens the government's monetary devaluation policy to a farmer adding water to milk, gallon for gallon. He said:

"Government dishonesty makes for individual dishonesty."

He made the statement before the York Traffic Club last night after another address yesterday at Gettysburg, in which he predicted "the rank and file of the American people will lose from 40 to 50 per cent of their earning capacity by the confiscation of gold."

Senator Reed told his Gettysburg audience:

"The French went through the same thing. The result was the French Revolution."

Assailing the Roosevelt administration, he said that "the tyranny against which our forefathers fought" is being revived as "the right of free speech is denied and every effort is being made to stifle criticisms of the present administration."

ROOSEVELT O. K. ON NAVY BILL

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—President Roosevelt through his director of the budget, has approved the Vinson bill to build the American Navy up to full treaty strength, it is announced by Representative Vinson (Dem.), of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

In a letter to Vinson, Budget Director Lewis Douglas declared the building plan "in accord with the financial program of the President and there is no objection to its enactment."

Under Vinson's bill, the Navy would be permitted to start an immediate program of new and replacement construction contemplating the laying down of 101 vessels of all categories, with completion as soon as funds are made available.

Vinson said:

"Japan has already provided for the full naval strength permitted to her by treaty and Great Britain seems practically certain to do so. By contrast, the United States Navy is dangerously deficient in modern ships and will remain so even after all of the vessels now building have been completed."

CENTRAL BANK PLANNED BY ROOSEVELT

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Confidential representatives of President Roosevelt are sounding out leaders in Congress on their attitude toward creation of a "Bank of America," with exclusive authority to issue all forms of paper currency, but without banking powers.

This proposal for a central governmental bank of issue, plus reduction of the gold content of the dollar, would constitute the President's program for restoring commodity prices.

PLANS REVEALED

The President's plans were revealed to International News Service by a high government authority.

Through creation of a central bank of issue, the President plans to use the currency to fix commodity prices. He hopes to restore the 1926 price levels and then to maintain them by manipulation of the amount of currency in circulation. He has no intention whatever of establishing such a "central bank" as the old Bank of the United States, which Andrew Jackson destroyed.

The plan would give the President, through the Secretary of the Treasury, absolute control of the currency. The Federal Reserve Board and its 12 banks held this control until enactment of the currency inflation legislation, embodied in the Thomas amendment to the National Recovery Act, last spring. Then he was empowered to expand the currency through the issuance of greenbacks.

SIDESTEPS GREENBACKS

The President, however, decided against controlling the currency by expanding it through the medium of straightout "greenbacks." He preferred to expand it through control of currency, based upon the gold standard. He can accomplish this through seizure of all gold, gold held by Federal Reserve banks, reducing the gold content of the dollar and then issuing new currency, backed by the stores of gold in the Treasury.

The effect of this legislation would be to strip the Federal Reserve banks, their member banks and all national banks of the power to issue currency.

RADIO SHOOTER GOES TO JAIL

Carl Negley, the Brackenridge gentleman who got himself national attention two monthths ago by shooting at his neighbor's radio, pleaded guilty in Criminal Court today to pointing firearms and was sentenced to one month to a year in the county jail.

This dumps the problem right into the lap of Warden John McNeil. For at the jail the radio entertains the customers nightly from 6 to 9 o'clock.

In pleading, Negley explained why he had grabbed his army rifle and fired through the ceiling of his first-floor apartment into the apartment of John Grundy, whose radio was active after midnight:

Washington 'Fixers' Must Go Regardless of Place in Party, Declares Richard W. Child

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD
Noted Author and United States Ambassador to Italy Under Two Administrations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.

TO THE forefront once more comes the old question of "political influence," "peddling the administration" and "back door fixers" in Washington.

That the White House has been fooled by some individuals is indicated clearly enough by the fact that some of these gentlemen now named as directing political offices with one hand while taking fixer's fees with the other, have gotten themselves invited to state dinners within the last few weeks.

Hence everyone believes that the disclosures of these activities were placed rather startlingly under the President's nose and that more are to follow. The Interior Department alone is said to have a list of over seventy undesirables.

Fortunately the clients of those who were trying to "sell the administration" consist of a hodge-podge of contract seekers most of whom feel that they have been sold a gold brick. They were not quite in the class of organized financial or industrial interests which in the past have come down to Washington with really big gunfire.

THE NEW DEAL appears to have successfully resisted the "big influences;" it is now engaged in sweeping out the smaller fry.

The back door game, as decent lawyers and representatives know, depends for its income and derives its menacing evils from two sources.

One—It either cheats a client by pretending to influence that it has not and so gathers in fees on false representations, or

Two—it has that influence in fact and uses it secretly to obtain from the government something it does not merit.

No decent lawyer or representative need fear the presentation of a client's case if he pretends to no influence other than his ability to present in orderly fashion and with superior knowledge of the requirements, which are often intricate, the client's desire for an intelligent hearing by the right officers of government.

The hosts of lawyers who have assisted in drawing codes, applications and other difficult semi-legal and legal steps under the new deal would be silly indeed to strike any apologetic posture.

One of them today said:

"The test is whether the representative of an industry or of some other client, puts in his case as a written record and stands on that.

"The test is whether you tell your client that you are going to sneak up to some back door at midnight or tell him that you will come down Pennsylvania avenue beating a bassdrum at high noon."

IT IS ridiculous to say as someone has said that those who approach Washington need no other guidance than the Congressional directory.

But for those who take fees for a pig-in-the-poke sale of "influence" and for those who exercise influence that will not stand the spotlight and which can't be put on the record in writing, everyone in Washington feels that there can be only one policy for the President:

NO MATTER HOW HIGH THEY STAND IN THE PARTY GIVE 'EM THE BROOM!

Baby Giraffe Born, Circus Folk Thrilled

PERU, Ind., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Winter circus quarters were excited today over the birth of a daughter to Jennie, a giraffe. It was the first giraffe ever born at the local farm.

The "baby" is more than 5 feet tall and weighs 90 pounds. Jennie formerly was in the Bronx zoo in New York City.

COUGHLIN HITS BIRTH CONTROL

would change the Ten Commandments to say "Thou shalt covet they neghbor's wife," and "Thou canst now commit adultery."

Mrs. Thomas A. McGoldrick, of Brooklyn, of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, described what she termed a "flood of traffic" in contraceptives, and demanded:

"Do we need any further freedom of the mail if this is spread so far, so openly?"

Among the means of dissemination, she named peddlers on Brooklyn subway platforms and slot machines along the high-highway.

She introduced a large number of leafleats as evidence, saying all were dated within the last month.

Appearing as a surprise witness late yesterday, Father Coughlin, famous radio priest, contended birth control would help increase Communism, and added:

"A hundred years from now Washington will be Washingtoninsky, and you'll foster it if you uncriminalize contraceptives."

Msr. Hepburn, mother of Katharine Hepburn, the actress, stood before the committee for hours yesterday presenting a wide array of medical and other advocates of the bill.

To these, Father Coughlin made answer.

"Ridiculous!" one woman exclaimed when Father Coughlin said:

"The primal commandment was increase and multiply, not control and destroy."

"Let's turn our minds to seeing how the workingman can get enough so he can live, instead of having billions go into the hands of a few, and a few thousands to the many."

Mrs. Hepburn closed a discussion of the religious aspects of the question with this:

"I have ceased to worry about people being shocked—they're shocked already and I want to get it over with. About superstition, the world is full of it. Human beings have always done so many stupid things under the most righteous terms that it is very difficult for us really to use our intelligence about anything."

COUGHLIN SEES ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Father Charles E. Coughlin, after a call at the White House, told reporters that "the President regards silver as a precious metal to be used and he is also very much aware that the present currency in the country is inadequate."

The Detroit priest declined to amplify this brief statement which he gave to newspapermen late yesterday after his visit. He said:

"We discussed sociological topics. I discover that Mr. Roosevelt is about 20 years ahead of the thought current in the country today.

"The sociological thoughts go so far in remedying the unemployment situation that when they are brought to fruition this disease of unemployment will be relegated to the dark ages.

"As the President has already expressed publicly, he regards silver as a precious metal to be used and he is also very much aware that the present currency in the country is inadequate as he has publicly expressed.

"It is high time that the people of this nation believe in what Mr. Roosevelt says. He is not a poet, but most practical."

Anthracite Strike Calm Now Prevails

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Comparative calm and a general increase in mine employment were the prevailing conditions today in the anthracite strike zone.

Msgr. J. J. Curran, author of a plan to settle difficulties between the United Anthracite Miners of Pennsylvania, which called the strike, and its rival union, the United Mine Workers of America, left for Washington without revealing the purpose of his trip.

SENATOR CITES HIGH COURT DECISIONS

Administration Seeks Early Passage of Measure

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A challenge of the constitutionality of the Roosevelt dollar devaluation bill was given to the Senate today by Carter Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, as the administration speeded efforts to obtain enactment of the legislation by Tuesday.

The outspoken Virginian, who was Secretary of the Treasury in the Wilson administration and rejected the same position with Roosevelt, asserted that Attorney General Cummings, in upholding the constitutionality of the measure, had omitted Supreme Court decisions pertinent to the question.

ACTION PRESSED

The administration passed the word that passage of the measure by Tuesday was "imperative" because of refinancing operations to be undertaken soon.

After conferring with President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau, Chairman Somers, of the House Coinage Committee, told newspapermen that some amendments were under consideration and left no doubt that one was to ease the requirements on public reports of the operation of the proposed $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. He said:

"Too many reports to Congress might defeat our purpose."

Increasing fluctuation in the dollar on the foreign exchange was another reason for administration haste to get the gold control law into operation.

In response to inquiries, Somers said he did not favor making the stabilization fund a temporary proposition.

COURT DECISIONS

Glass, in a memorandum placed in the Congressional Record, cited two Supreme Court decisions which he said held that the fixing of compensation for property seized by the government is a judicial and not a legislative function.

Pointing out that though the bill is being considered in "secret executive session" of the Senate Banking Committee, Cummings' opinion upholding the constitutionality of seizing the Federal Reserve gold had been made public, Glass said he wanted to place in the record some statements bearing on the question "which the attorney, I suppose inadvertently, omitted."

He said Cummings had referred to the case of the Monongahela Navigation Company against the United States, but had omitted a "very vital" part of the Supreme Court's decision holding that Congress could decide what property could be taken by the government, but not the compensation.

Glass read from the decision a statement that "the legislature may determine what private property is needed" by the government "but when the taking has been ordered then the amount of compensation is a judicial matter," and "not a legislative function."

WAR DEBT PACT PROBE SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—AAP.)—A resolutuion to call upon the State Department to report whether the United States made an agreement with France and England for revision of the war debts in connection with negotiatiating the Hoover moratorium was offered in the Senate today by Senator Lewis (Dem.), of Illinois.

The resolution would request the department to report if it had any document in its files indicating such an agreement, providing for postponement of all war debt payments, pending a revision of the settlements.

It would ask also whether there were any documents indicating an agreement, in connection with the moratorium, that no further demand would be made for war debt payments until a certain date in the future.

Spokesmen for President Hoover denied in Congress more than a year ago that any such agreement was made.

Soldier Believed Alive As Wife, Re-Wed, Sues

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A strange drama growing out of the World War has unfolded in the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, while another branch of the government seeks to solve the mystery involving a recorded war death.

James Zorland Robertson, a young Oklahoma husband, never returned from war. He was listed as having died.

In the courtroom yesterday sat the wife who waited 12 years for her husband, then tried to collect his $5,000 government insurance. Several years after he failed to return, their baby died and the young woman remarried. She is now Mrs. Nora Valentine Demaree, of Stillwater, Okla.

Randolph C. Shaw, special assistant to the Attorney General in Washington, stirred the courtroom with the announcement fingerprints of Robertson checked with those of a man in the Naval Hospital at Chelsea, Mass.

Shaw refused to comment on the receipt of information that a man believed to be the soldier had enlisted in the Navy on the eve of the appeal in the insurance case, but Department of Justice agents said they were working on that angle.

The court heard arguments without regard to the possibility that Robertson may be alive.

Tammany Crowd Hisses Name of Al Smith

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Al Smith has lost favor with the Tammany Hall speakers' bureau.

Mention of the name of the "happy warrior," which a short time ago was a signal for wildly cheering demonstrations, met with boos and hisses at the annual banquet of the bureau last night.

Telegrams from President Roosevelt and Gov. Lehman had been received with respectful applause when a letter from Smith was read. In it the former Governor said that "for my own protection and to save embarrassment I have cut out all dinners." Catcalls and derisive shouts greeted the announcement.

Former Mayor John P. O'Brien was the man of the hour, his appearance evoking an outburst of cheering that lasted 12 minutes. Jimmy Walker held the previous record of nine minutes.

The diners stood to a man when the band played Walker's 'Will You Love Me in December as You Did in May?" and a cheer greeted the remark by District Attorney Dodge that he was "happy to hear that song." Speaking of Walker, Dodge said:

"How he could give it and how we could take it! How we miss him tonight."

GUARDSMEN AID SEARCH FOR CONVICTS

Memorial Day Break, Kidnaping Scene of New Delivery

LANSING, Kan., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Seven convicts, including Bob (Big Boy) Brady and Jim Clark, who participated in the spectacular break last Memorial Day, escaped from the Kansas Penitentiary here today under the fire of guards and were being hunted by National Guardsmen and scores of heavily armed civilian officers.

The men scaled the south wall of the prison with an improvised ladder shortly before 7 a. m. after overpowering Clyde Deer, a guard in the cell block where they were working. Deer was unharmed.

Two guards on the wall fired on the fleeing prisoners in the darkness and expressed the belief that some of the convicts may have been wounded.

The fugitives were unarmed and fled on foot toward the wooded country along the Missouri River.

MILITIA ORDERED OUT

Milton R. McLean, adjutant general of the Kansas National Guard, ordered out batteries of artillery and troops of cavalry to guard against the convicts gaining outlaw retreats in Oklahoma.

Brady and Clark were among the 11 prisoners who escaped last Memorial Day under the leadership of Wilbur Underhill, now dead, and Harvey Bailey, now serving a life term in nearby Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary for participation in the $200,000 ransom abduction of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma City oil millionaire.

The others who escaped today were Benjamin Young, Tommie McMahan, Frank Delmar, Fred Cody and Charles Clifton McArthur, alias Claude Newton.

FLIGHT TO HILLS SEEN

In the belief the convicts would head for the Cookson hills of Oklahoma—familiar to both Brady and Clark — O. P. Ray, superintendent of the Oklahoma State Criminal Bureau, and two assistants left Oklahoma City for Northern Oklahoma armed with machine guns.

He said Oklahoma National Guardsmen would be called out if aid was needed.

There were unconfirmed reports convicts had been seen near Walcott and Victory Junction, not far from the prison.

The family of J. E. Birt, two miles southeast of the prison, said a strange motorcar stood for two hours near their farm between 5 and 7 a. m. Thursday. They said they did not see it today.

Two Department of Justice agents from Kansas City joined in the hunt because Brady is under indictment on a charge of conspiracy in the slaying of four officers and federal convict Frank Nash at the Kansas City Union Station last summer.

CUBANS AWAIT RECOGNITION

HAVANA, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Cubans looked to the United States today for long-sought recognition as Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's personal representative, hastened to Key West, Fla., aboard a United States destroyer to confer with Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Cuban public opinion took it for granted that recognition was coming soon, contending tranquility has returned to the strife-torn island with the inauguration of Carlos Mendieta as president.

A report circulated here said the United States Navy has already inaugurated a tentative plan to withdraw warships from Cuban waters. They were sent here last September when American lives and property were threatened.

Bandits Rob Bank, Beat Man With Gun

GIRARD, Ill., Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Threatening death to four officials and employes and six customers if they moved toward any of the nine burglar alarm buttons in the bank, four heavily armed bandits today robbed the State Bank of Girard and escaped with between $4,000 and $5,000 in cash.

Sterilization Urged On Those Born Blind

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Germans blind by inheritance were asked to submit themselves voluntarily to sterilization under the new Nazi law.

An appeal by the Union of Blind German Academicians to this effect was published yesterday in Chancellor Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter.

SEA MONSTER SEEN BY MONKS

FORT AUGUSTUS, Inverness, Scotland, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Come now four Benedictine monks of Fort Augustus Abbey to add their testimony to that of persons who claim to have seen the Loch Ness "monster."

Come they do, despite the taunts of the incredulous—despite, too, the charges that the so-called sea monster, serpent, giant squid or what-else-have-they, is just a myth invented to intrigue simple tourists.

Abbot Hunter-Blair questioned the monks, and said they told him:

"Not only have we seen the creature once, but we have seen it on several occasions."

And the abbot—himself familiar with Loch Ness for half a century—wrote that he was convinced the weird and mysterious monster actually haunts the deep waters of the Loch.

The abbot thinks the fearsome something-or-other probably belongs to no known present-day species, but to the Devonian Period, oldest but one in the world's history—dating back to several hundred million years.

LEAPS TO DEATH WITH 2 SONS

SHANGHAI, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Mrs. W. S. Grooch, of El Paso, Tex., took her two sons, William, 6, and Thomas, 7—one under each arm—and jumped off the roof of an eight-story apartment house today. All three were killed.

Mrs. Grooch was the wife of the operations manager of the Pacific American Airways. Their home was in the apartment building from which she jumped, one of the most fashionable in the French concession.

When he heard of the tragedy, Grooch lost consciousness and is now in a serious condition as a result of the shock.

MAE WEST GETS BIGGER GUARD

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(AP.) Threats of violence brought orders to strengthen the cordon of guards today in the courtroom where the asserted robber of Mae West is on trial.

Superior Judge Harry Sewell regarded the anonymous telephone warnings he received yesterday lightly, but authorities who already had assigned four personal guards to the actress, took no chances.

Miss West herself took things comfortably on the grand jury's couch in a room adjoining the scene of the trial, which lost most of its allure to court audiences when the state's star witness completed her testimony the previous day. But she was called back by prosecutors after a night spent working on her latest picture. They thought she ought to be on hand.

INSULL OUSTER RECOMMENDED

ATHENS, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The reporter of the Supreme State Council recommended today, to the council, that Samuel Insull, Sr., former Chicago utilities operator, be expelled from Greece. The decision is expected next Tuesday.

The reporter, Theodore Angelopouloso, presented his recommendation in a two-hour session of the state council, which had to decide whether it is competent to handle Insull's appeal against the government order that Insull shall be deported before January 31.

In the court corridors it was rumored that President Ractivan, of the council, and the seven other judges were evenly divided as to what course they should take.

MYSTERY MAN FLIES TO SIDE OF RUDY'S FAY

Secrecy, Police Guard 'Star Witness' In Suit

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Accompanied by a police escort, an unidentified man described by Fay Webb Vallee's lawyer as the key witness in her suit for separate maintenance from her husband, Rudy Vallee, orchestra leader, arrived in Los Angeles last night. He was escorted to the Santa Monica home of Mrs. Vallee by Glendale and Los Angeles police bodyguards.

Ben S. Cohen, attorney for Mrs. Vallee, said:

"All I can say is that the witness was summoned here to testify, and that the testimony will be of a sensational nature. When he has told his story, I believe the atmosphere in this court battle will be cleared up completely."

Mrs. Vallee could not be reached. Her suit is set for hearing next Wednesday.

Asked if the man was to testify regarding Mrs. Vallee's charges that her husband had been guilty of indiscretions with Alice Faye, blues singer, on 12 occasions in Eastern and Southern cities, Cohen said he could not divulge the nature of the testimony.

A check of the airplane's passenger list showed only three New York residents. These were Andrew Goodman, Johnson Hurd and J. W. Mitchell. At the Glendale Airport it was learned that the plane also carried women passengers and a few movie actors.

'Janes' Nos. 4 and 5 Named By Fay in War With Rudy

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Two more "Jane Does" in the life of Rudy Vallee—these two in New York—will be added to the charges against the crooner by Fay Webb Vallee, her local attorney, Benjamin A. Hartstein, announced.

He made the announcement last night after Hyman Bushel, counsel for Vallee, had said Fay may name 500 "Jane Does," or even 1,000, in her separate maintenance suit against her husband, and it won't do her a bit of good.

On Wednesday, Mrs. Vallee on the Coast accused her husband of misconduct with "Jane Doe No. 3," as well as two previous "Jane Does," and Alice Faye, blues singer.

Supreme Court Justice Lydon today signed an order requiring Fay to show cause why she should not be restrained from prosecuting the separate maintenance suit she has filed in California. The order is returnable Monday.

THEFT BLAMED ON FIRST DRINK

John Deni, ice skating speed champion and hockey player, took his first drink and its effect was funny, he said this morning in Morals Court.

He gave away his friend's $275 raccoon coat to a girl.

Deni, 30, of 3823 Cabinet way, was fined $10 or 10 days in jail by Magistrate Ralph E. Smith.

Donald Thompson, of Woodland road, Sewickley, a fellow hockey player, testified the coat disappeared while he, Deni and others were playing hockey at Duquesne Garden, January 14. He reported the loss to detectives, who found, they testified, that Deni had given it to a girl. She returned the coat and detectives arrested Deni.

The drink, Deni said, was the first in his life. And after taking it, he testified, he doesn't remember anything.

CLASHES MARK MDIVANI TRIAL

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Clashes between opposing attorneys have taken the spotlight from David and Serge Mdivani, Georgian princes on trial accused of embezzling more than $30,000 from the Pacific Shore Oil Company which they headed.

The lawyers who engaged in verbal tilts are W. I. Gilbert, for the defense, and prosecutors David L'Esperance and Dan Beecher. Judge Fletcher Bowron frequently was called upon to put an end to the heated exchanges.

The jury of 10 women and two men learned from Miss Rose Adler, bookkeeper-director of the company, many screen celebrities had been among the investors in the brothers' concern. David Mdivani formerly was the husband of Mae Murray, actress, and Serge was formerly married to Mary McCormic, opera singer.

Gandhi Restores U. S. Boy to Mother

AHMEDABAD, India, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The 6-year-old son of Nila Cram Cook, an American woman who formerly was a follower of the Mahatma Gandhi, was taken to Calcutta yesterday to join his mother.

The boy was under the guardianship of the Mahatma, who refused to release him from the school except under the express wish of the mother.

HUNT CHILDREN WITH POISON

Police and detectives today were endeavoring to learn if any more of the deadly drugs and poisons, taken from a physician's kit and scattered in Mirror street, Hazelwood, are in the hands of children in the neighborhood.

The contents of the kit were discarded by thieves who stole the automobile of Dr. H. W. Wuerthele, of 1300 Murray avenue, from the court of the Schenley Apartments while he was attending a meeting of the Allegheny County Medical Association Tuesday night.

Deadly poison tablets in a hypodermic kit were found Wednesday morning by Jack, the 7-year-old son of Leo Thompson, of 865 Mirror street, the physician said. The tablets were in an envelope which bore the physician's name. Thompson then telephoned Dr. Wuerthele.

SLAIN HACKMAN HELD NUMBER RACKET BOSS

Garavini Linked With Rankin Ring as 17 Go on Trial

Slain two months ago, Andy Garavini, the hacker, was revealed today as "the boss" of a reputed big numbers ring operating out of Rankin.

In Criminal Court 17 members of the alleged ring went on trial. Sergt. C. J. Bunch, of the state police, testified that several of them had identified Garavini as the boss.

Garavini himself was indicted shortly before he was shot dead in a clash with Iggy Swartz, bookmaker, outside the William Penn Hotel. Garavini's red-haired wife, who had divorced Swartz, saw the battle between her husband and former husband. Swartz is being held for the killing.

Bunch testified the men were arrested when state police raided a place at Fifth avenue and Hawkins street, Rankin, and found Garavini and his cohorts, including Paul Whalen, son of Police Chief John J. Whalen, of McKeesport. Thousands of numbers slips were taken.

OFFICER CAUGHT IN GANG CHASE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Gunmen in the mob of Dutch Schultz, missing Bronx beer baron wanted by the government for income tax evasion, raked an upper Fifth avenue restaurant with bullets early today and then were captured in a desperate attempt to escape.

The shooting was inspired by the cut-throat competition between policy game operators of Harlem.

Among the eight men seized was Policeman James J. Carney. He was in citizen's clothes when arrested and his service revolver, chambers empty, lay on the floor beside him.

A police radio car heard the shooting and sped to the scene in time to pick up a fleeing automobile. When they caught the machine and threw open the door, Carney is alleged to have said:

"Don't shoot—I'm a policeman, too."

Carney said he had been to a party and that his gun had been unloaded.

CLOSED SUNDAY FOR JOHNSTOWN

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Mayor Eddie McCloskey, who has championed the cause of Sunday movies, today issued drastic orders to police to close up every shop and amusement house each Sunday.

The order was a result of a vote of the City Council Monday night directing McCloskey, over his protest, to close motion picture houses on Sunday.

In his order to Police Chief Harry F. Klink, McCloskey invoked a city "blue law" of 1913 which bars sale of any commodities on Sunday except medicines and medical supplies.

Motion picture theater owners, in a joint statement after McCloskey's order, said they will continue Sunday movies. Proceeds from the Sunday shows have been going to charity and McCloskey several times has defended the theater owners.

JUDGE DEFENDS SHERIFF VOTE PROBE ORDER

The Heinz-Gollmar Sheriff contest is not a private dispute between two candidates, but a matter of public interest and welfare, Judge Ralph H. Smith held today in a formal opinion backing up his recent order permitting an examination of election records.

B. Robert Averbach, counsel for Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar who won the election on the face of the returns by about 500 votes over John Heinz, Democrat, appealed to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, thereby holding up the examination.

Judge Smith ruled that the act of 1927 which Averbach contended restricted the court to an inspection of only the record of assisted voters, was not to be so construed. He declared:

"The statute does not limit the right of the court to examine any election records whatsoever to protect public welfare and in the public interest. Election records are public records and nothing could be more closely or intimately connected with the general welfare than the safeguarding and protection of the ballot as the voice of a free people.

"The decision rested on a very slim majority. Charges of fraud have been made in the manner provided by law and are now pending in the election contest tried in Quarter Sessions Court.

"The charges of fraud hurled back and forth between the contending parties have been of such a general nature as to be a public hue and outcry.

"It is of paramount importance that some effort be made to determine who was elected to fill the office . . . The question of whether it is designed to promote a so-called 'fishing expedition' is not here involved."

SPAIN CONVICTS 4 AMERICANS

International News Service.

MADRID, Jan. 19.—Four Americans, whose arrest and imprisonment on the Island of Majorca provoked action by the State Department at Washington, were sentenced to six months imprisonment today by the Spanish Supreme Court, which reversed the verdict of a Majorca military court which had acquitted them.

The four—Clinton Lockwood, of West Springfield, Mass., and his wife, Caroline, and Edmund Blodgett, of Stamford, Conn., and Roderick Mead, of New York—were found guilty of assaulting a civil guard at Palma during a drinking party at a hotel.

Having eased the wounded feelings of the Majorcan authorities, who appealed the verdict of acquittal, it is now believed that the Spanish government will either pardon the four Americans or commute their sentences to periods equivalent to the time they have already spent in jail.

City Solicitor Studies Meter, Ground Rent Tax

M'Nair Suggests Speedy Report To Council

City Solicitor Cornelius D. Scully must make the next move in the effort to increase the city's income by some $6,000,000 through new taxation levied against meters of utilities companies and ground rents charged by realty owners whose tenants erected the buildings and pay the taxes on their property.

Councilman John J. Kane yesterday proposed both levies to Council, together with a suggestion that $5,000 of the value of dwellings started before April 1 and completed before October 1 be exempt from taxation for five years.

The utilities suggestion, Kane said, he worked out with a "group of interested citizens" whose identities he refused to reveal. The ground rent and tax exemption plans came from Mayor William Nissley McNair and are supported by Kane.

TAX ON METERS

Kane would tax all water, gas, electric, taxi, steam and possibly trolley fare meters $5 a year, bringing a revenue calculated between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000 a year.

Kane said:

"I am opposed to salary reductions and elimination of positions. It is against the national program of recovery, although I am in sympathy with the elimination of duplication of government costly to the taxpayers.

"I am not so sympathetic with the efficiency experts who are responsible for the chaos in American industry. I particularly resent cutting out scrub women, watchmen and janitors.

"The people who now want so many jobs eliminated were not on hand in Harrisburg when we tried so hard to rush through the fight for old age pensions."

FLING AT MRS. SMITH

Kane apparently was referring to Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, McNair's budget advisor, who has been seeking ways and means of balancing the budget by economies.

A few minutes previously he had repeated his statement that he would not consider budget suggestions from other than department heads, and his mention of "efficiency experts" was taken to refer to M. C. Conick, auditor, aiding Mrs. Smith.

"I am in favor of finding additional revenue. I suggest we tax some of the revenues of public utilities which have a monopoly on public service. The Mayor is in accord with this idea, as well as a tax on ground rents."

Kane's proposals were read to Council. As the ground rent proposal was read, Kane told Council:

"That comes directly from the Mayor's office. He told me he will be glad to come in here and give us his views."

LEGALITY STUDIED

The two tax levies and the tax exemption for new homes were all referred to Scully for advice on their legality and for preparation of ordinances.

When McNair heard of Council's disposal of the ordinances, he said:

"If I were Scully, I'd get right down to work and send back those ordinances and a favorable opinion today."

But McNair won't instruct Scully to that effect.

McNair and Kane point to ground rents of approximately $2,000 a day paid by three downtown department stores. The owners of the ground—large estates—could be taxed 10 per cent of the rents and not charge the taxes against the stores under the terms of their lease, McNair insists.

McNair estimates a return of about $3,000,000 from this tax, based on $30,000,000 yearly rents paid.

WOMAN NAMED ASSESSOR

Although she failed to be elected, having tied the vote with Bronislaw Rolczynski, Miss Mathilda M. Whittman, of 131 Altmeyer street, Sharpsburg, has been appointed Assessor for the First District of Sharpsburg by Judge Sylvester J. Snee in Quarter Sessions Court. Miss Whittman filed a petition, signed by 22 voters, saying a vacancy existed by reason of the tie vote, and asked for the appointment. Her rival failed to ask the court to appoint him.

Samuel L. Coates was appointed to fill a vacancy as Auditor in Scott Township, and Matthew Walker was appointed Auditor for the First District of the Second Ward, Millvale, where D. A. Iseman had resigned.

Ousted by Pinchot, Gets Federal Job

WARREN, Pa., Jan. 19.—Frank Chapman, brother of State Senator Leroy E. Chapman, dismissed a month ago from the Highway Department payroll after the Warren Senator failed to vote as Gov. Pinchot desired on Public Service Commission appointments, has received a federal appointment.

He is assigned to the United States Forest Service division, having Warren, Elk, McKean and Forest counties under his jurisdiction.

M'NAIR FETED BY ITALIANS

It was a different Mayor McNair, serious in demeanor and wearing a "hard-boiled shirt," who attended a banquet of Italian-Americans in his honor last night in the William Penn Hotel.

Many Democratic leaders and a few Republicans were among the 1,000 present. Two of those listed among the speakers, Joseph F. Guffey and David L. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman, were absent.

The Mayor was presented with six rare volumes on single tax written by Gaetano Filargieri, Italian political economist. Of them the Mayor said:

"If the people help to carry out the ideas of this man, we will have no unemployment in Pittsburgh."

James F. Malone, McNair's selection for public safety director, introduced as "The Happy Warrior," said:

"Pittsburgh has come into its own at last."

To which Father James R. Cox added:

"Before the year rolls around I think all Pittsburgh will thank God for this man McNair."

BANK INQUIRY BARES DEAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—How profits of more than a million dollars to a New York investment house in a Detroit bank stock transaction eventually resulted in a loss to the Guardian group of Michigan banks was described to Senate investigators.

The witness was Carleton M. Higbie, who was a member of the firm of the Keane-Higbie Company, an investment corporation that became a member of the Guardian group.

He told yesterday of the sale of 30,000 shares of stock of the Union Commerce Investment Corporation, a forerunner of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., to the firm of Goldman & Sachs, of New York, in 1929, at $120 a share, and the repurchase at $184 a share of 25,000 of them.

Upon close questioning by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, Higbie agreed that the repurchase was a condition upon which rested culmination of the deal in which the Union Commerce Company acquired the Keane-Higbie Company.

Cash Receipts Relieve City's Financial Snarl

With Council discussing measures designed to bring in millions through taxes on public utility meters and on ground rents, much less is being heard about the possibility of a city bond issue based on delinquent taxes.

Mayor William N. McNair has announced he is against such a bond issue, and instead favors a vigorous effort to collect taxes due.

Other factors have helped relieve financial pressure at City Hall and lessened the need for borrowing. Chief City Assessor Percy R. Williams has stated that the assessment cut will probably not exceed fifty million dollars, as compared with the one hundred million dollars estimated by his predecessor.

Tax collections are coming in rapidly. Up until Wednesday the city had received $1,435,916 in taxes for this year, compared with $568,630 in the same period last year. This was largely brought about by a payment of $568,630 from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Flat water rents collected up to January 15 were $84,798, compared with $98,306 in the same time last year. There was more metered water revenue, however, the total in the same period being $117,307, compard with $109,068 last year.

McNair would have imports come up the Mississippi and Ohio rivers free of duty, on the assumption that vast fabrication plants would grow up here.

Cites Road Gains In Pinchot Regime

WILKES-BARRE, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Secretary of Highways Samuel S. Lewis, guest of honor of Wyoming Valley Motor Club at its annual meeting last night, said the department during the administration of Gov. Pinchot has constructed more roads than were built in the previous 20 years.

This, he said, is despite the fact that the gasoline tax and registration fee were not increased. Building of township roads between 1931 and 1934, Secretary Lewis stated, has enabled township supervisors to cut tax millage, saving taxpayers $4,600,000 annually.

Budget Slashes Ready For McNair Approval

Mrs. Smith's Report Expected to Urge $2,000,000 Cut

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, budget advisor to Mayor William Nissley McNair, today was to submit her recommendations for reductions in the cost of city government during 1934.

The recommendations will be the result of a two-month study with M. C. Conick, accountant, during which time Mrs. Smith has attempted to find some way of balancing the budget.

McNair will receive the recommendations and submit them to his department heads for study in anticipation of Council's second budget session, Monday.

Mrs. Smith yesterday refused to state the amount of the cuts, but McNair said:

"I understand they're about $2,000,000."

That is the amount Council has expected it will have to cut from expenses to balance them with receipts.

Mrs. Smith stated that the cuts were "very substantial." It is understood they still fall below the $2,000,000 mark, however.

Council discussed the budget with most of the department heads yesterday in its first budget session. It was agreed that department heads would be given an opportunity to study the Smith recommendations. Council will call on them, begining Monday, for their proposals and suggestions.

STATE SENATOR FLAYS PINCHOT

ROCHESTER, Pa., Jan. 19.—Speaking before the Beaver County Council of Republican Women here yesterday, State Senator Alonzo S. Batchelor, Monaca, lashed out at Gov. Pinchot and Mrs. Pinchot. He declared the Governor had stored away among his political archives many broken campaign pledges. He said, in part:

"In both his campaigns for Governor, Pinchot promised to establish a fair rate board and reduce utility rates; cut in half the licenses for automobile tags and drivers. Despite his six years at Harrisburg prices remain the same.

"The Governor said in his campaign talks he would make Pennsylvania dry. The state under his administration is now in the liquor business and prices are so high that bootleggers will prosper.

"The Governor established the most expensive government in the state's history and autocratically refused to take any cuts."

W. HOMESTEAD CHIEF HELD

Lindberg waived hearing and posted bond before Burgess Richard H. Lawry on charges of disorderly conduct, felonious assault and battery, impersonating an officer and robbery. All were preferred by Patrolman William O'Brien as an aftermath to the latter's suspension and arrest by Lindberg.

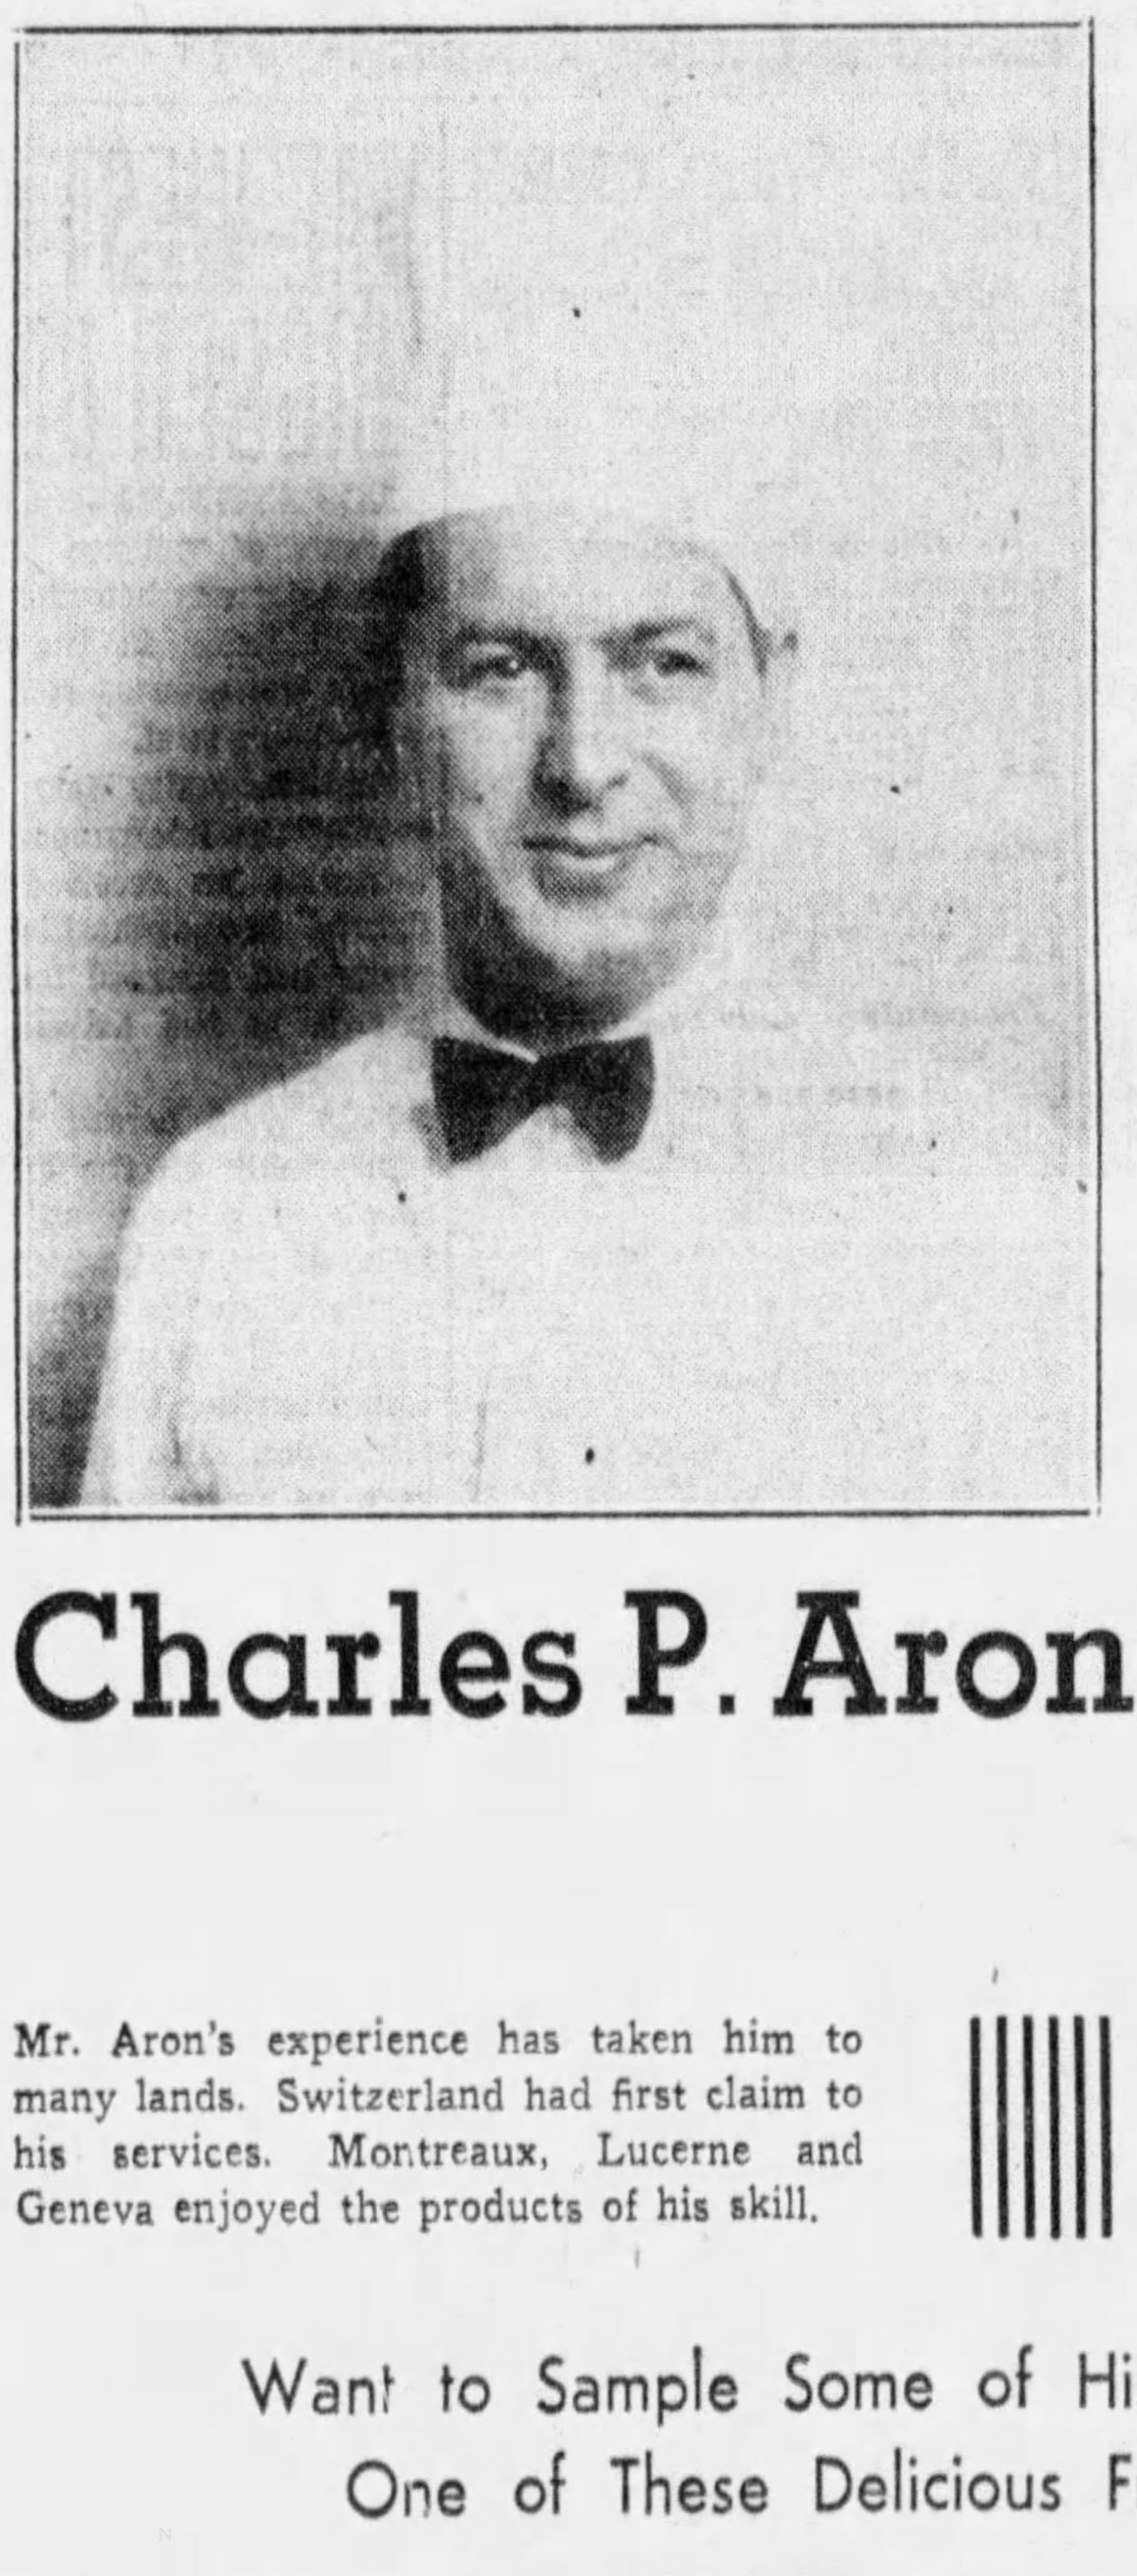
Burgess Lawry set bond for the charge of impersonating an officer at $500, but refused to accept bond on the robbery and felonious assault charges, declaring that was a matter for the District Attorney. A call to the District Attorney's office resulted in bond for all three charges being set at $30.

A disorderly conduct charge against Officers Harold Russell and Paul Dean, growing out of the same incident, was dismissed by Burgess Lawry.

One of Lawry's first acts as Burgess was to fire Lindberg and reinstate O'Brien. Last Monday Council reinstated Lindberg and fired O'Brien.

O'Brien, charging Lindberg with robbery and felonious assault, declared the robbery took place when Lindberg took O'Brien's badge and the assault occurred when the chief pushed him.

MEN Are More Important than MACHINES



—that's a cardinal principle of the NEW DEAL and has long been one of the fundamental principles here at DONAHOE'S.

During the past few months we completely re-equipped and thoroughly modernized Donahoe's Fifth Avenue Bakeshop with the newest, most-approved equipment.

Yet we have not forgotten that the men who man these machines are the most important of all.

Baking is an art—not easily mastered. It requires years of application and study to learn how to produce quantities of fine baked goods and at the same time to have them all measure up to a high standard of quality.

Charles P. Aron, in charge of Donahoe's Bakeshop, has had a wealth of experience. He is a master of the baker's art.

Mr. Aron's experience has taken him to many lands. Switzerland had first claim to his services. Montreaux, Lucerne and Geneva enjoyed the products of his skill.

Then he went to Monte Carlo, in the Principality of Monaco; next to Ghent in Belgium, then to Strasbourg, France, next to New York City, and now he is the Master Baker of Donahoe's.

COUNCIL TO GET BILL ON WATER RATE LOSS

An ordinance to cancel the contract between the city and the South Pittsburgh Water Company, which costs Pittsburgh about $280,000 yearly, is to be introduced in Council Monday.

Introduction of the bill will follow failure of a motion introduced in Council's finance committee yesterday by Councilman William A. Magee which would have placed the committee, including all of Council, on record against the contract.

The pact binds the city to buy from the water company at the firm's approved rates the supply for 18,000 consumers in the city south of the Monongahela River. The city then resells the water to the customers at the same rates paid by residents of other sections of Pittsburgh for city water.

$280,000 LOSS

The contract means an annual loss of about $280,000 to the city —the difference between buying and selling price of the South Pittsburgh firm's supply.

Magee, in budget session yesterday, moved that the committee place itself on record against taking that loss. His move was designed, apparently, to sound out the sentiment of Council on making that cut in the budget. He later withdrew the motion, following agreement on introduction of the ordinance.

During discussion following Magee's motion, which was seconded by Councilman John M. Huston, President of Council Robert Garland developed that, while the city must pay for all water delivered, the water users often become delinquent in their payments to the city.

Garland said:

"Even if that contract is continued there should be a clause that they stand part of the losses.

"That's something we should not stand even if we continue the contract."

CAN BE CALLED OFF

The agreement can be called off, according to City Solicitor Cornelius D. Scully, if either party gives 90 days' notice at the beginning of any quarter. Scully said the city's next date of notice would be April 1 and that the contract would not lose force then until July 1.

James W. Gray, chief of the Board of Water Assessors, said that in 1933 the city charged consumers a total of $261,820.54. Dr. James P. Kerr, City Controller, said the city actually paid the water company $539,289.61 — a loss of $277,469.07.

Observers thought the discussion in Council and the hearings that will follow introduction of an ordinance to discontinue the contract, probably precede efforts to obtain a rate cut from the company and consent of the company to share, at least, the cost of delinquencies.

Poll Taxes End; Permanent Vote Measure Signed

sion system under the constitutional amendment adopted last November. About 3,000 Pennsylvanians will be eligible for pensions up to $30 monthly under the measures, which appropriate $1,310,000 from liquor revenue and become effective on June 1 of this year.

Additional appropriations totaling $756,000 from liquor funds to three administrative departments whose work was increased by the return of liquor were approved in the Steedle bill.

The Governor slashed the appropriation of $882,000 for Auditor General Frank Baldwin's department to $441,000, his original estimate, which was boosted by the House. The other appropriations are $165,000 to the Treasury Department and $150,000 to the Department of Public Instruction.

The other two vetoes were on the Beech bill appropriating $800,000 for the erection of a new tuberculosis sanitarium in the northwestern part of the state and the Long bill imposing upon the Philadelphia school district one-third of the expenses of the Board of Revision of Taxes.

The Ziesenheim joint resolution to study the present liquor control system and recommend any changes to eliminate defects at the 1935 regular session also was vetoed by the Governor.

The veto message said Pennsylvania's system has the enthusiastic indorsement of sincere wets and sincere drys and is the best system yet set up anywhere in the nation. Gov. Pinchot promised he would be the first to recommend a change if the liquor store system proved a failure.

Other bills signed were the Buckman bill amending the 1929 milk control act and the Frazier bill partially eliminating deficiency judgments in forced sales. This bill was characterized as "poorly drawn and utterly inadequate" but basically sound and necessary during the present economic emergency.

Pinchot Signs Age Pension Bill, Lauds Senator Harris

HARRISBURG, Jan. 19.—(AP.) —Gov. Pinchot's long fight for old age pensions is ended—the bill authorizing them is law—but payments will not start until the last month of the year.

Recipients must be residents of Pennsylvania and must have been citizens for at least 15 years. They must have no jail or insane asylum records and have done no professional begging in the last two years.

As he signed the bill, in a hospital in New York, the Governor turned to Senator Frank J. Harris, of Allegheny, and said:

"You are the man to be thanked. I'm glad to sign it.

"It is one of the finest pieces of social legislation. What this bill means is that thousands of the aged who might have been miserable will now be happy."

VOTE MACHINES IN NEW TEST

County Commissioners have made another move to have the voting machines of the county, valued at $1,100,000, ready for inspection and approval by February 10.

Two machines were sent to the Burger Manufacturing Company, Canton, O., yesterday. The Canton company offered to survey and suggest repairs on the machines on the same basis as the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, which has been trying to make two of them foolproof.

Chairman C. C. McGovern said today he also had a third expert in mind.

Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the Commonwealth, gave the county until February 10 to have the voting machines ready for approval, with the alternative that a different machine be ordered.

Then two years later she sent him the fare to return from a Texas jaunt, she added.

But October 2, 1931, he left for good, she said. So she asked the court for a divorce from Thomas D. Johnson, an engineer.

Her husband never supported her nor their child, she testified, explaining that she worked. They were married January 17, 1928.

HEARST PAPERS LAUDED FOR JAP STORY

Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.—"The Hearst newspapers, in publishing the translation of the Japanese politician handbook, 'Narrative of the United States-Japanese War of the Future,' are doing a great public service!

"They are presenting accurately to the American public a document of Japanese militaristic propaganda which every loyal American citizen ought to be acquainted with."

This was the statement by no less an authority than the collector of customs for the District of Hawaii, J. Walter Doyle, upon whose orders thousands of copies of the handbook of sedition and violence, intended for circulation among Japanese in the islands, were seized.

BACKS SEIZURE

And upon his action, Doyle, who arrived in San Francisco yesterday, was prepared to stand. En route to Washington, where he has been called for a conference with other officials by President Roosevelt, Doyle declared that he would do the same thing again under similar circumstances. He added:

"I made the seizure under the tariff act, and it is for the Treasury Department to determine whether the seizure was legal or not.

"Publishers of the magazine to which the handbook was a supplement have disclaimed all responsibility for it. This one fact stands out, however; since the handbook has been given widespread publicity in the United States, there have been three more editions. In other words, the adverse comments in this country have served to 'press agent' the pamphlet among the Japanese.

CRITICIZED BY JAPS

"The Japanese government has criticized our confiscation of the book, on the grounds that it was purely fictional, and such as any magazine might publish. On this stand all I wish to say is this: Can anyone imagine any American magazine or publication, putting out a free supplement to its parent publication, under any conditions, or particularly of such nature as this?

"In my mind it is a good thing to bring such a document to the attention of our people. It is a good thing for the United States to be prepared for anything."

FAR EASTERN POLICY TOLD

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Protection by force, if necessary, of American lives and the integrity of American soil is one of the cardinal points of American policy as it relates to the Far East, according to Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief of the State Department's division of Far Eastern affairs.

In an address last night before a meeting here of the conference on the cause and cure of war, Hornbeck, in what he described as his own personal views, enunciated America's Far Eastern policy as follows:

"Use of force only for the purpose of preventing or combating unlawful use of force by others imminently imperilling the lives and legitimate interests of American nationals or the integrity of American soil.

"Abstention from action and from commitments involving or tending to involve the United States in situations, controversies or conflicts in which the rights, obligations and interests of this country are not at stake."

War Glory Pledged by Japanese Book

Honors for Inciting Attack Upon U. S. Envisioned

To the noble Japanese who precipitates war with this country will come honor and glory. At least, that is the promise of the little handbook of violence of which the final chapter of translation follows. The book, written by a retired Japanese naval officer and indorsed by some of the empire's most prominent naval officers, was barred from circulation in the Hawaiian Islands as seditious.

In the preceding chapters was set forth the opening of warfare by way of a heroic Japanese naval officer's torpedoing the flagship of the United States Asiatic fleet. This officer, Lieut. Eitaro Maki, turns out to be the hero of the war, with his long-lost brother discovered as a one-time deserter from the navy back to the colors.

Incidental is the romantic interest, though, to the main theme of sabotage, which includes blowing up the Panama Canal, loosing the dirigible Macon from her mooring mast, and train-wrecking.

A battle is taking place at a point 200 nautical miles east of the Kurile Islands, between the Japanese advanced fleet and the main body of the United States fleet. Admiral Nagano, the commander-in-chief of the Japanese main body, receives this message, and he speeds his ships toward the battlefield. When the two opposing fleets come face to face, the darkness falls.

In the battle between the Japanese advanced fleet and the United States fleet, eight Japanese ships against 10 United States cruisers and two airplane tenders, the loss for the United States is two cruisers and two airplane tenders, while the loss for Japan is all the ships except two, during the two hours' fight.

Now the night battle is on with the main fleets. Ships fire, and some ships are blown to pieces, but the members on the Kurumi, particularly Kawano, with whom we are familiar, are not able to distinguish whose ships are firing and what ships are sinking.

Suddenly Kawano observes two ships passing which he recognizes to be United States airplane tenders. No orders are issued to fire on them. These two ships pass before Kawano's eyes three times.

These ships open fire on the ship Kawano is on. Still no order came from the officers to fire on those ships. Some of his friends tell him that those ships are Japanese ships. Kawano is puzzled.

However, later, he recognizes that those are American ships by the protruding smokestacks above the airplane take-off deck. Then, without waiting for further orders, he releases a torpedo and sinks the first one of the two ships that come into his sight. While he is waiting for the second ship, he gets wounded and loses track of the ship. Later, he discovers that almost all of the members of his ship are killed and his ship is almost totally destroyed.

Decide On Attack

Admiral Nagano, the commander-in-chief of the Japanese fleet, is in conference with his chief of staff and his air chief in a map room. The admiral wants to know about the number of airplanes on both sides and what will be the outcome of the air fight if such a battle is waged immediately.

The air chief figures that there are about 126 planes among the United States fleet, and there are 105 planes in his troop. He also tells the admiral that he thinks his planes are able to defeat the United States planes. At the end of the conference, Admiral Nagano concludes to make an attack on the United States fleet early in the morning, at 4:30 o'clock.

The second commander of the ship makes an inspection of the ship to see if everything is all set and men are prepared. He notices that all the men are very anxious to fight and settle the issue. He also sees that all the equipments are ready for action at a minute's notice.

Now, a message from a scout plane from Akagi is distributed to all ships. The message says:

"Thirteen battleships at 553 point; course northwest; formation in line; 14 cruisers at a point 10 nautical miles west of the other, course north-northwest; in two lines; one Saratoga shaped tender."

When the air chief finished reading the message he says:

"There is only one airplane tender on the enemy's side. The other has been either sunk or lost. That leaves 76 planes for the enemy and that means victory for us. It is certain."

The attack on the U. S. fleet is about to start. A wire message comes from Chichijima that says:

U. S. Planes Defeated

The Japanese fleet is on its way to wage a deciding battle. The opponents are about 39,000 meters apart. Japanese ships are a little faster than the American ships, they have a speed of 23 knots, while the ships of the United States fleet have the maximum speed of 21 knots.

All the superior officers of the Japanese fleet seem to be worrying about something. They all look serious and deeply concerned. It was because this coming air fight will bring about a great change in the tide of the future ocean battle.

The Japanese planes defeated the U. S. planes. The air power over the sea came to the possession of the Japanese.

The Japanese air troops defeated the U. S. planes not because they were more brave or skillful, but because they had a greater number of planes than the Americans. The Americans were just as brave and skillful as the Japanese. It is too bad that the U. S. fleet had to come to such a far away place to wage a war.

Commander Barnett, who was a prisoner of war, explains why the Japanese fleet won the battle. He says that after the U. S. fleet lost its tender and the planes, the ships were not able to attack the Japanese ships because the Japanese planes laid smoke screen from the air and some Japanese ships, fast ships, laid smoke screen between the fleets, which prevented his ships from action.

Must Pay for Crime

Admiral Nagano and his fleet with the surrendered U. S. fleet, enter Tokio harbor, where a tremendous celebration is going on. Just before the fleet reached Tokio, it came across the disabled Kurumi, the cruiser commanded by Lieut. Maki. Among the 27 survivors was our radio repairman, Kawano.

'Novel' Relates Air And Sea Defeat Of Americans

After the celebration and the ovation given Kawano as a hero, he is sentenced to serve out the time he was absent from the navy as a deserter, for while the good work he did during the war was recognized, and he was properly honored for it, still he had to pay for the crime he committed long before.

Six months later, we see Kawano, his wife and baby daughter, on the good ship Chichibu Maru, en route to Honolulu, the newly taken Japanese territory.

In the hold of the vessel is a statue of Lieut. Maki, which will be erected in a prominent place in the park at Waikiki.

The foregoing is as nearly as English can come to catching the Japanese wording. Careful reading will point out how plots are outlined in detail, as for example the blowing up of the ships in the Panama Canal.

The handy guide for land plotters, as described in the San Francisco incident, sets forth even the style of reasoning by which weak and untrustworthy plotsmen may be shaken out of sabotage plans.

As for the naval engagements, it is known that the Japanese dream of taking the Philippines and Honolulu is far less fantastic than it might have been.

The accuracy of the movements is vouched for by officers who have made careful study of conditions in the Pacific. It is interesting to note that the United States fleet, in 1934, two years sooner than the "novel" sets forth, is slated to be in the Atlantic and to be reviewed by the President.

JAPS TO BUY U.S. AUTO PLANT

International News Service.

TOKIO, Jan. 19.—The Japanese government is assisting negotiations for the purchase of the Osaka plant of a large American automobile manufacturer by a Japanese foundry company known as a maker of military supplies, International News Service had learned today.

The ministry of commerce was doing all in its power to arrange the sale of the American plant to the Tobata Foundry Company.

Purchase of the factory would give Japan an excellent automotive production and assembly plant, and would alleviate the commerce ministry's troubles in consolidating Japanese aircraft and automotive firms, which would be a costly subsidizing proposition.

MISSIONARIES SAFE IN CHINA

FOOCHOW, China, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Four American missionaries, isolated near Kutien as a result of sharp fighting in the region, were reported today to have come through the experience unharmed.

They are the Rev. W. S. Bissonette, of Canton, O.; Dr. and Mrs. H. N. Brester, of Xenia, O., and Miss Martha Graf, of Cincinnati.

The whereabouts of two other members of the mission, the Rev. and Mrs. C. M. L. Sites, of Washington, was unknown.

The group, missionaries of the American Methodist Episcopal Church, went through a heavy airplane bombing during an attack of nationalist government forces on Fukien province rebels, but escaped uninjured.

IMPORTS OF JAP LIGHT BULBS CURBED

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Anti-dumping orders issued by the Treasury Department customs division have about removed from American markets cheap Japan-made electric light bulbs and rubber soled shoes, Department of Commerce figures reveal.

Canned tuna fish, crabmeat and rag rugs are products now arriving with the greatest monthly increases. Tuna imports jumped from 4,295,000 pounds in 1932 to 15,430,000 pounds in the first 11 months of 1933.

Canned crabmeat imports jumped from 5,500,000 pounds to nearly 7,000,000 pounds while cotton rug imports increased 2,200,000,000 square yards.

The anti-dumping orders against electric light bulbs and rubber soled shoes were issued last September. During that month 16,500,000 bulbs were landed from Japan at a price American markets could not meet. They dropped to 13,000,000 in October and 8,450,000 in November.

Similar decreases in the imports of shoes was reported.

Chinese Lamas Begin Prayer To Avert War

PEIPING, Jan. 19.—(Universal.)—Supported by Chinese government officials, 108 Mongol Lamas today began a 108-day period of prayer in Peiping's historic Lama Temple, appealing to Buddha to save the world from a ruinous war.

The prayer period followed a prediction by the Peiping high lama that the year 1934 would see an "all-destroying war" in which the United States and all other powers would participate.

PONZI TO QUIT CELL FEB. 14

International News Service.

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—The "Little Napoleon of Finance" today looked forward to leaving St. Helena, on February 14, and planned a bitter court battle to escape the shadows of another exile—deportation to Italy.

Charles Ponzi, 52-year-old so-called financial wizard, who likened himself to the famous French general, but who, the government said, was a "common and notorious thief," will walk through the gates of Charlestown state prison, after spending the minimum of his seven to nine years' sentence, into the arms of immigration officials.

He was granted his freedom 26 days hence by the State Parole Board.

INDICT OFFICERS IN ELK COUNTY

RIDGWAY, Pa., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Eight indictments charging misconduct in office, embezzlement and fraud were returned today against the three Elk County Commissioners.

They are T. H. Leddon, Democrat, of Ridgway, in office since 1904; Joseph Wisner, Democrat, of St. Mary's, who served since 1914, and E. D. Brown, of Johnsonburg, in office since 1924. Bond was fixed at $1,000 each.

District Attorney G. B. Straub said the charges mostly concerned the sale of public lands and handling of the county poor fund.

He mentioned one charge that the Commissioners advertised a tract of land for sale, but later sold it secretly. They were offered $12,000 for the land but sold it for $25, Straub said.

FOUR FRENCH DEPUTIES MAY FIGHT DUELS

PARIS, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Two duels involving deputies appeared imminent today. Both were results of the Stavisky scandal.

A Negro member of the Chamber of Deputies, Joseph Samuel LaGrosilliere, of Martinquie, slapped Deputy Desire Ferry, the editor of the newspaper La Liberte, twice in the face, in the lobby of the chamber this morning.

LaGrosilliere said he understood Ferry had coupled his name with perjury charges in connection with the collapse of Serge Stavisky's Bayonne pawnshop and the resultant loss to investors of $40,000,000.

PUNCHES ASSAILANT

Before these two deputies came to blows, however, and while the cleaners still labored at their sweeping, seconds for two other notables met in the chamber to decide which of their principals had been offended in another argument.

They represented Anatole de Monzie, minister of education, and Deputy Philippe Henriot.

These seconds selected Francois Pietri, former cabinet minister and noted swordsman, to decide whether their two principals really ought to fight a duel and which one, under the code of honor, had been offended.

CHOICE OF WEAPONS

This, they considered, was an important matter, for the offended party has the choice of weapons.

Ferry, however, did not leave the matter of whether he should duel up to anyone else. He immediately chose as his seconds two fellow deputies, Joseph Laniel and Marcel Heraud, and instructed them to present his formal challenge at once to LaGrosilliere, demanding "satisfaction by arms."

A few moments later he reversed his personal decision, announcing he had decided that the "judicial antecedents" of LaGrosilliere could not permit their meeting on the field of honor, and that, therefore, he, Deputy Ferry, had decided to complain to the courts.

COURT PHOTOED TO BALK NAZIS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Two pictures were taken yesterday in the courtroom of Superior Court Judge Guy F. Bush. They were not movies.

One was a group picture of all those present. The judge said he had been threatened with bodily harm if the right decision was not returned in litigation arising from the asserted Nazi dominance of the German-American Alliance here, and he wanted "for the record the likeness of every person in this room."

The other was taken after a lawyer for the plaintiffs declared the defendants in taking the witness oath had given the Nazi salute.

Judge Bush said he would also study it to determine whether the hight hand merely was raised or used in the gesture of a salute.

The suit was brought by two members of the alliance who seek to void a recent election of officers on the grounds it was controlled by Nazi sympathizers.

MYSTERY MAN IN HESS CASE

READING, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A coroner's jury was told yesterday that just before Miss Frances Sepse, 28, fatally wounded Dr. Paul Hess, socially prominent physician in front of his office January 8 she was seen talking to a "stout, elderly foreign-looking man."

The testimony was given by George Fox, a merchant tailor, who said he passed Fifth and Walnut streets just five minutes before the shooting. Fox said:

> "She was very excited. He was trying to calm her. I thought they were father and daughter. It seemed to me she had done something he didn't like and he was chastising her for it."

The man was not identified.

The jury's verdict made no recommendation and merely found that Dr. Hess had come to his death from pistol wounds at the hands of Miss Sepse.

Accused of Driving Stolen Car to Ohio

Joseph Fazio, 22, of Deary street, was arrested yesterday on a charge of violating the national motor vehicle theft act. He is charged with transporting a stolen automobile from Pittsburgh to Cleveland last August.

In default of $1,500 bond he was committed to jail to await a hearing before the United States Commissioner.

The society plans erection of a $3,000,000 structure with a stipulation that three per cent of gross receipts go to the city. The hearing originally was set for Wednesday.

called The Epicure to the parting guest. "But I need not have bothered to remind him! Once a Warwick patron, always a Warwick patron! The very register smiles a welcome to some of the guests who have been coming back ever since it opened!... That marvelous cuisine is one magnet that draws them... the distinguished clientele is naturally another ...and then that feeling of being right in the heart of things! Some come for one reason and some for another... but they all come back!"

KINSHIP TO KING CLAIM DROPPED BY BRITON

LONDON, Jan. 19. — (AP.) — Clarence Guy Gordon Haddon, who claimed royal kinship behind the bar sinister, was bound over to keep the peace today on the conditions that he shall abstain in the future from making any statement that he is the son of the late Duke of Clarence—King George's brother—and that he shall not cause or encourage any other person to make a like statement.

Haddon, in a surprise move today, pleaded guilty to the charge of having attempted to blackmail the King through his assertion that he was the illegitimate son of the King's late elder brother.

The 43-year-old unemployed engineer was accused of having written letters to the King demanding money.

JUDGE GIVES ADVICE

"May I, perhaps, dropping the judge for a minute and as one man to another, appeal to you to put that maggot out of your brain and try to be a happy fellow?"

Haddon replied:

"Yes, my lord."

He left the court with friends.

Attorney General Sir Thomas Inskip traced a series of errors in Haddon's claims in regard to the date of his birth and identified him as one of three children of a Lieut. Rogers by a woman not his wife.

The date of Haddon's birth was set as 1889—two months before the Duke of Clarence, late elder brother of King George, visited India. It was on this visit that Haddon claims the duke met his mother.

MOTHER'S TEACHING

Outlining the story of Haddon's life, his attorney, Lloyd Jones, stressed the point that Haddon had been brought up by his mother in the belief he was the Duke of Clarence's son.

This strongly influenced his whole life, the lawyer said, bestowing upon him a notoriety which affected his fortunes adversely.

Regarding Haddon's experience in America, Jones said he had attempted with the assistance of friends to begin life anew in New York in 1929, but found great difficulty in obtaining employment.

It was during that period that he wrote a book to which the Attorney General referred, because it was the only source of income he could find, and in the genuine belief its contents were true, the lawyer said.

EX-FOLLIES GIRL DIVORCE BALKED

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Unless Peggy Gottler, the former Peggy Mitchell, Ziegfeld Follies beauty of eight years ago, can bring in better evidence than she did yesterday, Superior Judge B. Rey Schauer will not grant her a divorce.

He allowed a week's continuance of the hearing to give her time to prepare other evidence.

When she sued her song-writer husband, Archie Gottler, for divorce, Mrs. Gottler charged him with misconduct with one "Jane Doe." She did not mention Jane but made out her case with stories of Gottler's nagging and surly disposition, plus corroborative testimony of one witness.

This did not show sufficient grounds for divorce, Judge Schauer held. He also refused, for the time, to consider a property settlement Mrs. Gottler said had been reached. In her complaint she asked for $750 a month alimony.

Restaurant Owners' Meet Opens Sunday

Siam to Execute 3 Army Officers

To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer, perhaps, from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing, rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

CO-EDS PUBLISH PITT NEWS

To celebrate the beginning of co-education at Pitt, a special edition of the Pitt News, devoted to "Women's Day," appeared on the campus today. Replacing men editors, Janet Slease, Pitt junior and a niece of Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar, was in sole charge of its publication.

Yesterday, Janet followed her copy into the News' print shop, and approved final page proofs. The edition, she makes clear, is a genuine women's edition, edited, written and supervised by and for co-eds. It contains mostly news about today's women's program at Pitt which includes a costume pageant depicting the progress of women in many fields. It also celebrates the one hundredth anniversary of the beginning of coeducation in American colleges.

Besides being a regular member of the Pitt News board, Janet is a member of W. S. G. A., Kappy Alpha Theta, and Cwens at Pitt. Past summers she has become well known to hundreds of Girl Scouts by being the editor of the Cho-Co-Ree, Camp Redwing paper.

STATE TO PUSH LIQUOR LAW VIOLATORS

The petty liquor law violator who gets off with a $25 fine now had better beware when the Liquor Control Board gets busy.

The bootlegger and speakeasy operator who think, too, they can escape with a police court fine, had better think again, the State Revenue Department warned today.

Explanation of why only $25 fines are imposed on some violators of the state rum law was given by D. D. Hill, assistant director of the Revenue Department. He said these were prosecuted under the liquor tax act and not the control act.

CONTROL LAW TO RULE

The Control Board will function under the control act, which provides that possessing liquor is a misdemeanor, and therefore violators will be held for court.

The board also may prosecute under the tax act, providing for summary convictions, but it was regarded as unlikely that it will do so.

Hill said that the Revenue Department is prosecuting cases pending the completion of the Control Board's machinery. The board announced last night it will hire 50 enforcement agents as a part of that machinery.

Hill said that while the cases of petty violators were disposed of with summary convictions and $25 fines and 10 days in jail, the bootlegger and speakeasy operator are being held for court on misdemeanor charges. The department has prosecuted about 50 cases, he said.

PROSECUTIONS LOOM

Commenting on the escape of some in Police Court with fines, Hill said a checkup is made by the department on each case, and those that are big-time violators are prosecuted again on state charges.

Twenty-five persons were arraigned at Police Court and aldermanic hearings last night and today in connection with liquor law violations and lottery operations. Four were held for court, four hearings were continued, one was held for further investigation, 11 were fined and five discharged.

Those held for court were Joseph Fera, 215 West Main street, Carnegie; Pasquale Izzorelli, 4741 Second avenue; Giulio Bordi, Box 1, East Monongahela, and George H. Thompson, 1014 Herron avenue.

S. Buffalo Stores Swept by Flames

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Fire early today destroyed the Seneca street branch store of the W. T. Grant Company in South Buffalo, and for a time endangered the center of the South Buffalo business district. The loss was estimated at $100,000.

Shea's Seneca street theater was damaged, and stores of the Buffalo General Electric Company, the Danahy-Faxon Company and the F. W. Woolworth Company were damaged.

Orphanage Placed Under Quarantine

The Queen Esther Orphanage in Maple avenue, Dravosburg, was under quarantine today following a mild outburst of scarlet fever, mumps and chickenpox, according to officials.

The top floor of the building has been isolated and is being used as a hospital, authorities said. There are about 43 children in the home.

U. S. Tax Increases Many Brands in State Stores

TAX REFLECTED

The federal cut in the levy on champagnes is reflected in the new prices, which are from 10 to 30 cents a bottle less than at present. The same is true of sparkling bungundies.

All new brands and the brands on the original price list which have not been stocked are being rushed to the stores and will be on sale as soon as possible.

In a few instances, prices of imported wines, such as sparkling Moselle, were increased by greater amounts than the average. The board explains this is because the importers failed to consider the import duties in their quotations and thus the first prices were fixed too low.

REPEAL CURBS BOOTLEGGERS

ST. Pierre, Miquelon, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Bootlegging at St. Pierre et Miquelon, these French islands lying a few miles south of Newfoundland, has all but collapsed since repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment in the United States.

Canadian distillers who hold large stocks of rye whisky on the island have started to sell legitimately to the United States. They are refusing to sell to smuggling interests.

In addition, agencies for first-class brands of Scotch, French champagne, cordials and liqueurs—held by Canadian distillers' representatives here—have taken the same stand.

A large volume of the existing stocks already has been shipped legitimately.

Very little liquor for smuggling was loaded last summer, but in October there was a burst of activity to get cargoes into the United States before repeal—high prices being anticipated.

RICH WIFE SUES FOR 'SUPPORT'

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A woman who testified on the witness stand that "off-hand, I'd say I was" worth a quarter of a million dollars—"it might be" a half million—today sued her husband for support.

She is Mrs. Elizabeth Dunn, former president of the Pennsylvania Grand Opera Company, who seeks from Houston Dunn support for herself and four children.

She testified her husband left her in 1932, but had not contributed directly to her support since 1919. She said her husband is in the fire insurance business and "understands his salary was $12,000 a year."

Mrs. Dunn also testified she receives $20,000 a year from a family trust fund and that her children have an income for their education from a $30,000 trust fund.

JOHN D. UNABLE TO GO SOUTH

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—John D. Rockefeller, who has been ill at his Pocantico estate, will not visit Florida this winter, friends close to the family said yesterday.

It was said that, although Mr. Rockefeller had almost completely recovered from the attack of grip he suffered in November, his physicians have decided it would be unwise for him to take his annual southern trip.

Mr. Rockefeller, who was said to be in better health than at any time since the attack, is to remain at Pocantico.

RUM TAX NEAR 2 MILLION

HARRISBURG, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Revenue from liquor taxes and licenses is creeping close to the two million dollar mark.

The Department of Revenue had announced today that the figure has reached $1,935,401. Of this amount, $1,553,146 is in the liquor license fund and will be disbursed to counties in which retailers were licensed.

The other $383,255 represents receipts from liquor taxes and railroad car liquor licenses.

Most of the state's revenue from taxes is not due. The greater part of this money will flow in during the next few months in payments of taxes by distillers.

KICKED FOR HER BRIDGE BIDS, WIFE SAYS

Raising the bid of her husband while playing bridge resulted in Alice Skolda, Harmarville, being kicked on the shins, it was testified in her divorce action against John Skolda. On other occasions Skolda otherwise ill treated her, she told Judge Harry H. Rowand.

A sister, Marion Bridgeman, verified the wife's accusations, adding:

> "He kicked her on the shins when she raised a bid. If the card game was not going right to suit him, he slapped her face. When visitors were present he would put out the lights, just as much as to tell them it was time to go home."

Threats to kill him by turning on the gas and other outbursts of temper are charged by George L. Leslie, of Glenshaw, in his divorce action against Ethel E. Leslie, of Mars. Leslie's petition also said:

> "The respondent had an ungovernable temper and stayed awake until 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning, making loud noises, singing, hammering doors and stamping solely for the purpose of preventing libellant from sleeping."

Divorce suits also were filed by Sadie Knopfel against Charles L. Knopfel, Mary P. Lloyd against Harry J. Lloyd and Emma J. Grabill against Harry H. Grabill.

CAMPBELL AIDS GOLD HOARDER

DENVER, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Frederick Barber Campbell, New York, who is accused by the federal government of hoarding $200,000 in gold, has offered legal aid to Miss Edith M. Thomas, Denver, who has been similarly indicted.

George K. Thomas, Denver attorney and a brother of Miss Thomas, said today Campbell had voluntarily sent all the briefs in his case to the daughter of former United States Senator Charles S. Thomas, who also challenged the government to take his gold.

Miss Thomas was indicted for failing to report to the government the ownership of $2,000 in gold. She has said she will fight the indictment to the limit.

Campbell's case is pending before the United States Supreme Court.

STEEL PRICES UNDER CODE ASSAILED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The Federal Trade Commission has sent to President Roosevelt a 25-page memorandum, vigorously critizing the price system and other parts of the steel code as conducive to monopoly.

Copies of the memorandum are being closely held by the commission and other officials concerned, but it was learned in high official quarters that it informs the President of pricing and other practices under the code's operations which it assails.

Recovery Administration officials said they had not received copies of the memorandum, although they said conferences between Recovery and Commission officials concerning the price clauses and other sections had been held. White House officials refused to discuss the matter.

PRICE SYSTEM ATTACKED

The price system in the code is the major point of attack. It is known as the multiple basing point system, and is the outgrowth of the famous Pittsburgh Plus system which the steel industry voluntarily abandoned under a commission decree in 1924.

The commission's memorandum argues that the multiple system may still permit monopolistic practices in the steel industry, and the commission has received complaints of this intent. The memorandum further says that the price system was given the authority of law by the code although its legality has been questioned, and despite that the commission never specifically approved the system as a proper substitute for the Pittsburgh Plus.

The steel industry's basing point price system provides, in a General way, that prices for steel products shall be published at a number of points of their production and that freight from those points to any designation shall be charged regardless of whether the article in question actually was shipped from the production point.

CHARGES IMPOSED

For example, a product might have a base price only at Pittsburgh, although it was produced both at Pittsburgh and at, say, Bethlehem, Pa. No matter where the buyer might be he would have to pay the price quoted at Pittsburgh plus freight from Pittsburgh, although the item might be shipped from Bethlehem.

Under the code about 100 basing points have been set up for steel's products. This Chicago, Pittsburgh and Birmingham are all basing points for rolled or forged axles. Similarly, other products have several basing points so that, theoretically, all buyers will have close at hand a buying point.

The commission's memorandum holds that the multiple system, as now used under the steel code, probably fails to offer all buyers an equal opportunity, and that the basing points may not in fact provide nearby basing points.

Two officials of the NRA—Donald Richberg, chief counsel, and K. M. Simpson, division administrator—are designated to watch operations of the steel code authority and they often sit in with the board of directors.

Officials pointed out that the code never has been approved fully, having first been signed for three months' operation, and then for a further trial period of four months. This latter period expires in the middle of May.

MONRO ASSAILS TARIFF POLICY

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The tariff bargaining proposals and reciprocity policy of the Roosevelt administration were called a "tariff-scuttle policy" last night by William L. Monro, of Pittsburgh, president of the American Tariff League.

Monro said that "for well over 100 years we have paid, and paid dearly, every time we abandoned the protective tariff policy and its abandonment has brought retirement to those who caused it."

The adoption of a reciprocal tariff policy at this time, Monro asserted, "is especially ill-timed in view of the extreme nationalistic policy now a part of the economic program in all the principal foreign countries."

Monro gave his indorsement to the NRA and other phases of the President's recovery program.

U. S. Loans Urged For College Students

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A plea for federal loans to young men and women wishing to enroll in colleges and universities was made to President Roosevelt yesterday by 500 delegates to the convention of the American Association of Colleges.

Insured Banks Curbed in Paying Interest by U. S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Regulations prohibiting insured banks from paying interest on demand deposits were issued today by the Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The order conforms with requirements already in effect on member banks of the Federal Reserve System. It extends this prohibition against interest payment on demand deposits to non-member banks which now have deposits up to $2,500 insured by the federal corporation.

The corporation said:

"This regulation provides that no bank may pay interest on a demand deposit or after a deposit becomes payable on demand. Demand deposits are those which are payable on less than 30 days' demand or within 30 days from date of deposit.

"The exceptions to this rule are (A) deposits payable only at an office of a bank not located in the United States or in the District of Columbia, (B) deposits made by mutual savings banks, (C) deposits of public funds where payment of interest is required under state law and (D) deposits made by contract entered into heretofore unless that contract contains an option permitting the bank to conform with these regulations."

The regulations of the Deposit Insurance Corporation will not affect banks in the Pittsburgh district, as no interest is paid by banks here on demand deposits, according to the Pittsburgh Clearing House.

BUSINESS GAINS IN NEW YEAR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The Federal Reserve Board today brought out figures to show that, although still far below the level of times considered normal, business has started the new year at a rate of activity "considerably higher" than that marking the outset of 1933.

Reviewing conditions in the past year, the board noted as favorable signs:

There was also a large increase in the income of farmers.

A representative group of large corporations showed an increase in net profits during the second and third quarters of 1933 and in the latter period profits were larger than at any time since the second quarter of 1931.

Sales of automobiles and commodities distributed by mail order houses and chain stores increased for the country as a whole.

Coal Price Boost By Retailers Seen

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A retail coal code expected to increase prices to the householder as well as to boost employment and wages was completed yesterday by Recovery Administration executives.

W. H. Davis, deputy administrator, pointed out that every effort would be made to safeguard the consumer. The code requires public posting of prices, creation of divisional boards to review all proposed minimum market prices and receive complaints.

Crucible Steel Mill Damaged by Flames

The Crucible Steel Company mill in Smallman street, a one-story corrugated iron building, was damaged by fire last night, which firemen blamed on an overheated steam line. The mill has been idle.

One Pair of Legs Takes 2 Pals To Court

J. W. Reaves, 46, and Harvey Thompson, 50, both of 35½ Fountain street, Springfield, O., appeared in Traffic Court today.

They're buddies, and each has but one leg.

Reaves was being heard on a reckless driving charge growing out of an automobile accident on Noblestown road yesterday in which the auto of C. A. Lidic, 100 Clairtonica street, Crafton Heights, sustained damage of $30. The Reaves car swung wide on the curve, it was testified. He promised to settle and was discharged.

BORAH AND NYE RENEW FIGHT AGAINST NRA

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Replying to the criticism aimed at him by Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, said in a statement today that "no amount of denunciation can change the fact that trusts and combines and monopolies are fixing prices in this country for the American people."

Johnson last night in New York assailed Borah and Nye (Rep.), of Indiana, for finding fault with NRA on the ground it was not helping the litle business man, and said that—rather than accept a place on a board to work out such problems—the Senators preferred to "sit aside and conjecture evil."

NYE'S REPLY

In another statement, Nye said today of Johnson:

"Nero may rant and roar, but all the browbeating he may resort to will not destroy, though it may delay, knowledge of what NRA policy is doing to destroy small business and unnecessarily further burden the consumer, all to the end that the 'plunderbund' may enjoy larger monopoly and maintain profits on fictitious capitalization."

Borah said that in fixing prices, mopolies were "taking millions from the American people unjustly." He added:

"Nothing can dispose of the fact that many small firms are being driven out of business through the practices of combines and trusts.

"When those things are remedied, I will cease my efforts, and not until then."

ASSAILS SENATORS

Critics of the NRA—and Johnson apparently pointed at least in part to the two Republican independents, were scored by the Administrator last night in a New York speech filled with colorful language.

Johnson dealt at length with the question of monopolies and profiteering, the focal point of criticism by Senators Borah and Nye yesterday. He did not name them, but said:

"I asked the very gentlemen who are now concerning themselves with this kind of problem to sit in here and try to see that only good results. They did not accept.

"I believe that they preferred to sit aside and conjecture evil. So long as they both shall live they will have to answer as to why they did not consent."

ROOSEVELT PROGRAM

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt arranged to outline his own recovery plans before a meeting of the 48 state directors of the national executive council called by Director Frank C. Walker last night for January 31.

Nye made mention yesterday of a possible inquiry into the NRA. An eventual congressional investigation is generally expected in Washington, but there has been no certainty as to whether the legislators would feel like trying it this year, with the elections of next fall impending. Johnson's address was regarded as notice that he was ready for it.

FIREMEN SENT TO MAYVIEW

Three city firemen will be on duty at the City Home and Hospital at Mayview in response to a request from Welfare Director Southard Hay to Fire Chief Richard L. Smith.

The men detailed to the duty by Chief Smith are Thomas M. Clark, Stephen G. Weihrauch and Lambert W. Cox. They will remain on the payroll of the Bureau of Fire at least temporarily.

Railroad Employes Can Join Any Union

The federal government is taking pains to reassure railroad employes of their right to join any labor organization without prejudice to their jobs on the part of their employers.

Robbers Ransack Oil Firm Station

The Pennsylvania Oil Company station at 1301 Washington boulevard was ransacked early today by thieves, according to a police report. Nothing was reported stolen.

GLOBE-TROTTING

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Several Globe Trotters have asked questions concerning the personal property tax, the blanks for which have just been distributed to the citizens.

The major question can be stated thusly:

"If the Einstein Bill has exempted money on interest in savings banks from payment of the personal property tax, why should the citizens have to report the money in the bank as requested in the blanks furnished by the County Commissioners?"

The County Commissioners contend that the exempting of bank accounts from the four-mill tax is unconstitutional because it is discriminatory. A test case has been instituted.

The Commissioners are asking that bank accounts be reported because they feel that they will win their case and that would mean that all persons who had not made such reports would be compelled to file additional returns later.

Many people are reporting their bank accounts but are withholding the payment of tax on them until the question is finally determined by the court.

Although the bank account tax was knocked out temporarily, or permanently, by the Einstein Bill, all of the other brackets of the personal property tax still stand.

Numismatic Charles Marketch rushes to the rescue with information about Marie Bergstadt's Monroe Doctrine Centennial half dollar. He says it commands a value of $1.50.

This series of commemorative coins is one of the oddest. Marie, look closely and see if the reverse side of the coin shows the continents of North and South America formed by the bodies of two girls.

Intelligence Test for Dialers

By AIRCASTER

I want to be helpful to those philanthropists who finance radio programs.

These gents, I heard somewhere, are worried again over the average intelligence of the listener, because they have found out only 10 per cent of the audience "goes for high-brow stuff, like, for instance, opera and symphony, which costs more than popular entertainment."

I believe we should anticipate the plan of such sponsors to have an agency check up on the audience intelligence by offering a few I. Q. queries in advance.

If you can answer or check them, without a mistake, then you qualify for listening to cultural programs, Uncle Don, the stout-heart club; and are privileged to laugh at Eddie Cantor's costumes without seeing them.

* * *

THE TEST

Complete the following sentences by selecting the proper word from the group at the left—

Ben Bernie is a (an) . . . (ostrich—band leader—crooner—cigar lighter—race horse.)

Georgie Jessel advertises . . . (Mammy—Jessel—Cantor —nothing.)

* * *

MOSTLY FALSE

Going to another phase of this test, you are entitled to thirteen and a half facsimiles of any kind of package if you can check properly, the following sentences:

Crooners are a blessing to radio . . . (False) (. .) . (True (. .)

Anybody can mail a letter to Admiral Byrd—(False) ( ) (True) ( ).

All Comedians use original jokes—(False) ( ) (True ( ).

Radio was invented by Marconi—(False) ( ) (True) ( ).

Sponsors are the backseat drivers of radio—(False) ( ) (True) ( ).

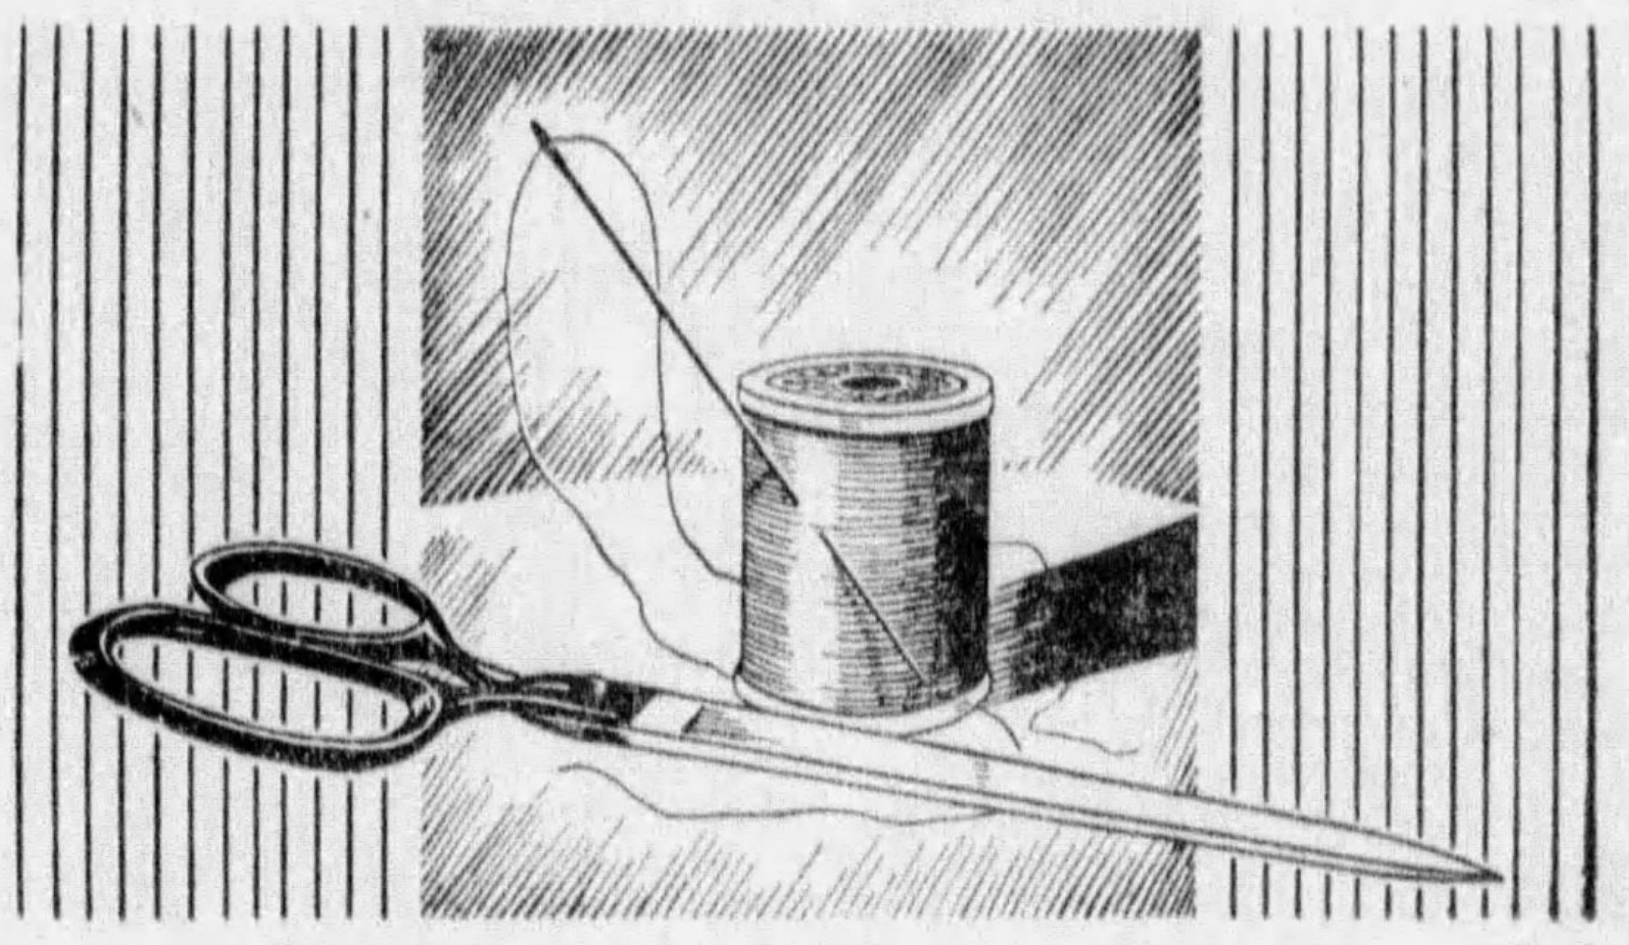
SHAPE THE FINTEX COLLAR!



IN the great Fintex tailoring plant, an entire floor is devoted to the hand-finishing of armholes, the shaping of the collar. Here women, skilled in hand tailoring, make certain that every Fintex Suit, Overcoat or Tuxedo will hug the neck and shoulders.

Hand-tailoring of these important parts of a man's Suit is something that many men would not expect to receive in a garment selling for $19.50. The reason lies in the fact that Fintex Clothes are made to a rigid Standard of Quality—and the price is low only because of large scale production and simplified distribution.

We buy our materials for Cash and we sell our Clothes the same way. If this were not so, Fintex Clothes would undoubtedly cost a great deal more. Today is a good time to look them over. Slip into a Fintex—and know Clothes Satisfaction.

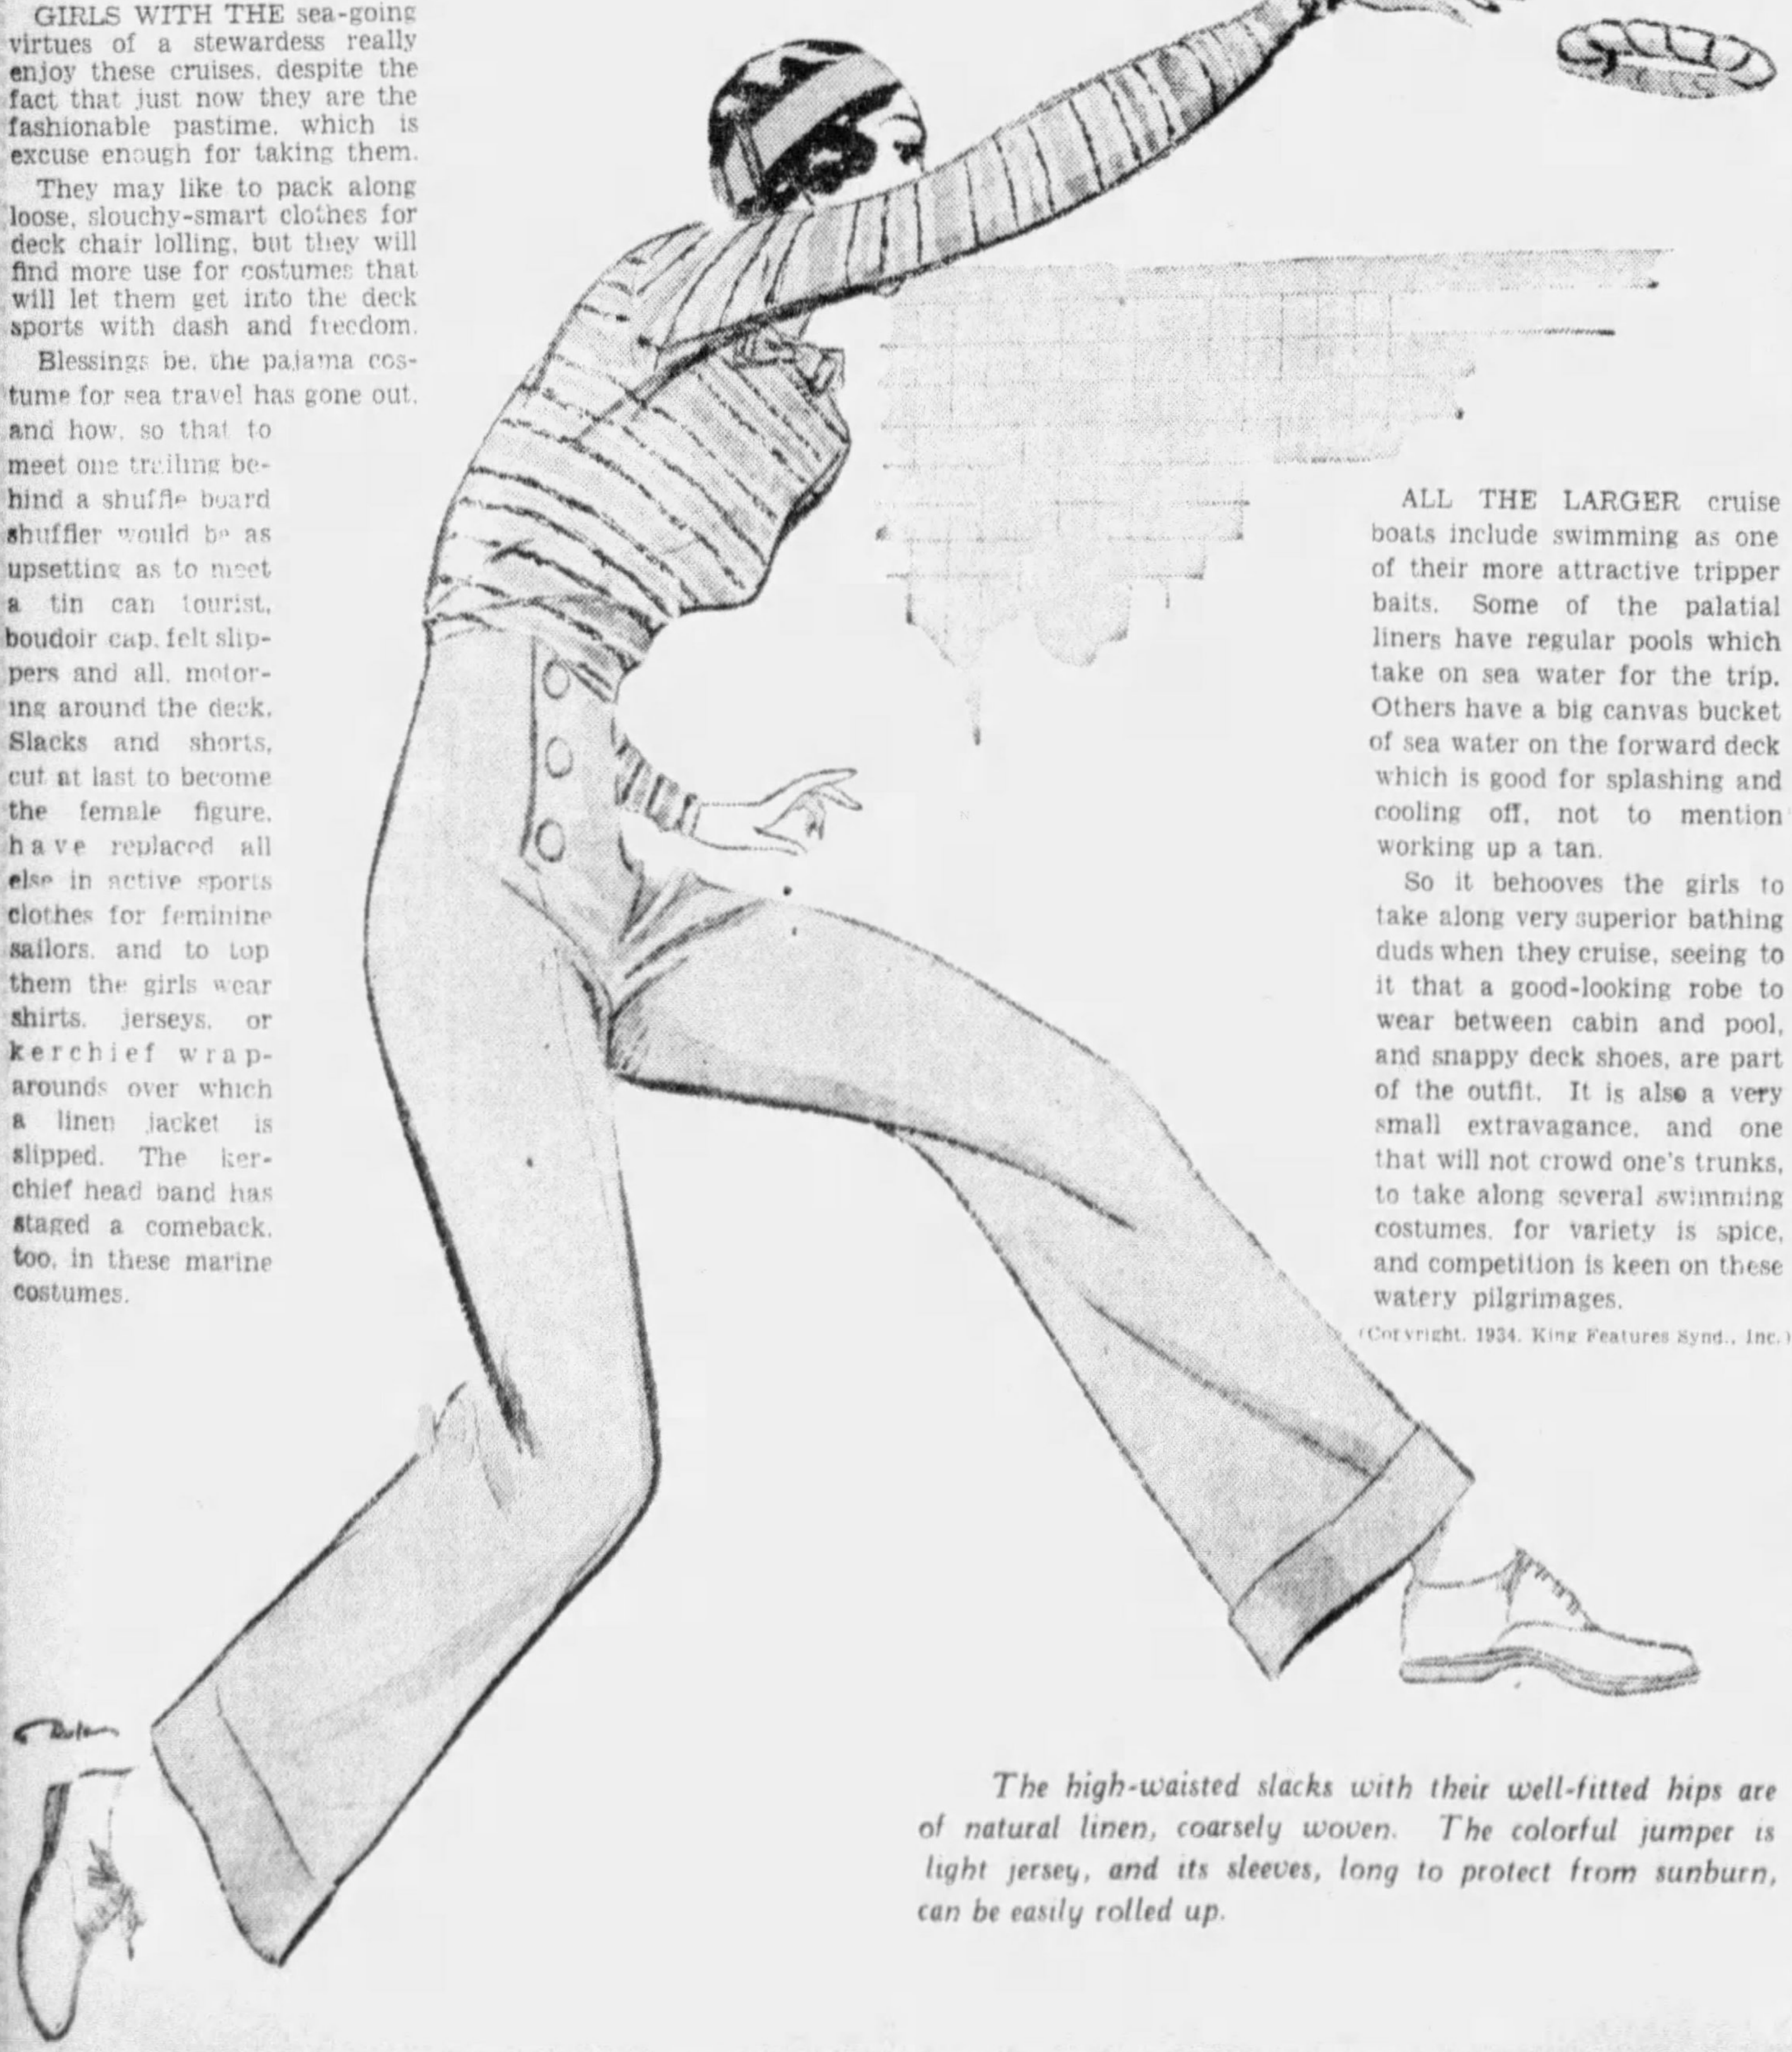
1934 ON THE SPANISH MAIN

By PRUNELLA WOOD



GIRLS WITH THE sea-going virtues of a stewardess really enjoy these cruises, despite the fact that just now they are the fashionable pastime, which is excuse enough for taking them.

They may like to pack along loose, slouchy-smart clothes for deck chair lolling, but they will find more use for costumes that will let them get into the deck sports with dash and freedom.

Blessings be, the pajama costume for sea travel has gone out, and how, so that to meet one trailing behind a shuffle board shuffler would be as upsetting as to meet a tin can tourist, boudoir cap, felt slippers and all, motoring around the deck. Slacks and shorts, cut at last to become the female figure, have replaced all else in active sports clothes for feminine sailors, and to top them the girls wear shirts, jerseys, or kerchief wraparounds over which a linen jacket is slipped. The kerchief head band has staged a comeback, too, in these marine costumes.

ALL THE LARGER cruise boats include swimming as one of their more attractive tripper baits. Some of the palatial liners have regular pools which take on sea water for the trip. Others have a big canvas bucket of sea water on the forward deck which is good for splashing and cooling off, not to mention working up a tan.

So it behooves the girls to take along very superior bathing duds when they cruise, seeing to it that a good-looking robe to wear between cabin and pool, and snappy deck shoes, are part of the outfit. It is also a very small extravagance, and one that will not crowd one's trunks, to take along several swimming costumes, for variety is spice, and competition is keen on these watery pilgrimages.

The high-waisted slacks with their well-fitted hips are of natural linen, coarsely woven. The colorful jumper is light jersey, and its sleeves, long to protect from sunburn, can be easily rolled up.

"Patent leather hair" may be a thing of the past, but a certain amount of "sheen" is almost a necessity if your coiffure is to be all it should be. So, page the brilliantine! . . .

And this new form which comes in the stick is a handy thing to have around when you're doing your wig. Easily dabbed on . . . does not become "gooey" . . . can't be upset in the grand old manner of brilliantine bottles . . . and is neat to keep in its black enamel metal tube. 50c.

"Picture our pop-eyed amazement to find that the town's most high-and-mighty dress shop is planning to offer frocks for $17.50 this Spring! A shop to which the prices of $25 and $35 are generally just so much "chicken-feed!"

What's more . . . they already have some of the forerunners of the advance season hanging in their cupboards—knockouts, every one of them! We loved the turquoise crepe with tortoise clip at the slightly-cowl throat . . . The elbow sleeves with double ruching rushing down their length . . . and the swept-back appearance behind the shoulder which is all the rage nowadays. Also, some better prints which can be worn right away. Decidedly, these merit the attention of you with champagne - tastes - and - beer-pocketbooks!

* * *

Going sensible for the moment . . . . let us contemplate the soles of our shoes! (Apt to be a rather discouraging job, eh, what?) Anyway . . . . we know THE place to take your more or less worn-out shoes and have their soles and heels rejuvenated to the point of being like new!

And better still . . . . this is no common shoe repairing. Because, if you are a lop-sided creature (and most of us are) they will make one side of the sole slightly thicker than the other to insure better balance and longer wear . . . . as well as many other types of what might really be called "corrective" work. Oh, yes . . . . they're GOOD at this shop. $1 for the sole and heel job.

* * *

Sleeping Beauty will have nothing on you when you curl up in bed wearing one of these perfectly sweet nighties which are going to cost you only $1.95 for a short time! Dainty little tearose silk ones . . . . with lavish smears of lace to make their fronts more alluring . . . . little bits of fullness the better to enhance your maidenly "boosum" . . . . V-necks . . . . round necks . . . wisps of baby sleeves at the shoulder and ribbon ties round the waist! Sizes 15-16-17!

* * *

Bombay Ducks (too bad Joe Penner didn't know about these!) . . . they're really FISH! Don't know why they're called "ducks" . . . but they are. Just put them in the oven and heat until crisp. Marvelous with cocktails! 75c the box.

* * *

Never mind what's behind that curtain! The important thing is that the curtain be attractive! Reduced from $2.98 to $1.98, they're sweet tiebacks of points d'esprit, colored figured marquisette, woven color figured voile in blue, orchid, green, orange and peach.

And there are some Priscilla styles, too. These of cream or ecru marquisette with polka dots or figured. Some in the fashionable suntan shade as well. Priced as high as $1.69 before they tumbled to their present 98c. What a buy!

* * *

And just to put an edge to your appetite . . . we suggest you try the new biscuits which we've found. Cheesy ones looking like little twigs . . . or stars . . . or just nubbins! Little flakes of puff paste held together by a yummy mouthful of lemon cream! Rounds of butteriness! Oblongs of crunchy crust unlike anything you ever tasted in the cracker line! 25c and 35c the box.

Senator Parkinson May Run for Congress

By MARK SHIELDS

Mr. Shields

Out of the Washington-Greene County political fog—a fog which envelops practically every section of the state, comes a story that Senator Chauncey W. Parkinson may become a candidate for the Republican congressional nomination at the May primary. Senator Parkinson has served both in the House and upper branch of the Legislature, and some of his friends would like to see him expand his political horizon.

In the Legislature he has been a regular, so much so that should he again become a candidate for the Senate some of his fidelity to the leadership of State Chairman Edward Martin might rise to dog him. His term expires this year, and he has been represented as intending to seek re-election, despite the acknowledged handicaps in his way.

Now comes the proposed shift of attack. It is contended that as a candidate for the national Legislature Senator Parkinson would not be faced with the same issues which would meet him in a state battle. The district now is represented by a Democrat, Charles I. Faddis, who achieved an upset in the elections of 1932, and who undoubtedly will attempt to retain his place.

Heretofore Senator Parkinson has always done well in the vote line in Greene County, though it is Democratic. His friends explain that if he could retain his past strength there, and find a return to Republican normalcy in Washington County, he would have a chance for Washington.

Should he determine to try again for Harrisburg Parkinson would have two difficult hurdles to take, as he would find a primary opponent in D. Glenn Moore, former member of the Legislature. Mr. Moore was the victim of a surprise defeat in 1932 when he ran for the House, and will attempt a comeback toward the Senate. It is assumed he will have the backing of the progressive Republicans of the district, and as a candidate the Democrats could not raise against him the charge that he had opposed social legislation, as he was the Pinchot floor leader in the House in the session of 1931.

* * *

Mansfield's District May Furnish Hot Fight

Another Washington story, which is not entitled to so much weight, is that Gen. Martin is thinking about running for Congress. I am inclined to believe that yarn is given currency by some people who do not care for the state chairman. They know he has gubernatorial ambitions. Now to spread the impression that he was considering a Congressional race would be to depict him as deflated for the greater job.

If the General does not become Governor—and he probably will not—then he may be in line for command of the National Guard, a position which he would like.

The Senatorial district now represented by Senator William D. Mansfield may furnish one of the stiffest Republican primary fights—as well as general election contests—in Allegheny County. Mr. Mansfield, who also is a County Commissioner, has said he would not again run for the Senate. It is no secret that he would like to be succeeded by James H. McClure, a member of the House and an assistant county solicitor.

Artemas C. Leslie, son of the late M. G. Leslie, has also been mentioned as an entry, and now there is some talk of Alexander P. Lindsay. Both Mr. Leslie and Mr. Lindsay live in the Pittsburgh section on this large district' while Mr. McClure comes from Glassport. The borough and township divisions might be resentful, and so might McKeesport, where Mr. Mansfield lives.

Yet in his contest for Common Pleas Court in previous campaigns Mr. Lindsay has done well in these sections. He has been a political liberal, has concerned himself with the fight for clean elections, and was one of those chiefly instrumental in helping pass the Pittsburgh permanent registration bill.

* * *

Fagan May Oppose Senator Armstrong

Mr. Lindsay is known to be giving the matter some consideration.

On the Democratic side it is expected that James L. Quinn will feel out the senatorial ground. He is a resident of Braddock, and is finishing his first term in the House at Harrisburg, having been a beneficiary of the Roosevelt sweep in the Tenth Legislative district. This is the same district in which Mr. McClure as a Republican won one of its four seats.

P. T. Fagan, miners' union official, is reported planning to battle Senator Joseph G. Armstrong. The latter intends to seek both the Republican and Democratic nominations, but Fagan, a delegate to the last national convention, and a Roosevelt man, probably will center on his party nomination.

In that district a labor candidacy would be a formidable affair, though on the question of old age pensions, for example, Mr. Armstrong's record was satisfactory to backers of the proposal.

So far in the district north of the Allegheny and outside the city of Pittsburgh there have been few overt moves. Senator Herman Brandt intends to run again, and John W. Cost, a young attorney, is ready to oppose him. Representative William A. Walker has intimated he would seek re-election to the House.

Senator Morris Einstein is certain to run again in the senatorial district comprised by the city wards north of the river. Former Representative William F. Stadtlander has talked of candidacy for the Upper House, but has said nothing definite.

GOLFER GOES TO COURT TO REGAIN SON

Judge and Counsel In Clash Over Jurisdiction

Court proceedings entered by Martin Boschert, of 1239 North Highland avenue, well-known golfer, to gain possession of his son, Martin Boschert, 8, of Johnstown, met with opposition here yesterday.

The child is making his home with his step-grandfather, James M. Cook, Jr., of Johnstown, and goes by the name of James Cook and believes that Cook is his father. The boy's mother, Mrs. Ruth G. Boschert, through her lawyers, Stephen Stone, of Pittsburgh, and Morton Meyers, of Johnstown, questioned the court's jurisdiction in interfering with the custody of the child.

MOTHER AWARDED CHILD

April 5, 1926, it appeared from the record, the late Judge John D. Shafer awarded the child to its mother, on habeas corpus proceedings "until further orders of this court." Both Judges Harry H. Rowand and W. H. McNaugher took the position that the Allegheny County Court has jurisdiction, while counsel for Mrs. Boschert held otherwise.

When Mrs. Boschert was awarded custody, the child was given over to its grandparents. Mrs. Boschert's mother, Mrs. Cook, died recently and, according to Mrs. Boschert's claims, Boschert agreed to let her stepfather have the child, which Boschert disputes.

HEARING SCHEDULED

The court decided, however, to hear argument on the contention of Mrs. Boschert's counsel regarding the question of jurisdiction. A hearing will be held later on that subject. If the question is decided against Mrs. Boschert it is desired to take an appeal to the Superior Court. Cook did not enter an appearance in the case yesterday.

Judges Rowand and McNaugher at first resented the absence of Mrs. Boschert in court and spoke of contempt proceedings. It was explained later she was advised not to come, because of jurisdictional grounds. Attorney Kivie Wolfe represents Boschert.

Boschert recently filed a libel in divorce against his wife.

MUSEUM HERE GETS RELICS OF HOLY LAND

Discoveries Support Stories of Genesis; Citadel Found

BALTIMORE, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Archeological discoveries that corroborate stories of ancient civilizations as told in the Book of Genesis were reported by Dr. William F. Albright, professor of Semitics at Johns Hopkins University, on his return this week from Jerusalem.

Many of the ancient objects he brought back he has donated to the museum of the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary.

At Jerusalem, Dr. Albright excavated the citadel of the Israelite King Saul. The age of this massive stone structure was placed at 1000 B. C. It had been damaged by fire and was in a poor state of preservation, the walls crumbling in.

At Ader, in the land of Moab, however, Dr. Albright made his most significant discovery and in a most unusual way.

Inhabitants told of "seeing long sparks of fire" leap out of the ground at a certain spot. Dr. Albright began excavations there and unearthed a tomb that dates from before 2,000 B. C. This, the remains of an Israelite temple, antedates the Hebrew patriarchs.

The story of the Book of Genesis, describing a civilization in Moab beyond the River Jordan, had not been accepted, Dr. Albright said, although it was believed primitive Nomadic tribes may have inhabited the region. Dr. Albright said:

> "This work in the eastern part of Jordan, however, proves there is a widely developed civilization with well defined settlements in Moab before and during the time of the patriarchs."

The Johns Hopkins professor also excavated at Kirjath Sepher, in South Judeah, another city prominent in Biblical history. He brought back alabaster beads, bronzes, figurations and scarabs.

The most significant thing about the excavations, Dr. Albright said, is that the findings will furnish illustrations of the beauty and details of the Bible.

Panhandlers Slug And Rob Benefactor

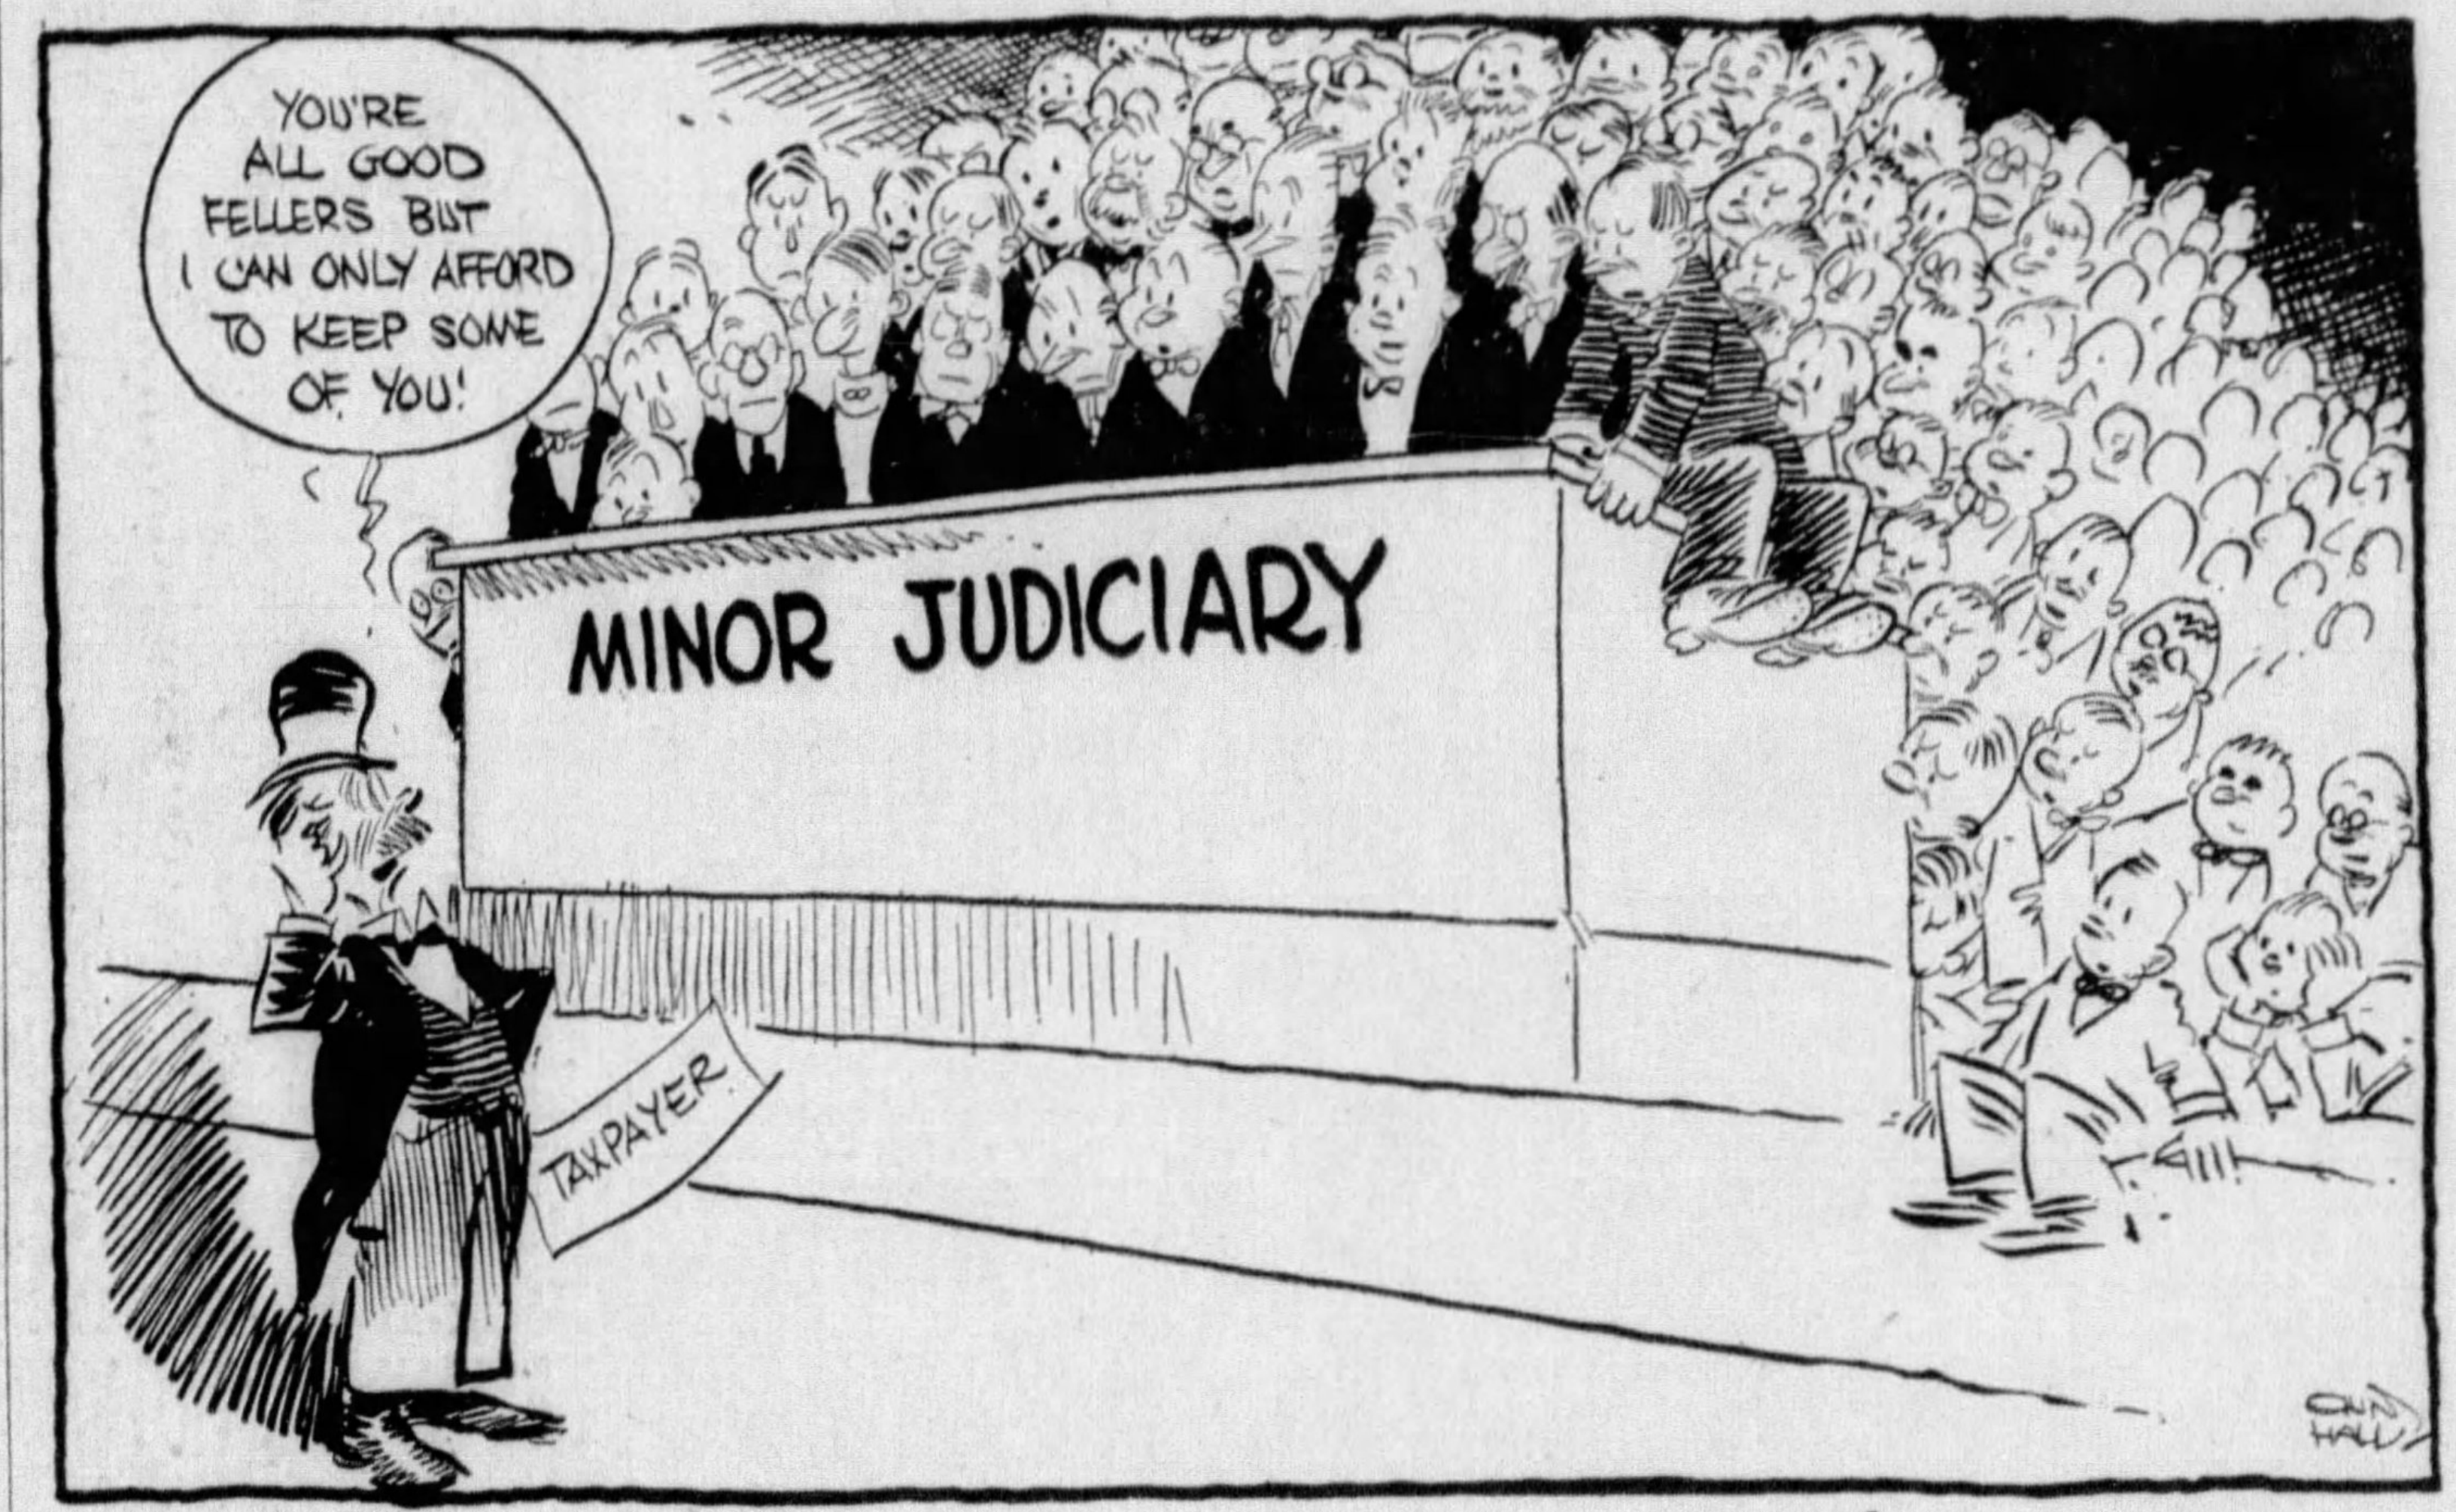
One of two men for whom he had purchased a meal slugged Tony Pirad, of 2809 Carey way, and robbed him of $30 in Liberty avenue, near Ferry street, he reported to police today.

Pirad said the attack occurred after the men had panhandled him.

Two Thugs Attack And Rob Pedestrian

Two thugs attacked Douglas Heffern, of the Roosevelt Hotel, in Wylie avenue early today and robbed him of $35, according to a police report.

Overlapping of Fees and Corruption Cited In Operation of Minor Courts in County



YOU'RE ALL GOOD FELLERS BUT I CAN ONLY AFFORD TO KEEP SOME OF YOU!
TAXPAYER
CY HALL

1,000 Constables Work Out of 300 J. P. Offices

Declaring the Justice of the Peace-Constable system, which lives on fees, to be a waste of money and an unnecessary evil in Pennsylvania, Attorney Edward O. Tabor, member of the executive committee of the Civic Club of Allegheny County, has advocated abolishment of the system and its replacement by a small debtors' court.

Many other prominent residents of the county agree with Tabor in his efforts to eliminate the squires and constables. County Commissioner C. C. McGovern is one of those who have long advocated abolition of such a system.

Time after time it has been pointed out that no matter what evidence is presented before a member of the so-called minor judiciary, it is a rare case when a decision is reached in favor of the defendant. The initials J. P. are commonly referred to as "Justice for the Plaintiff."

MORGENTHAU'S STAND

> "Justices of the Peace and constables were useful in the eighteenth century. If a crime had been committed, a county sheriff 30 or 40 miles away or the state police 100 miles distance, could not have been notified in time to be of service. Today a state trooper can reach the scene almost as quickly as the local constable.
>
> "The development of the government has been a patchwork affair. We have decided that the sheriff and constable could not cope with modern criminals with their present means of transportation. We added the state police, but we did not abolish the constable or the sheriff. So, today, in most states, we have constables, sheriffs and state troopers, all of which overlap in their duties."

300 ALDERMEN HERE

In Allegheny County there are nearly 300 aldermen and squires, one in each ward in the four cities and two in every borough and township. There are about three constables for every alderman or Justice of the Peace, which with deputies, bring the number of constables close to 1,000.

These 1,300 members of the Minor Judiciary live entirely upon fees and costs derived from litigants or from the county. In 1931 the county spent nearly $5,000 just to have the constables parade before a Criminal Court judge and tell him that their baliwick was free from crime. This "Blind Men's Parade" cost a similar amount in 1932. Up until last year it was compulsory for the constable to make his return. Now it is optional, but many still take advantage of the chance to collect their millage, which usually runs anywhere from $2.50 to $6 per man.

'PHANTOM' CASES

The minor judiciary system has come in for much criticism during the last two years through certain members of the organization who have fallen afoul of the law because of alleged "phantom" cases appearing on their dockets. At the District Attorney's office it was said that no less than 15 "squires" and constables have been convicted or pleaded guilty to having "manufactured" cases to collect costs from the county.

When cases are discharged by the squire, he and his constables place the discharged costs on the county and collect for their services. In 1931 a total of $166,790.25 was collected for discharged cases and in 1932 the total was $167,789.33. For 1933, however, it will be much lower, the investigation of the County Commissioners halting at least for a time the practice of building up "phantom" cases, and also that the Commissioners have refused to appropriate any money to the discharged case fund for several weeks.

Tribunal for Small Debtors Favored By Leaders

CITES CORRUPTION

> "Another useless heritage from former days is our entire Justice of the Peace-Constable system which lives on fees and which therefore often indulges in excess and corruption of the rankest kind. The entire system should be abolished and in it's stead should be put a paid minor judiciary and also what is called a small debtors court such as exists in Cleveland, where lawyers would be unnecessary and where a postage stamp would be sufficient to bring the parties together for the settlement of difficulties. But here again resistance will be made by the squires and the constables and the alderman because this reform would deprive them of the dollars, and that, in their opinion is more important than the public good. No single institution in Pennsylvania has in recent years been as disgraceful as the Squire-Constable system of our Commonwealth. Its only reason for existence is political and mercenary and it ought to go."

Judge Gustav L. Schramm, recently named to the new Juvenile Court, has made an extensive study of the minor judiciary and county court. He has followed several hundred cases from the office of the squire into the county court to final disposition. His book, "Piedpoudre Courts," is a report on those cases.

SYSTEM NOT MODERN

> "The squire's system is unadapted to the trial of civil litigation in our modern industrial society. It has developed into an automatic, time delaying, fee collecting mechanism, and tends to destroy respect for the judiciary among the people.
>
> "The County Court, which was organized to offset and minimize the baleful effects of the squire's system and to provide a swift, sure, informal and inexpensive method of appeal, by being a real small claims court, has not become such a court.
>
> "Conditions can be improved and an admirable system established which will work adequately, harmoniously and quickly for the relief of the small claimant and thus meet this legal, social and humanitarian need."

(Sunday the Sun-Telegraph will publish an article on economies which could be brought about through use of photographic equipment in recorder of deeds office.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 19.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

I am still trying to stay off writing about the sixty cent dollar. It looks like the argument is pretty well taken care of without any expert aid from me.

Will Rogers

We got France scared, so the experiment has already paid for itself. Cuba kinder nosed in on the front page again with a new president, but it's getting so that's not news, so about two more presidents and they will be back with the want ads as news.

Tammany Hall had the biggest quake its had in years. A Mr. Flynn, a very able man, and friend of our President, who heretofore only had one district, has taken over the whole thing. Tammany deaths, however, are always temporary.

Yours, WILL.

CITY LEVY DROPS ON MILLAGE CHANGES

Revenue From Bonds Permits Slight Reductions

The County Commissioners have reduced the county tax by $\frac{1}{8}$ mill and the poor tax by $\frac{3}{4}$ mill.

Their action, taken yesterday, changed the county tax millage in the city from $8\frac{1}{4}$ to $8\frac{1}{8}$ mills.

Outside the city the millage was dropped from $11\frac{1}{4}$ to $10\frac{3}{8}$. This was accomplished by cutting the poor tax from 3 to $2\frac{1}{4}$ mills, subject to the approval of the Poor Board.

An estimated 73 per cent collection of taxes on real estate and personal property valuation approaching two and one-half billion dollars gave the basis for the millage fixing. A collection of slightly more than 70 per cent was made in 1933.

The three Commissioners concurred in the cuts made, after Commissioner C. C. McGovern had objected to a preliminary motion by Commissioner C. M. Barr to reduce the millage to 8 mills even.

ESTIMATED RECEIPTS

Total estimated county receipts for 1934 were over $26,000,000, while total estimated expenditures were over $25,000,000, according to County Statistician Nick Stabile.

The most important factor in making possible the millage reduction was an issue of $6,806,000 in bonds, sold this week by the Commissioners at 4 per cent interest.

Owing to the favorable sale of bonds and the higher estimated collection rate, the county has been able to absorb the whole of its deficit of one and one-half million dollars in its balanced 1934 budget.

Barr estimated that by buying some of its own bonds from the sinking fund and by the low bond interest the county had accomplished an eventual saving of $694,781.

The Commissioners also saved $775,348 in cutting budget requests.

$20,643,151 BUDGET

The actual budget figures for this year is $20,643,151. Expenditures estimated in excess include bond money and various liabilities outside of budget scope.

The county tax will be distributed as follows: General tax, $2\frac{7}{8}$ mills; road tax, $\frac{1}{4}$ mill; park tax, $\frac{1}{8}$ mill; bond interest tax, $4\frac{3}{4}$ mills; emergency sinking fund tax, $\frac{1}{8}$ mill. The biggest change is in the bond interest tax, which was $6\frac{1}{4}$ mills last year.

The $2\frac{1}{4}$ mills poor tax was made on a request for a $1,789,300 appropriation. This represented a decrease of $17,000 from last year.

Before taking action, the Commissioners heard I. Leonard Aronson, president of the Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League, make a plea for a reduction to 7 mills.

Mr. Sprague Fears Everything's Going To Be All Right

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Old boy Sprague has almost pickled himself in his own tears.

The professor sadly admits that he fears everything is going to be all right.

Seems that the gigantic, unscrupulous wolf can't do a thing to the sagacious porker who built his house of gold.

We have most of the supply stowed away in our hope chest in lavender and old lace.

If it is the root of all evil it is still fun to dynamite tree stumps.

What we cannot understand is Europe letting loose its earmarked gold. To make sure its the real McCoy we should toothmark it a little.

HUNDREDS AT HUNT ARMORY SEEKING JOBS IN THE CWA-FINANCED STATE CENSUS OF REAL (ESTATE) PROPERTY AND JOBLESS PEOPLE IN COUNTY

CWA Census Workers Take Training Here

Two days of training, with pay, began this morning for more than 1,400 CWA workers, men and women, who will make the state's real property inventory and unemployed census for Allegheny County. Classes are in Memorial Hall, in charge of Edwin A. Montague and Theodore Veenstra, of the Pitt Bureau of Business Research, special state agents.

Registration and initial instructions were given all enumerators yesterday in the Hunt Armory East End. Their training today and tomorrow will prepare them to begin work this coming week. Concerning the unemployment survey, the instructions explain:

> "There exists at the present time a critical need for comprehensive, reliable information on the unemployment situation and the extent to which this condition prevails in every family and household. Such information would constitute the most intelligent guide for directing future policies or legislation to reduce or remove unemployment."

Only those workers who pass a final examination in Alumni Hall, University of Pittsburgh, Sunday, will be permitted to begin work Monday or Tuesday.

AVIATOR LAUDS PICTURES OF WORLD WAR

Powerful, modern defense and education through such mediums as the actual, uncensored pictures of war's ravages, to be published by the Sun-Telegraph in a weekly series beginning Sunday, were lauded by Capt. Al Williams, noted aviator, in a radio address over WCAE-WJAS on the Aircaster period last night.

Capt. Williams painted in vivid wordage the horrors of the World War, and still more vividly the stark destruction of the next war —a war of the air. He said:

"The trenches of the next war will not exist. Instead of a slimy little furrow in the earth, the battlefields will be any town, city or hamlet the enemy can reach.

"The next war will start on the ground, for the same reasons that started all the other wars, by the same types of people—but it will be fought, and it will be settled, in the air. There will be no noncombatants; the hit-and-run game of air warfare does not permit the selection of soldiers from civilians—men, women and children."

DECISIVE WARFARE

Conclusive and decisive, such air warfare will never permit drawn battles, and with the enemy only a few minutes behind, retreat will be impossible, the pilot said. He continued:

"The attacking airman with his poison gas bombs and loads of high explosives will bring decision in a matter of hours. The decision will come before his supply of gasoline is exhausted —let his bombs fall where they may.

"A picture of a man lying on a battlefield of the late World War can never be as horrible as our schools, nurseries and homes—shattered and smoking and reeking with the poison fumes launched from the air. Your mothers, wives and your little children living on a battlefield—that's what will happen when man turns to the air for his next campaign."

We cannot argue war-like nations out of existence, no amount of hoping or praying can keep them peaceful, and ramblings of "impractical pacifists" accomplished nothing, Capt. Williams pointed out. He added:

NO MIDDLE COURSE

"Between the ramblings of impractical pacifists who tell us that men are no longer as they were and the thunderous ravings of the war lords inspiring us on to greater conflicts, it is hard indeed for us to find and hold a sane middle course.

"A sane human being wants war no more than he is ready to invite tuberculosis, but if we face facts, we quickly realize that we must take preventative measures against both forms of disease.

"For tuberculosis there are preventive steps to be taken and we know the cure. For war there is no cure, but there are precautions.

"There are nations today who have been led astray and taught to believe that it is by force of arms that their destiny shall be achieved. There are still other nations dreaming of avoiding war by more decent, sensible means. But any nation which is armed for war, whose dreams can only be accomplished by destroying and killing other people, are beyond and below any appeal.

"The only way to keep people away from us who desire to steal what is ours is to maintain a reasonable national police—and you and I call that police the Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps."

PREVENTATIVE MEASURES

There are only two preventative measures for the next war, according to the flier, who himself served throughout the World War in the cockpit of a war plane. They are maintenance of a sufficiently powerful, modern army of defense and education of the world to the terrible consequences of war. He condemned war as a psychological disease and a declaration of war as an "indictment of the intelligence of any age." He concluded:

"We only understand war when we view the remains of what once were men, women and children, mangled and gruesomely spattered over the landscape."

NOTABLE RECORD

Capt. Williams for eight years held the American speed record for airplanes, and until 1930, when he resigned, he specialized in high speed research for the United States Navy. He once deliberately flew a plane to complete destruction, without a parachute, to obtain valuable information for the Navy, and was cited and awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for having undergone risk of his life many times "above and beyond the call of duty, for the benefit of both the personnel and material of the service."

The Sun-Telegraph's picture series lauded by Capt. Williams are Laurence (What Price Glory) Stallings' photographic story of the World War. They will be followed in subsequent issues by still more graphic uncensored pictures from Floyd Gibbons' book on the war.

JUNIOR PATROL

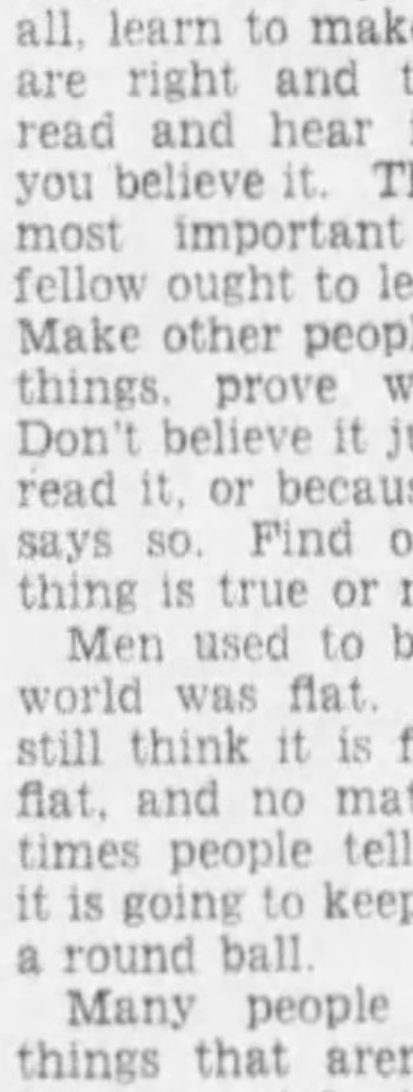
And especially we want to hear from you if you are doing things to help others. Say, did you ever stop to think that one of the best ways to help others is to help yourself?



Your teachers, in school, can't make you learn if you don't take an interest. You have to learn things all by yourself—nobody else can do it for you. But the quicker and the better you do things for yourself, the more you help others because then they don't have to work so hard to teach you.

When you ask questions, ask questions that will do you good when they are answered. Make them sensible questions. Most of all, learn to make sure that you are right and that what you read and hear is right before you believe it. That's one of the most important things every fellow ought to learn right away. Make other people, who tell you things, prove what they say. Don't believe it just because you read it, or because your teacher says so. Find out why everything is true or not true.

Men used to believe that the world was flat. Lots of people still think it is flat, but it isn't flat, and no matter how many times people tell you it is flat, it is going to keep right on being a round ball.

Many people believe many things that aren't true at all. Every smart Junior Patrol member will find out for himself what is right and what is wrong.

Now here is a letter from Capt.-elect Melvin Goldburg, of 727 Broad avenue, Belle Vernon. He sends two more pledges for boys who want to join his patrol.

And now here is another letter from Kenneth Miller, of 713 Hastings street, Pittsburgh. He sends the names of 10 of his friends, who want to be members of his Junior Patrol club, but he doesn't send any pledges for them. Please send your pledges right away, Kenneth, or else copies of the pledges, so that we can send you a captain's black and orange armband.

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to h[illegible]dren less fortunate than I am.
I promise to do my [illegible]st to make my parents proud of me.
I promise to watch carefully when crossing streets and to aid other children in keeping out of danger.
I promise to study hard and do errands willingly.
I promise to be a 100% Junior Patrol member.

Date of Birth .... Address ....
School ....

Address this pledge to the JUNIOR PATROL, Sun Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. Upon its receipt you will be registered as a member of the JUNIOR PATROL and will be forwarded a membership card and an official emblem.

AUTO SHOW SET FOR OPENING

Thrills of the speed track, highlights of automobile history and outstanding features of 1934 cars will be described by Ralph De Palma, world famous racing driver, in hourly talks at the Pittsburgh Auto Show, which will be held for a week at Motor Square Garden, beginning tomorrow afternoon.

A spectator-operated display showing the operation of "PX" and "traffic actuated" lights will be included in an educational exhibit by the Better Traffic Committee and the Bureau of Traffic Planning. Attendants will answer all questions concerning city traffic laws, and receive complaints and suggestions.

Numerous moving pictures of an educational nature will be shown.

Soldier Accused In Hospital Killing

DENVER, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A first degree murder charge was filed at Brighton yesterday against Thomas M. Shields, soldier stationed at Fitzsimons Army Hospital, in connection with the death of William W. White, 42, a patient.

Sheriff Lee Templeton said evidence indicated White had been beaten and his body thrown into a septic tank. The Sheriff said White's wallet was found on Shields, who said White had given it to him for safe-keeping.

Youth Shot as Thief Dies of Head Wound

Edward Burns, alias Demko, 19, of 117 Saginaw street, who was shot through the head December 31 when, police say, he attempted to loot the confectionery of Oscar Udman, 26, of 205 Tabor street, died yesterday in South Side Hospital, the Coroner's office reported.

Mrs. Roosevelt Welcomed by Dog 'Hoover'

ORANGE, Va., Jan. 19.—(Universal)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is fond of dogs, and the fact that one may be named "Hoover" doesn't make any difference to her

This was disclosed here when an incident that took place Tuesday afternoon was related.

Mrs. Roosevelt sought to pay a brief incognito visit to this little Virginia town. She went to a tea room for luncheon, and that's where she met "Hoover."

When Mrs. Roosevelt and her companion sat down, the dog a prize Boston bull, jumped into Mrs. Roosevelt's lap. The tea-room prop[illegible]r called out.

"Come here, Hoover."

Mrs. Roosevelt took in the situation in an instant and put one hand over her face, as if to hide a smile.

Then she patted the dog.

NO OCCUPATION NECESSARY ON PERSONAL TAX

Assessors assigned to collection of personal property statements are not empowered to demand that citizens name their occupations, T. Ralph Barr, head of the Personal Property Division of the County Tax Board, said today.

Following complaints that assessors had insisted on statements of occupation, Barr said they would be instructed to confine their inquiries to information asked on the personal property blanks. He said he had issued no order to list occupation, but suggested:

"In their enthusiasm, some assessors may have inquired into a citizen's employment to make a recheck on the former poll tax information."

Barr repeated his request that persons making out personal property blanks fill out section eight, under which interest-bearing money in banks is listed.

Although a recent action of Legislature exempted such money from the four mills personal property tax, the validity of the act is being questioned in the courts. No assessment will be made against such money, Barr said, unless decision is rendered that the act is unconstitutional.

A return on such money is asked to save a complete reassessment should the illegality of the act be established.

SCHOOL TO OPEN FOR MOTHERS

Thirty-six Aspinwall mothers are going to school to learn about school work, in one of the first adult education programs launched in Pennsylvania under the Federal Emergency Educational program.

F. D. Kebock, superintendent of the borough's public schools, today announced that Mrs. Leila H. Lytle has been appointed instructor of the group, which will study child psychology and the problems associated with pre-school, high school and grade school children. The project was organized Monday in the Center Avenue Grade School and is open to all mothers in the borough and vicinity, according to Kebock.

Meetings are to be held at 1 p. h. Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

The project is being assisted by the Aspinwall Parent-Teacher Association, of which Mrs. T. H. Swartzlander is secretary.

AIR MAIL QUIZ SCANS TAX DATA

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Income tax returns made by former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown and former Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover, covering a number of years, today were in the hands of the Senate committee investigating air mail contracts.

Brown and Glover are central figures in a steadily growing scandal involving charges of favoritism and graft and admitted destruction of records dealing with air mail awards made during the Hoover regime.

The committee sought to obtain itemized lists of securities mentioned in the income tax returns of the two men.

Glover faced the prospect of a severe grilling, probably next Tuesday. Senator Black (Dem.), of Alabama, committee chairman, planned to question him concerning the bonfire at which four sacks of air mail correspondence were destroyed.

With hearings recessed until Tuesday, the committee delved into new episodes in the spectacular moves by which four huge companies, apparently interlocking, grabbed nearly all the air mail subsidies.

Roper's Son May Quit Democratic Post

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Refusal of Secretary of Commerce Roper to revoke his latest reorganization order condemning to indefinite furlough without pay another group of veteran experts of the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce has thus far fallen on deaf ears in both houses of Congress.

The report was current, however, at national Democratic headquarters, that the resignation of Richard F. Roper, son of the Secretary of Commerce, as executive secretary, would soon be forthcoming.

Jobless in Duquesne Lose Water Supply

A tenement section in Duquesne, 14 homes in which 54 persons reside, is without water today due to action of Duquesne Council. The group of houses and stores, bounded by Superior street, River street and Peach way, is occupied mostly by unemployed tenants who have been unable to pay rent for some time.

The owner of the buildings had been repeatedly warned of the action that would be taken by the city-owned water company if his bill was not paid.

Family in Florida, Residence Robbed

The residence of R. E. Clepper, 3605 Shadeland avenue, was ransacked last night, according to a police report.

The entry was discovered by a domestic who is taking care of the home while the Cleppers are in Florida. The amount of the loot is not known.

Changes Mind Four Times, Finally Enters Plea

After court attaches said she had changed her mind four times, Mrs. Joseph F. Fernandez, 35, of the Roosevelt Hotel, pleaded guilty in Criminal Court to charges of passing bad checks on downtown stores, and was sentenced, late yesterday, to serve three to six months in jail.

She had said she would plead guilty, but changed her mind and a jury was drawn to try her. Again, before the trial started, she said she would enter a plea, but after the jury had been sent back to the panel, she again changed her mind. The jury was recalled, and when attorneys again prepared to open the trial, she changed her mind again and put in the plea. The alleged bad checks totaled $400.

POWER BATTLE IN HIGH COURT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The Appalachian Electric Power Company, owning land along New River, in Pulaski County, Va., today asked the Supreme Court to permit it to test out its rights to construct a hydroelectric power plant without first obtaining a license from the Federal Power Commission.

Filed by Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, the petition for review was aimed to test the authority of the commission over hydroelectric power plants on non-navigable waters.

It contends that the federal commission, in prohibiting construction work until the company consented to conditions imposed in the license offered by the commission, had cast a cloud on its investment of approximately $1,500,000 in the acquisition of lands, rights and explorations, and had prevented it from raising approximately $8,000,000 more to finance the contemplated water power development.

The commission has taken the position that while the interests of interstate or foreign commerce would not be affected by the proposed construction, the company before beginning work should obtain a federal license.

Ewers' Pastorate Extended by Flock

As an expression of esteem, trustees and congregation of the East End Christian Church have extended the pastorate of the Rev. Dr. Ewers for seven additional years. The extension was made in recognition of Dr. Ewers' twenty-fifth year as pastor of the church. Since his pastorate had two years to run, the extension will continue his work at the church for a total of nine years.

NUDISTS ORDER EASTER TOGAS, VANISH

By DIXIE TIGHE
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Did these nudists get cold feet?

The Spartan Society, a nudist organization, has disappeared. The members had just ordered some lovely togas to wear in the Easter fashion parade and now their lonesome member, Arthur Lockwood, cannot find the society to tell them that togas are no-go with the tailor's wife, Mrs. Ida Weinberg.

The tailor, Joseph Weinberg, sent back the Spartan's check for $145 and explained that his wife thinks it unfitting of a tailor to cater to nudists. Well dressed people are the clientele Mrs. Weinberg desires to see in her husband's shop—not nudists. So, the nudists will have to go someplace else for the togas. But where are the nudists?

Meanwhile, another tailor who believes that business is business has volunteered to undertake the making of the nudist's Easter finery. But poor Mr. Lockwood has phoned and gone around to the Spartan Society's office without avail. There is no answer. He thinks it is too bad, too, because the Spartans seemed so brave in their concession to the convention of clothes — and coupled it so prettily with the Greek ideals, he thought.

2 JOBLESS HELD AFTER BATTLE ON RELIEF

Two members of the North Side Unemployed Council were arrested today after a crowd had attempted to rush the doors of Emergency Relief Headquarters on the North Side.

The men, alleged to have incited the trouble, gave their names as Louis Bannish, 19, of 1309 Bidwell street, and James Kokezas, 40, of 1106 Penn avenue. They were charged with disorderly conduct.

The disturbance started after five representatives of the Unemployed Council had been admitted to the welfare office to confer with Mrs. Clara Woodruff, director of the North Side branch.

Presenting a list of 86 relief cases which they said had been neglected, the committee demanded immediate attention for them.

George P. Mills, director of emergency relief in the county, agreed yesterday to such conferences of the unemployed committees with relief supervisors. He said prompt orders for food will be given to persons in dire need.

Philip Frankfeld, representing the unemployed, had protested to Mills a ruling prohibiting the group from appearing before district supervisors. He also objected to a reduction in food orders.

The unemployed council will meet tomorrow to determine whether the present arrangement is satisfactory, and the emergency board is to consider it at a meeting Monday.

YOUTHS ADMIT HOLDUP PLANS

Three of four youths arrested by city detectives as robbery suspects faced arraignment in Morals Court today and the fourth, only 15, was held at the Juvenile Detention Home.

The trio facing a hearing gave their names as Paul Regatuso, 22, and Angelo Regatuso, 17, both of 752 Reedsdale street, and Rudy Kantner, 21, of 121 Montgomery avenue. Detectives said the boys admitted they were planning to hold up a bakery in Industry street and an East Ohio street restaurant. They also admitted, the detectives asserted, hurling a brick through the window of Kappel's jewelery store, Federal street, last month and stealing several watches.

The boys were arrested at their homes yesterday. Because of his age the Sun-Telegraph will not publish the fourth boy's name.

More than 50 women belong to the Pittsburgh organization, of which Mrs. Samuel Wesoky, of 5821 Callowhill street, is president. Some 200 persons are expected to attend the frolic. Miss Frieda Pratt, 734 Lorenz avenue, is a member of the committee.

Man's Death Reveals Theft of Charter

A defunct Lawrenceville club charter and the two men who are alleged to have stolen it were being sought today by police. The theft was uncovered with the death of George S. Duvall, 43, of 801 South Millvale avenue.

Duvall died of acute alcoholism and heart failure, according to a morgue report. He was found in a room at 6 Shomin way. John C. English, of Dormont, who said he employed Duvall as an investigator, told morgue attaches an overcoat in which the charter was pocketed was missing.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

MARY AVOIDS TALK OF DOUG

International News Service.

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—Mary Pickford yesterday urged plenty of hard work to forget unhappiness, and talked on every subject except her separation from Douglas Fairbanks and rumors of a romance with Buddy Rogers. The actress smiled:

"Hard work is the best thing in life. It doesn't give one a chance to think about unhappy or unpleasant things."

"America's sweetheart" talked of her piano lessons, outlined plans for a bicycle trip through Ireland in June, told of her autobiographical novel and revealed she was seeking a stage vehicle in which she might appear for a limited time.

But of Fairbanks or Rogers she would not speak. She said:

"I am not discussing such things now. My mind is not on it. There are so many other interesting things to discuss. I don't like to talk about my personal affairs."

NEEDY PARENTS PRAISED

Tribute to parents who maintained their homes in the face of unemployment and inadequate relief was paid by Susan M. Boyd, executive secretary of the Children's Service Bureau, in her annual report.

Although exploitation of children by sending them into the streets to beg or sell increased, with a total of 42 cases recorded for the year, there were fewer abandoned children than welfare workers anticipated, Miss Boyd said.

2 Held for Court After Pistol Duel

Joseph Necerrelli, 37, of Bridgeville, and Salvatore Guerino, 42, of Marion street, who staged a pistol duel in Forbes street, Soho, in November, were held for court today.

They were both wounded in the duel, which was caused by an argument over ownership of a revolver, the police testified.

School Girl Sets Attendance Mark

Mildred Paul, a 17-year-old Peabody High School student, has been neither absent nor tardy from school for the last nine years. She has held this unusual record during four years in high school and five years in Garfield school.

Miss Paul

She has already received nine state certificates or seals, and has not been absent or tardy this year.

Mildred lives at 543 Hastings street, nearly two miles from the school, to and from which she walks every day.

BUREAU OF FIRE CUTS OPPOSED

Opposition to further cuts in personnel or operating expenses of the Pittsburgh Bureau of Fire, and support of the Perry Highway Association's plea for reconstruction of the Perry highway between Perrysville and Wexford was expressed by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

Stork Visits Home Of County Detective

The smokes are on John Duderstadt, county detective, of 1501 Evergreen road, Millvale, today. For it's a boy—the sixth child in the family. Both the baby and Mrs. Stella Duderstadt, the mother, are doing well.

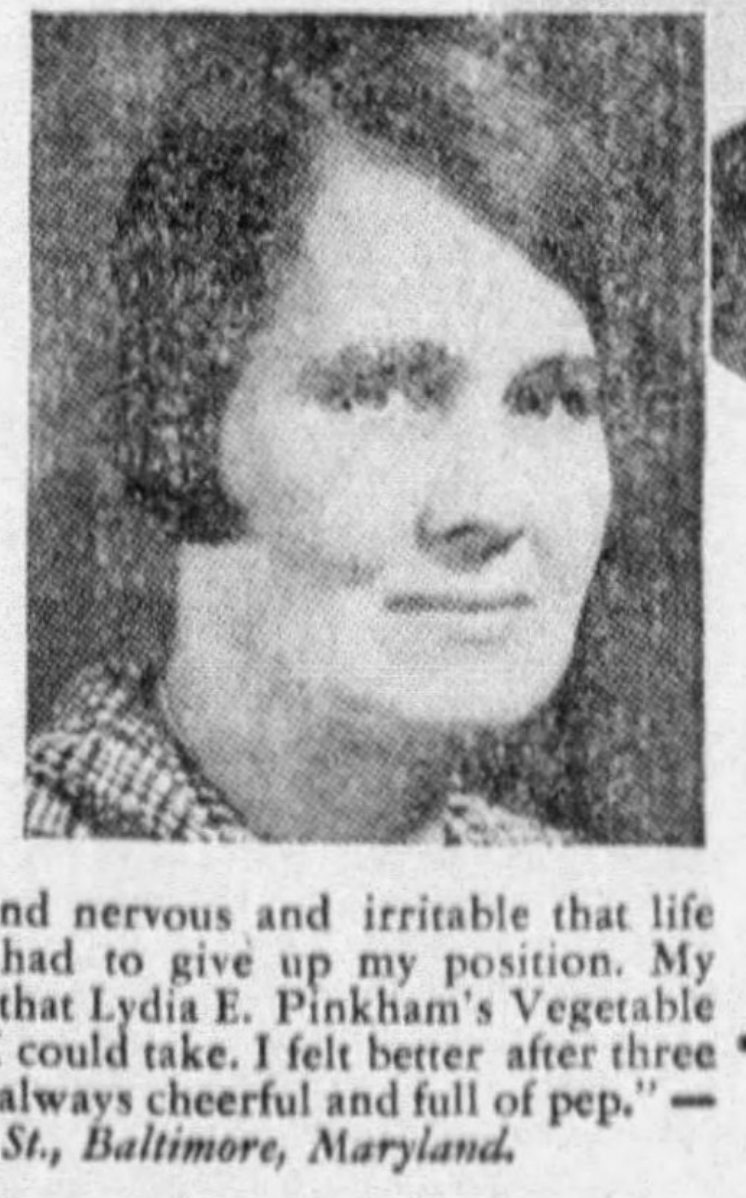
What a Good Medicine This Is

Right in your own neighborhood there must be a woman who has been benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Let her tell you how good it is before and after childbirth, at the Change, or whenever you are nervous and rundown.



"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me wonderfully. I recommend it for pregnancy." — Mrs. Gilbert P. Mynatt, Brookvale, Colorado.

"I had Change of Life and all that goes with it. Thanks to your Vegetable Compound I am pulling through fine. My daughter takes it, too." — Mrs. George Mentges, Route #2, Box 169, Sidney, Ohio.

A medicine which has the written endorsement of more than 700,000 women must be good. Let it help you, too.

"I was so weak and tired and nervous and irritable that life became almost unbearable. I had to give up my position. My friends and neighbors told me that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the best thing I could take. I felt better after three bottles so I kept on. Now I am always cheerful and full of pep." — Anna Clark, 910 South Potomac St., Baltimore, Maryland.

"I Am Like My Old Self"

"I work in the rubber shops. I got all rundown and tired out with no appetite. People told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. One bottle eliminated that awful tired feeling. My husband says I am like my old self." — Mrs. Barbara Spears, 54 Frances Avenue, Akron, Ohio.

Jungle Movie Filmed With Sound

"Devil Tiger," a film made in the jungles of Asia by Clyde E. Elliott, with Marion Burns, Kane Richmond and Harry Woods, is said to be the first sound feature shot in a natural jungle. A crew of 150 natives were used, including Malays, Chinese, Indians, Siamese, Tibetans, Indo-Chinese and Tamals.

Rudy's Dog Bites Reporter, Who Refuses to Sue

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 19.—Stars always are made unfair targets but this is the limit. Several days before Rudy Vallee ducked out of Hollywood, his dog, Windy, bit a magazine interviewer in the hand. Before the scribe reached home five hours later, his mother had received three calls from shyster lawyers, who hang like vultures over the hospital records, and who saw here a chance to nick a celebrity.

One even proposed to pay $150 for the rights to any judgment against the crooner.

Fortunately for Rudy, the magazine writer, Dick English, is a fair-minded chap and turned them all down. In return, Rudy gave him the material for several swell stories.

The singing star made a 100 per cent favorable impression upon all the newspaper boys who contacted him while he was working in "Scandals" for Fox. His attitude did much to wipe out the unpleasant memory of that other trip when Hollywood tabbed him as snooty.

The best stories you hear are still about Wilson Mizner. Bob Hopkins recalls the time when the beloved wit came upon a tire thief at work. The fellow didn't see him so Wilson stood and watched the operation. When it was finished, he leaned over and grasped the thief's shoulder.

The fellow whirled. It was a young boy, and he wilted completely.

"Cheez," he said, "I'm pinched!"

Wilson released him.

"Nothing like it, sucker," he said. "Anybody who can change a tire that fast can be my chauffeur."

Nobody's denying that the Garbo-Mamoulian trip is a big story, and that they may be married; but, after all, it wasn't the first motor journey the two made together. They were in Santa Barbara a while back and, later, made an unheralded trip to Yosemite.

Rogers Likes to Fool Weight Guessers

Will Rogers, who tips the scales at close to 200 pounds, gets a big kick on midways and at fairs by fooling the professional weight guessers. Once, in Shanghai, a Chinese expert, with a reputation of never having been wrong more than a couple of pounds either way, took a set of scales apart to see what was wrong after he had guessed Rogers' weight as 178, and the comedian registered 200 on the dial.

Reprisal

BILLY had hit the age of 28 without ever having had a steady girl friend. He knew plenty of damsels, of course, but he never cared particularly about any one of them. There was nothing peculiar about the situation. Billy was merely an unusually lucky chap.

He wasn't a brilliant talker, this Billy. But he was a splendid listener. Most of us prefer the latter kind anyhow. And, although Billy seldom took part in an argument, he listened very carefully when the boys in the office discussed the woman problem.

Most of his co-workers were extremely cynical in their opinions of the opposite sex.

"We're their meal tickets," was one chap's observation, "and nothing else but. They take everything and hate to give anything in return. Isn't it so?"

Whereupon the other boys would nod very solemnly and agree that such was indeed the case. There could be no argument about the fact that males were merely meal tickets. Billy listened and nodded with the rest. He could see no reason to disagree.

A few months later, he found a reason. She was 23 and very pretty. Billy had gone to a hospital for a minor operation. She was his nurse. In less time than it takes to tell the story, they were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, as grandfather used to say.

Billy had never thrown his money away. He had enough now to furnish a modest but cozy little home for himself and his bride. And was he happy? Well, if he wasn't, he would certainly do until a happy man came along. As a matter of fact, for more than a year of married life, he was riding in clouds. It was swell, all right.

The boys at the office hadn't changed in any way. They envied Billy his happiness, of course, but they didn't stop talking. Over and over, they would solemnly assure each other that the male was nothing but a meal ticket for the female.

Billy would laugh aloud at them now. And when he reached home he would take his wife in his arms and tell her about his stupid co-workers.

"To those fellows, honey," he would cry, "all women are alike. All they think about is that the man is the meal ticket. But they don't know my sweetheart, do they? If they knew what we mean to each other, they'd stop talking about meal tickets. Kiss me, baby." . . .

I suppose you can guess what happened. It wasn't fair to Billy. This kind of deal is never fair to anyone. But I don't see what we're going to do about it. And it's pretty certain that a man can't go on riding the clouds forever.

He came home unexpectedly one afternoon and found another man in her arms. Later he learned that this man had been her first sweetheart and that he had come back after a long absence. But he thought of nothing now except this terrible thing that had come into his life.

Billy ruined one of his best chairs on the man's back and hurled him to the street. What happened to the intruder after that I am unable to tell you. But I do know that he never complained to the police. He was hardly in a position to do any complaining.

The husband went back to his apartment. The world reeled. No riding the clouds now. Not now. Just the other way. Far, far below, now.

He said nothing to his wife. She cried out that she was the sorriest woman in the world. And she probably was. But Billy paid no heed. One by one, he took his belongings and moved them into the spare bedroom. Trip after trip—until everything of his was out of their old room. Then he closed the door behind him and sobbed bitterly.

For three weeks, the same scene was repeated. He came home, went to that spare room, closed the door behind him and said no word to his wife. He had his meals at the corner restaurant. Never did he approach the woman. Never did he utter a syllable when she ran to him and pleaded for forgiveness. Nothing. It was a horrible punishment—and he was slowly but surely driving this woman mad.

On Saturday of the third week, his wife returned from a short walk and found Billy sitting in the living room. She could stand it no longer. She threw herself at his feet and wept unashamed.

"Billy," she cried hysterically. "Please forgive me. Please. In God's name, please. I didn't know what I was doing. Please, Billy.

"I can't stand this, Billy. Beat me or kick me or something—only please talk to me. Please, Billy."

Cruel as it was, the man still refused to speak. He arose from his chair and stepped to one side in order to avoid her. He walked to the spare room and closed the door behind him. The wife fell upon her bed and cried herself to sleep.

The following morning, when she stepped into the living room, she was startled to see the door of the spare room open. She rushed into the doorway and found—nothing. Billy was already gone.

He had gone, very evidently, for all time. Nothing that had belonged to him remained in the room. Only the bed and a few chairs. Ties, socks, clothes, luggage—all gone. The wife knew exactly what that meant. She knew that he had gone out of her life forever.

She looked for a note. Surely he left some sort of a communication for her. Surely he would not leave without—

Her eye caught sight of a blue sheet of paper that was propped up on one end of the bed. Her name had been written across the top by Billy. She picked it up hurriedly and examined it.

It was a meal ticket—good for thirty-six meals at the corner restaurant.

Hard to Find Old Finery

To clothe May Robson in the habiliments of a gay nineties financial wizard for "You Can't Buy Everything," her new Cosmopolitan picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was not as easy as the wardrobe department thought it would be.

In keeping with her character, she required an old-fashioned "fascinator," or knitted shawl. One could not be found in the wardrobe department, and it was necessary to knit one for Miss Robson.

Again, Miss Robson needed a pair of old-fashioned rubber overshoes with steel buckles. The only ones available had modern zippers on them—and these, too, had to be made to order.

In "You Can't Buy Everything," according to those who saw the West Coast preview, Miss Robson surpasses her excellent performance in "Lady For a Day." The cast includes Lewis Stone, Jean Parker, Mary Forbes, William Bakewell, Reginald Mason, Tad Alexander, Walter Walker and Reginald Barlow.

Codfish Is a Wholesome And Delicious Food

This Valuable Salt Water Fish Contains Easily-Digested Fat, Protein Comparable to That of Flesh Meat, Important Minerals Such as Iodine and Vitamins A and D, Which Promote Growth

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.
United States Senator From New York

A few years after Columbus discovered America, the banks of Newfoundland became known to the fisherman of Normandy and Brittany. Their abundant supply of fish attracted the Europeans. Scores of fishing vessels sailed between France and the Newfoundland banks each year.

The most valuable fish found there is the cod, an inhabitant of many northern seas. Large catches of it are made along the North Atlantic and Arctic coasts. But today, as for centuries past, the most important fisheries for cod are those of the Newfoundland bank.

The average codfish weighs about 10 pounds. It is not unusual to catch a fish of 20 to 35 pounds, and even as high as 100 pounds or more.

Cod is marketed fresh, salted or dried. Fresh cod is at its best in the early winter months. Many consider boiled cod a great delicacy. It is also delicious sliced and fried in melted butter.

Salt cod is cured immediately after it is caught. The fish is split from head to tail, thoroughly cleaned and washed in salt water. After being dried it is kept in salt vats until properly cured. Then it is again washed and brushed, to remove the surplus of salt, and placed in the sun to dry.

A STAPLE FOOD

Cod is one of the most valuable of salt water fish. In many parts of this country it is a staple food, used in place of meat. It contains fat, protein, minerals and vitamins. The fat content of the cod is easily digested, and for this reason is suitable for even the very young child.

The protein of fish compares favorably with that of meat. It insures the body strong and healthy bone structure. This element is necessary in the diet of every individual and is especially important for the growing child.

Iodine is a mineral substance found in few foods. Its presence in codfish adds greatly to its value. Iodine is needed by the thyroid gland. When insufficient amounts are taken into the body, a goiter, if present, becomes enlarged.

IMPORTANT MINERALS

Codfish is also rich in lime and phosphorus. These minerals help purify the blood, counteract acidity, and prevent rickets.

Vitamins A and D are found in codfish. These promote growth, prevent infections of the eye and also help to prevent rickets. Cod liver oil, rich in these vitamins, is obtained from the liver of the codfish. The necessity of this valuable substance in the diet of the infant and child cannot be overemphasized.

In addition to its nutritive elements, codfish is a delicious, wholesome and inexpensive food. It should be included regularly in the diet.

CREAMED MUSHROOMS AND SPINACH—1 pound small mushrooms, 1 peck spinach, 2 hard cooked eggs, 1 cup milk, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, ¾ teaspoon salt, 1-16 teaspoon pepper.

Wash, peel and remove stems from mushrooms. Cook mushrooms for about 15 minutes and drain liquid into cup.

Melt 1 tablespoon butter, add flour, salt, pepper and mix well. Add milk and part of mushroom stock and bring to the boiling point, stirring constantly to avoid lumping. Add this sauce to the mushrooms.

Wash spinach thoroughly and cook in saucepan, using only the water which clings to leaves. When tender, drain, add salt and pepper and 2 tablespoons butter.

Put the cabbage and meat in the sauerkraut and cook until tender. Submitted by Miss Audrey Kelley, Scott street.

Mix thoroughly and pour into two well-buttered bread pans. Allow to stand 15 minutes and bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven. When cold, cut very thin, and spread with butter for sandwiches. Date bread is better for sandwiches when one day old. Submitted by Dorothy Barber, South Hills.

Beat butter to a cream and work in sugar. Add egg yolks, raisins and melted chocolate. Sift together flour, soda and spices and add to first mixture alternately with the water and sour milk; lastly, fold in the egg whites, beaten very light. Turn into a tube loaf cake pan. Split the almonds and press one edge of each half nut in the top of the cake; sift the sugar over the almonds and top of the cake. Bake about 50 minutes.—Submitted by Mrs. H. S. Hehmann.

SUES EX-MATE OVER TONSILS

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—One of the reasons why Mrs. Margaret Liggett Willits would like her former husband cited for contempt of court, she explained today, was that he had the children's adenoids and tonsils removed without telling her.

Another reason given Judge Joseph Sabath was that "he slapped me, knocking me down."

Judge Sabath granted a divorce to Mrs. Willits, niece of the drug store magnate, several weeks ago and gave her custody of the two daughters, but during the holidays John McGregor Willits went to her Swampscott (Mass.) home and brought them back here.

Today's hearing would have been on the question of child custody, but Mrs. Willits changed the subject to contempt of court in the matter of a slap and two tonsilectomies. Willits has asked the court to grant him custody of the children, accusing his former wife of unfitness.

'Happiest Man' Dies From Blast Injuries

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Jan. 19.—(INS.) — Sunny-dispositioned Reinold Winterhalter, 49, steward at the Vandervilt Moose lodge, died today of burns received when his lighted cigar caused a gas explosion in the club kitchen.

Winterhalter, father of three sons whose saxophone playing won them recognition at Pittsburgh radio stations, was known in this district as the "Tri-Town's happiest man."

O'Ryan Okays Radio Sets in Taxicabs

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—New York taxi riders are entitled to music other than that of drivers' horns squawking lustily at the slow motorist ahead. That was established today by Police Commissioner J. F. O'Ryan, who ruled it was okay for cabs to carry radio sets.

Radios in cabs had been banned by ex-Commissioner J. S. Bolan, who held drivers would be distracted by them.

TELL IT TO ELSIE -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By ELSIE ROBINSON

Decency Pays Dividends Of Peace and Happiness

Does it pay to be "hard to get?"

Must a girl go to any limit "to prove her love?"

Shocking questions! Not so long ago, few "nice girls" had ever faced them. But times have changed—cruelly. Those questions which shock and amaze you, Mother and Dad, are common place problems to the youngsters you love—to the little girl whom you think you have guarded from "ugly reality."

Every attractive girl, no matter how guarded or how well-trained, faces those questions when she goes out into the world—or even into youthful society.

And so this column is going to discuss them, in the words of the youngsters themselves.

Today it's Minta. Little Minta, who insisted on "being good" until she was married, and against all the temptation of her own warm young heart and our criminally lax days. Consequence? The man she was to marry left her. Now she's beginning to wonder if goodness pays.

Dear Elsie—

Please tell me just one thing—are there any decent men left? And if so, where are they?

I am a girl 18 years old, and in love with a fellow of 23. I went steady with him for two months. He said that he loved me and wanted me to marry him. We had planned to get married soon, but then he left me.

He has a very bad reputation, and admits he's been around a lot. But I could overlook that, in spite of everybody. I loved him. And I can't forget him. No matter how hard I try.

IS PUZZLED

Please tell me, do you think this fellow has any more respect for me than he has for the fast lot that he goes out with now? I say "fast lot" because I know them, and know just what they a[illegible].

I don't drink or smoke, but I am always the life of the party wherever I go. I don't know what to think about it all. It sure is tough on a decent girl, these days, especially when she loves a so-called "bad man."

Do the men ever think that there are no decent girls in this world, just because they happen to know that there are a lot of bad ones? I'd just love to know whether this fellow ever thinks to compare me with some of the girls he goes around with now—or if he thinks I am just a "flat tire." I am almost desperate. I don't know what to do. But I do want to do what is right.

Some people say, "be hard to get, and you'll win out." But I lost my boy friend by thinking that way.

Please give me some advice.

MINTA.

Does decency pay?

It pays better than anything else on earth, youngster. It lasts longer—does more for you—gives better dividends of peace and pride and power and real popularity, than any other attitude on earth. It's the only attitude that does pay.

And that goes one hundred per cent, whether you're living with tramps or saints.

FANCY SHIFTED

As for the loss of this "bad man," you didn't lose him because you were decent, youngster. You lost him because his fancy shifted. He grew tired of you—and he'd have grown tired of you sooner if you had yielded to him. Fallen women are no treat to gentlemen of his caliber. They're regular scenery. And in such a role you'd have had even less chance of holding him than you have now. For I suspect, Minta, that as a "wild, wild woman" you'd be a complete failure — and let's thank God for that.

And let's also thank God for the fact that you didn't hold this rotter. Yes, I know he was alluring. Bad men have always had an irresistable attraction for good girls. But take a tip from a lady who has known quite a few of them, little sister—they're an awful flop!

There is nothing more disappointing to a snappy young girl than the so-called "bad man." For they're never really bad. They are just selfish, cowardly, lazy, lying show-offs, who'll cry like babies if they can't get the right hair cut on their big, tough necks!

So forget him, kid, and go on to bigger, better hunting. Any decent men left? Sure there are—thousands of them. And believe me—they've more real spunk in their little finger than this run-out guy had in his whole flabby frame. And one of them's waiting for you!

Given in Marriage :-: A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Tour of the Attic Lulls Avis' Suspicion

Whatever other qualities, good or bad, Avis Arlen may possess, she has no superior in the possession of resourceful cunning. Dicky once commented that she "knew how to dodge an issue in seven languages," and I assented to his dictum, although I also knew that her effrontery was beyond any language to express.

But it was not effrontery that she was using during the trip through the old farm house which she had asked me to take with her. She was acting perfectly the role of an enthusiastic lover of old houses and furnishings as I led her through the attic filled with the supernumerary things which any large family accumulates, especialy when there is a convenient place for storage

To all appearances, she was absorbed in the things I was showing her, but I saw that she was surreptitiously measuring the steps she was taking, and guessed that she was estimating the distance to the portion of the attic which lay above the bathroom.

The tension on her nerves would have been something terrific if she were less cold-blooded.

INTERESTED IN DOORS

Partly in sheer pity for her nerves, partly because I was in haste to get back to my room and get to bed as soon as possible, I hurried through the part of the attic which is habitable, and came to an open place where the roof sloped down almost to the floor, leaving only space for a man to crawl along the rough, splintery planks laid across the floor beams.

"Here is where this part of the attic ends," I said. "You can see the rest only by crawling, or by being boosted up through trap doors."

"Trap doors," she echoed, looking around with a pretty expression of surprise. "I don't see any. Where are they? And surely this isn't all the attic. I'm sure I saw third floor windows on the other side of the house, when I was here last summer."

"Yes, you did," I told her. "But that part of the attic is on the other side of the house. One of the trap doors to it is in one bathroom, and one in the other. And the only other way to get to it is by crawling through here."

"How perfectly thrilling!" she exclaimed, but the words were mechanical, and I guessed that her brain was working fast.

"Did you say there was a trap door in that bathroom where I was?" she asked, her eyes naively wide open.

ENJOYS BEWILDERMENT

"How queer that I didn't see it."

"Only an unusually keen observer would notice it," I replied. "It fits perfectly into the floor, and it has a spring lock, so that it can only be opened from the upper side."

I am afraid I was petty enough to enjoy the bewilderment that came into her eyes as my mendacious improvisation.

"You mean it can't be pushed open from the bathroom below, at all?"

"Not unless it has been carelessly left a bit out of alignment," I said. "Once in a great while Jim forgets to close is perfectly, but he invariably remembers later, and goes up and closes it. We are always afraid the small boys might get to fooling with the doors and get a nasty fall. They crawl through here sometimes and back again, and if a grown-up is around, sometimes we boost them through the doors; but we are always careful to see that they are locked."

I was watching her furtively, to see how she would take this bit of news that she had no chance to get hold of the bottle she had hidden. Purposely I had made my manner unusually friendly, so that she would deduce that Jim had not brought the bottle to me. She evidently swallowed the bait, for almost at once she relaxed the tension at which she palpably had been holding herself, and with a smile at me stretched herself, as a sleepy cat might do.

"I think you were right," she said, "although I didn't think so when you talked about it. But I'm actually getting sleepy. When the hour of dancing is up, I shall be ready to go to bed like a nice little girl."

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

'Likewise'

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I went to a party, and a friend of mine and I had an argument. When leaving, I said to one of the guests whom I had met there, "I'm very glad I've met you." She replied "Likewise." I think that this was incorrect, and the correct thing to say was, "Thank you, I'm glad I've met you too." My friend insists that just the word "Likewise" was correct.

Who is correct, and if we are both wrong, what is right?

BABS.

I'm so glad that you wrote about this, for this use of the word "likewise" is, I believe my pet abomination in the world of correct usage. "Likewise" should never, never, never be used as an answer for anything like this. It is meaningless, awkward, graceless, and in exceedingly poor form.

The pleasant comment of this kind should be answered charmingly, and quite as you suggested, "Thank you, I'm most happy to have met you, too," or something like that. "I'm glad to have met you, too," is a bit easier to say than the form "I'm very glad to have met you."

But "likewise"—ugh!

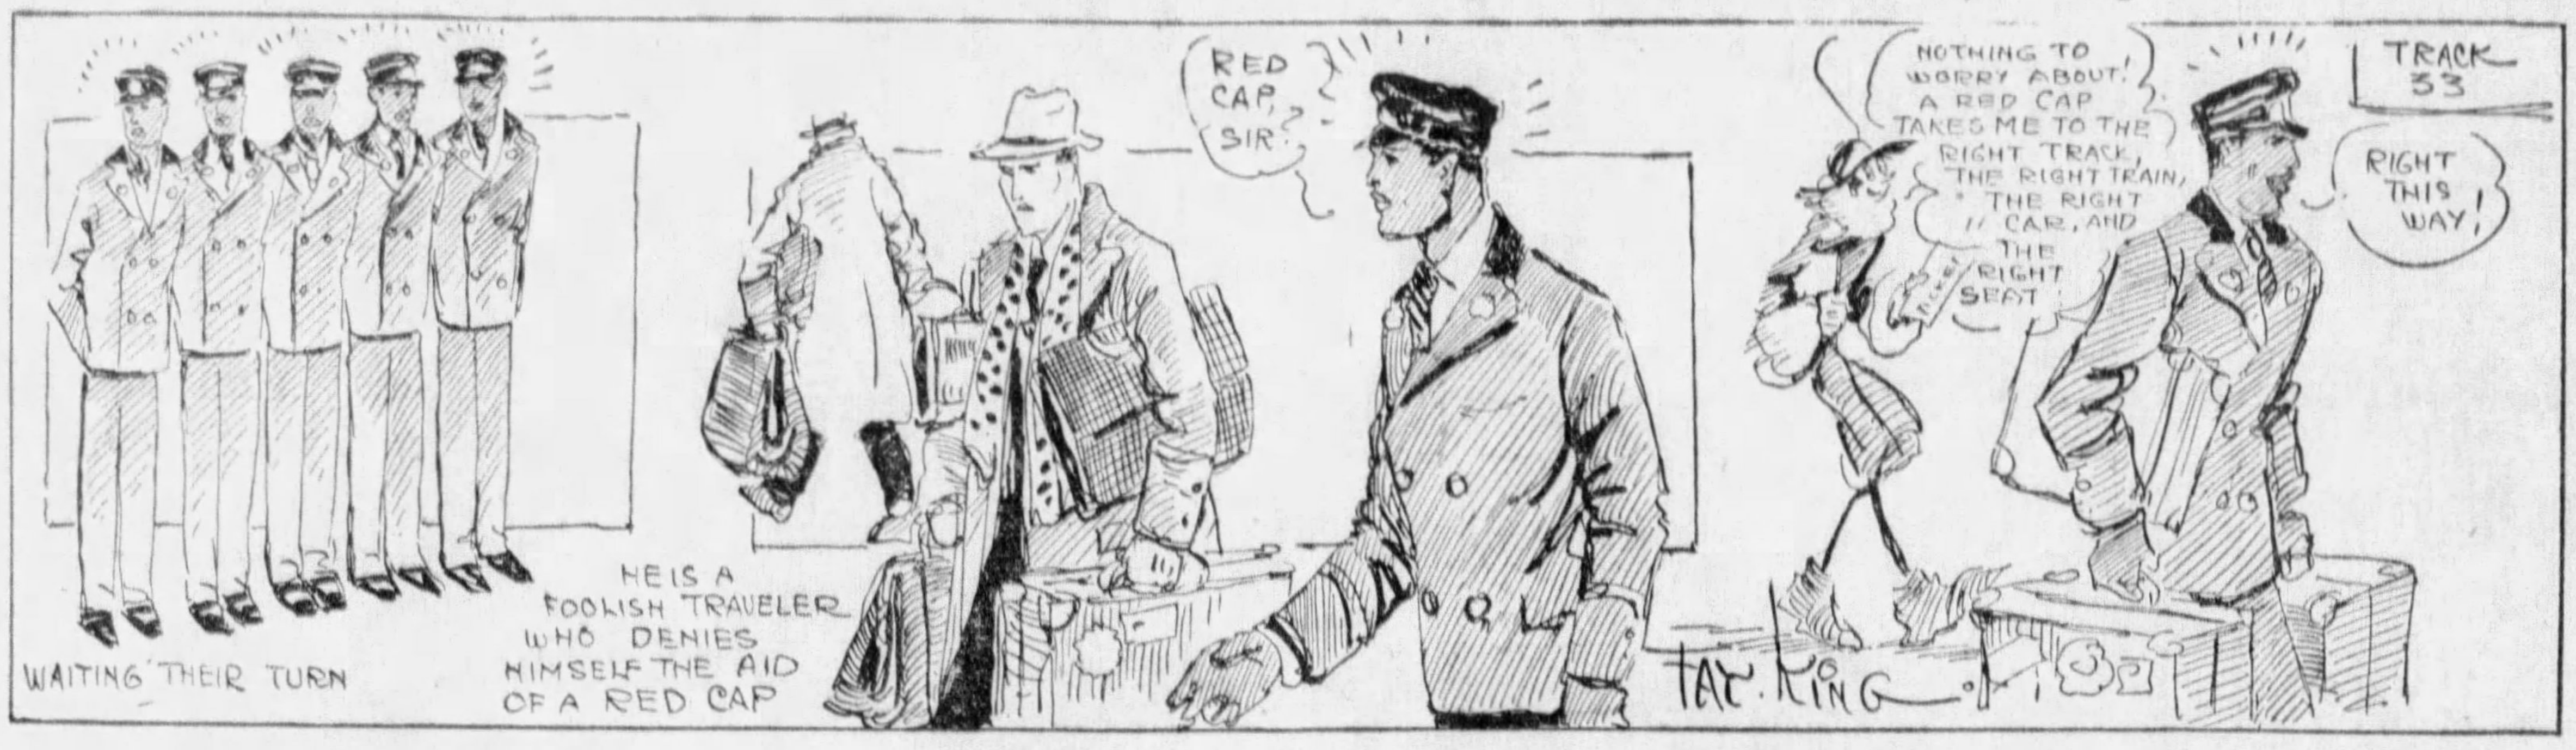
"Red Cap" Starts Your Journey in Right Way, Says Fay King



WAITING THEIR TURN
RED CAP, SIR?
NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT! A RED CAP TAKES ME TO THE RIGHT TRACK, THE RIGHT TRAIN, THE RIGHT CAR, AND THE RIGHT SEAT
TRACK 33
RIGHT THIS WAY!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

It seems to me a foolish economy for any traveler to deny himself the assistance which a Red Cap can afford him at a railway station.

No part of your travel money is better spent than the fee to the Red Cap who will pilot you and your luggage to the right track, right train, right car and right seat.

Yet we see some travelers rushing about a station loaded down with their luggage, and looking wild-eyed weary and confused.

They will ask directions of Red Caps but refuse to engage them.

A good start counts in everything. And in travel the efficient Red Cap is a right beginning for a pleasant journey. He starts you off with comfort and peace of mind.

Contract Bridge :-: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Gaining Two Tricks

Sometimes it appears to the average Bridge player that the so-called expert plays — coups, squeezes and forced leads—have little meaning, and, indeed, you frequently hear the comment at the Bridge table that all of these fine plays are made in the post-mortem and not in the actual play. It is unquestionably true that many players do overlook opportunities for squeezes and forced leads in the actual stress of Rubber play, but it is equally true that many players recognize these situations with almost unerring accuracy and develop the play with uncanny skill.

In the hand given below, played by Mr. John D. Bibb, of Anniston, Ala., there is a rather unusual situation, requiring first a Vienna Coup, followed by a subsequent progressive squeeze, the ultimate result being the gain of two tricks.

South, Dealer.

North:
♠ A J 8 6 4 2
♡ J 10 7
◇ 7
♣ A Q 2

West:
♠ K Q 7 5
♡ 5 2
◇ Q 10 6
♣ K J 10 3

East:
♠ 10 9
♡ 4 3
◇ A 9 8 5 4 2
♣ 8 7 6

South:
♠ 3
♡ A K Q 9 8 6
♣ 9 5 4

The final contract was four hearts, and West, unwilling to open the spade suit, which had been bid by North, and equally unwilling to lead through his tenace situations in the minor suits, opened the heart five. This was won in Dummy with the Ten. The seven of diamonds was now led and East went up with the Ace and returned another heart. This Mr. Bibb won in the closed hand and led the four of clubs, finessing the Queen, which held. Next the Ace of clubs was laid down in preparation for the subsequent squeeze. This play constituted the Vienna Coup, as it established a high club in West's hand. Then all the hearts were led out. At Trick nine, before the lead of the last heart, the situation was as follows:

North:
♠ A J 8 6
♣ 2

West:
♠ K Q
♣ K

East:
♠ 10 9
◇ 9 8
♣ 8

South:
♠ 3
♡ 6
◇ K J
♣ 9

The lead of the heart six squeezed West. He discarded the diamond Ten, that appearing to him as the best, or at least the least bad, of three alternatives. Having been squeezed out of his diamond protection, however, he was squeezed again two tricks later, as South led the diamond King and followed with the Knave, and on this second squeeze West was forced to concede the rest of the tricks. His only choice was between discarding an honor in spades or the club King. Both were equally fatal.

Household Hints

Almonds, shelled and blanched, cooked in the sauce for your fish course, add flavor and attractiveness in serving.

Don't let the man of the house drop his cigaret ashes on the floor. Instead, have a container handy for them, and when gold or silver rings need cleaning a wet rag dipped in the ashes will do the trick.

CUDDLE TOYS PATTERN 582

Pigs in Different Costumes

Pigs may be pigs, but every youngster loves them when they are cunning little cuddle toys like these. These pigs, of course, are all the same size, as they should be. Having decidedly individual taste, they dress differently, and have clothes that come on and off. Their arms are floppy, which makes them lively little pigs, and easy to dress. They are simple little animals to make, and measure about 10 inches in height when done—an excellent height for a cuddle toy, and a size that makes it perfectly possible for tiny tots to carry three of them in their arms all at once.

Pattern 582 comes to you with the pattern for a pig and for the three different costumes shown; detailed directions for making the pig and the clothes, and yardage requirements are given.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

A large part of the success of a permanent wave is due to the right kind of a hair cut, one that is not so uneven that the operator finds it difficult to get every hair end neatly rolled upon the rod. The hair should be sufficiently long so there will be no stubs or bristles along the nape.

It isn't necessary to shave soap and boil it to make a convenient shampoo medium. There is an easier way. Place a small bar of soap in a pint Mason jar. Fill the jar with hot water, let it stand for three days before using. The suds will be rich and effective. As the liquid lessens in the jar, add more hot water, shaking up the heavier substance in the bottom. If the hair is extremely oily, add a pinch of borax. Always rinse the topcrest well before putting on the lather. Use a bath spray. That does the business.

Interesting Facts About the Respiratory System

Frequent reference is made to the importance of the "respiratory system." I wonder how many are familiar with what actually constitutes this vital system of our bodies.

Dr. Copeland

The respiratory system is the "breathing apparatus" and neglect or carelessness in regard to disorders of this mechanism is dangerous. By its operation we inhale air from the atmosphere and obtain the oxygen it contains. The oxygen is carried to the blood through the vessels of the lungs and serves to purify the blood.

When we exhale we breathe out the impurities, especially carbon dioxide. Together with the food we eat, this process supplies the elements necessary for proper growth and development.

The breathing device begins at the nose and ends in the vast number of air cells which make up the major portion of the lungs. For convenience, it is divided into two parts; the upper respiratory tract, and the lower respiratory tract. The former consists of the nose and throat; the latter is made up of the voice-box or larynx, the trachea or windpipe, and the bronchial tubes located in the lungs.

When we inspire or breathe in, the air passes through the nose where it is filtered or cleansed by the fine hairs located in each nostril. The air is warmed as it passes over the moist lining of the nose. By these wise provisions, cold and unclean air is prevented from reaching the delicate membranes of the bronchi and lungs.

You will see that when the air passes through the mouth, as it does in "mouth breathers," these important adjustments are not made. For this reason sufferers from nasal obstruction are more subject to colds and coughs. In addition, interference with free breathing permits the accumulation of carbon dioxide in the blood. The oxygen is inadequate and the normal expansion of the lungs is not accomplished.

Any neglect of the respiratory system encourages disease in some part of the tract. Colds, nasal sinus disease, tonsilitis, grippe, "flu" and other respiratory diseases are encouraged by this neglect. Lowered resistance to the common infectious diseases naturally follows and they are met more frequently in persons who have some nasal defect. Flat chest and other physical deformities may be traced to faulty breathing.

Such defects as twisting of the partition or thickening of the internal tissues in the nose, require immediate correction if normal breathing and good health are to be expected. In children adenoids and diseased tonsils should be removed. Bear in mind that proper breathing is a protection against disease.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. E. G. H. Q.—What can be done for a child who always becomes "car sick?" Is there anything that could be taken beforehand to relieve this tendency?

A.—First of all make sure that the child's system is clear. Do not take the child out driving directly after a meal and avoid long drives. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

On the way to the balmy Southland and to Southern California are lovely clothes in smart baggage. A useful outfit is a cape costume in blue and white checked linen. The military cape is hip length and fastens down the front with navy blue buttons, in the same shade as the linen shirtwaist blouse, which has pearl buttons.

Cover up your shoulders for formal wear if you want to. For all but formal occasions, the shoulders of course should be covered. A useful dinner dress has a long, slim skirt of black satin with a bodice of burnished gold metal cloth. Double puffs reaching almost to the elbow form the sleeves. There is a surplice front with a shallow V neckline.

PITT CARDS ARMY HERE, EXTENDS JOCK'S CONTRACT

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Pitt Holds Prize Coach.
Jock's Fine Record Here.
Hartwig Popular Captain.
Air Brake Floor Feats.
Berg Advised to Retire.
Risberg Makes Appeal.

Of the three announcements made at Chancellor John G. Bowman's dinner to the 1933 Pitt football team last night, the most important and most interesting was that Dr. John Bain Sutherland had signed a new contract as gridiron coach for an indeterminate period. The assurance that Sutherland is to remain here after the 1934 season effectively lays to rest all rumors of his going to Yale or Ohio State as chief of football. Jock's regime has been a golden decade for Pitt. In the Doctor's 10 years as mentor, Panther teams have lost a total of only 15 games, while winning 71 and tying 8, a winning percentage of .826. They have rolled up 1,971 points in their 94 games against only 461 for opponents, an average of close to 21 points per game for Pitt, while its foes have averaged less than five. In the last three seasons, the Blue and Gold has lost only three games, against 24 victories and three ties.

Jock Sutherland

Sutherland's record for consistently fine coaching has not been surpassed in the country, and in the ranking of America's greatest football tutors Jock stands second to none. The Silent Scot brought Pitt up to its present high place in football, and the entire city and district join with Panther alumni, students and faculty members in congratulating the university athletic authorities on his retention.

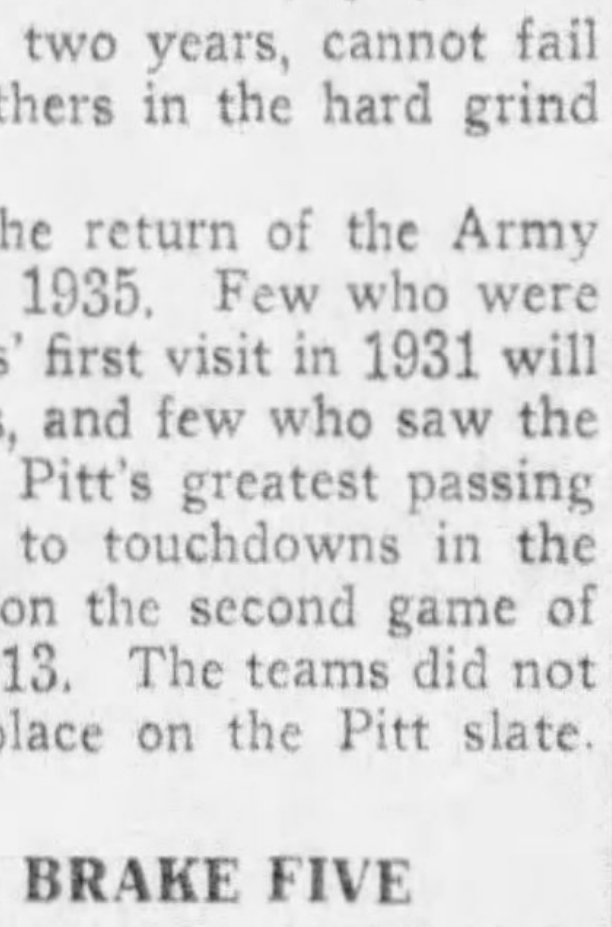
APPOINTMENT OF HARTWIG POPULAR STEP

The appointment of Charles (Doc) Hartwig as Pitt football captain for 1934 was another excellent move, the Benwood (W. Va.) youth being one of the best and most popular players on the squad. Hartwig was one of the country's great guards in 1933 who did not receive the credit due. His keen spirit, which lifted him from the ranks of ordinary players to a regular berth and kept him here for two years, cannot fail to be an inspirational help to the Panthers in the hard grind ahead of them for next fall.

Pittsburghers will also welcome the return of the Army eleven to the Stadium on November 9, 1935. Few who were in the city on the occasion of the Cadets' first visit in 1931 will forget the parade of the future generals, and few who saw the game will forget the sudden arrival of Pitt's greatest passing attack, four completed aerials leading to touchdowns in the Panthers' 26-to-0 victory. Pitt also won the second game of the series in 1932 at West Point, 18 to 13. The teams did not meet last year, Navy taking Army's place on the Pitt slate.

LITTLE RECALLS FEATS OF AIR BRAKE FIVE

Jim Little, who was manager of the famous old Westinghouse Air Brake basketball team, of Wilmerding, in 1917-18-19, and who is now supervisor of personnel for the Westinghouse Air Brake Company, writes an interesting letter from Wilmerding about his great quintet and the floor game's yesteryear while in a reminiscent mood. He says Buck Gefsky's recent reference to the Air Brake team, in a letter to the Sun-Telegraph, brought back many fond memories of the all-star outfit he managed.



Jim Little

"Those were the days when we played National Rules," Little continues, "when we had two officials (a doctor and a referee), locked the teams in a cage, had no out-of-bounds, and speed, endurance and ability determined the winner. One of our hardest fought games was with Pitcairn, played to a capacity house, on a winner-take-all basis, in the Labor Temple at Pittsburgh, the final score being Air Brake, 50; Pitcairn, 48. Another big battle was fought in Camden, N. J., when we defeated Camden, 39 to 26. Camden had won the Eastern League championship that year.

"It was this game that cost Wilmerding the loss of the team, as the inducements offered by Camden to remain there and play for that city were such that the boys could not resist. The following season, representing Camden, they won the Eastern League championship. Roy Steele and Jack Adams were the forwards, Ed Dolin the center, and Jim Campbell, Ross Steele and Frank McEvoy guards. The scoring qualities of the team are shown by the summary of the 1919 season, which closed with 23 victories and two defeats. Air Brake scored a total of 1,332 points to 814 for opponents, an average score per game of 53 to 32. The highest score was 118 to 29 against the old Oakmont Collegians, the second highest 100 to 29 against McKeesport, and the lowest was 24 to 19 against Hazelton."

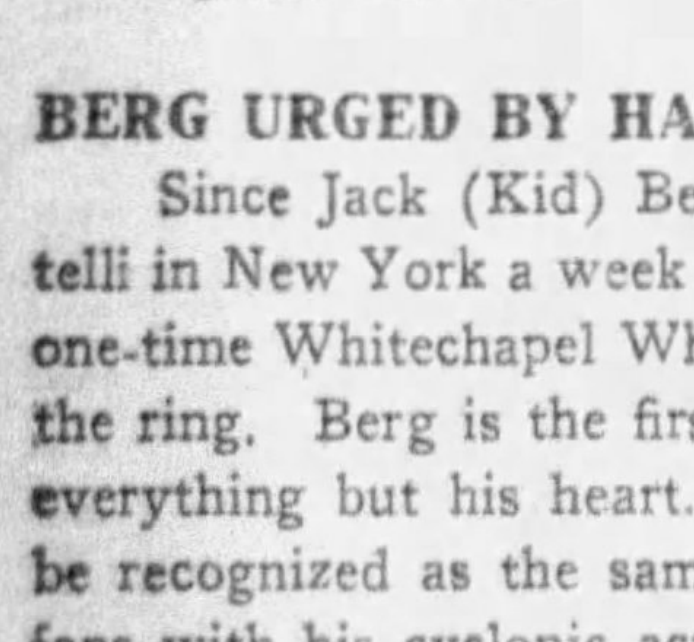
BERG URGED BY HANDLERS TO QUIT RING

Since Jack (Kid) Berg took that lacing from Cleto Locatelli in New York a week ago, the manager and handlers of the one-time Whitechapel Whirlwind have been urging him to quit the ring. Berg is the first hollow shell of 1934. He has lost everything but his heart. Against Locatelli, he could hardly be recognized as the same fighter who used to electrify fight fans with his cyclonic action and machine-gun attack.

The Kid will be seen no more in the roped square if he heeds the advice of the men who have been associated with him in his Queensberry campaigns. Berg doesn't want to quit. He says he wasn't right against Cleto, that a bad rib handicapped him, and that he would like another shot at Locatelli or Tony Canzoneri. In the fight game they never know when they have had enough. Berg is said to be worth $40,000, but the men behind him are telling him it may not do him much good unless he heeds their warning and averts injury.

ANOTHER BASEBALL EXILE WOULD RETURN

Joe Jackson and Buck Weaver are not the only exiled Black Sox players who would like to get back into organized baseball. Charles (Swede) Risberg is the latest to make a plea. After batting around the sticks for years, the former Chisox shortstop, now 38, has returned to San Francisco, where he got his start in semi-pro ball. Risberg's life has not been an easy one since he was banished at 24 for something which he declares he did not do. He would like to get back and thinks he deserves the chance.

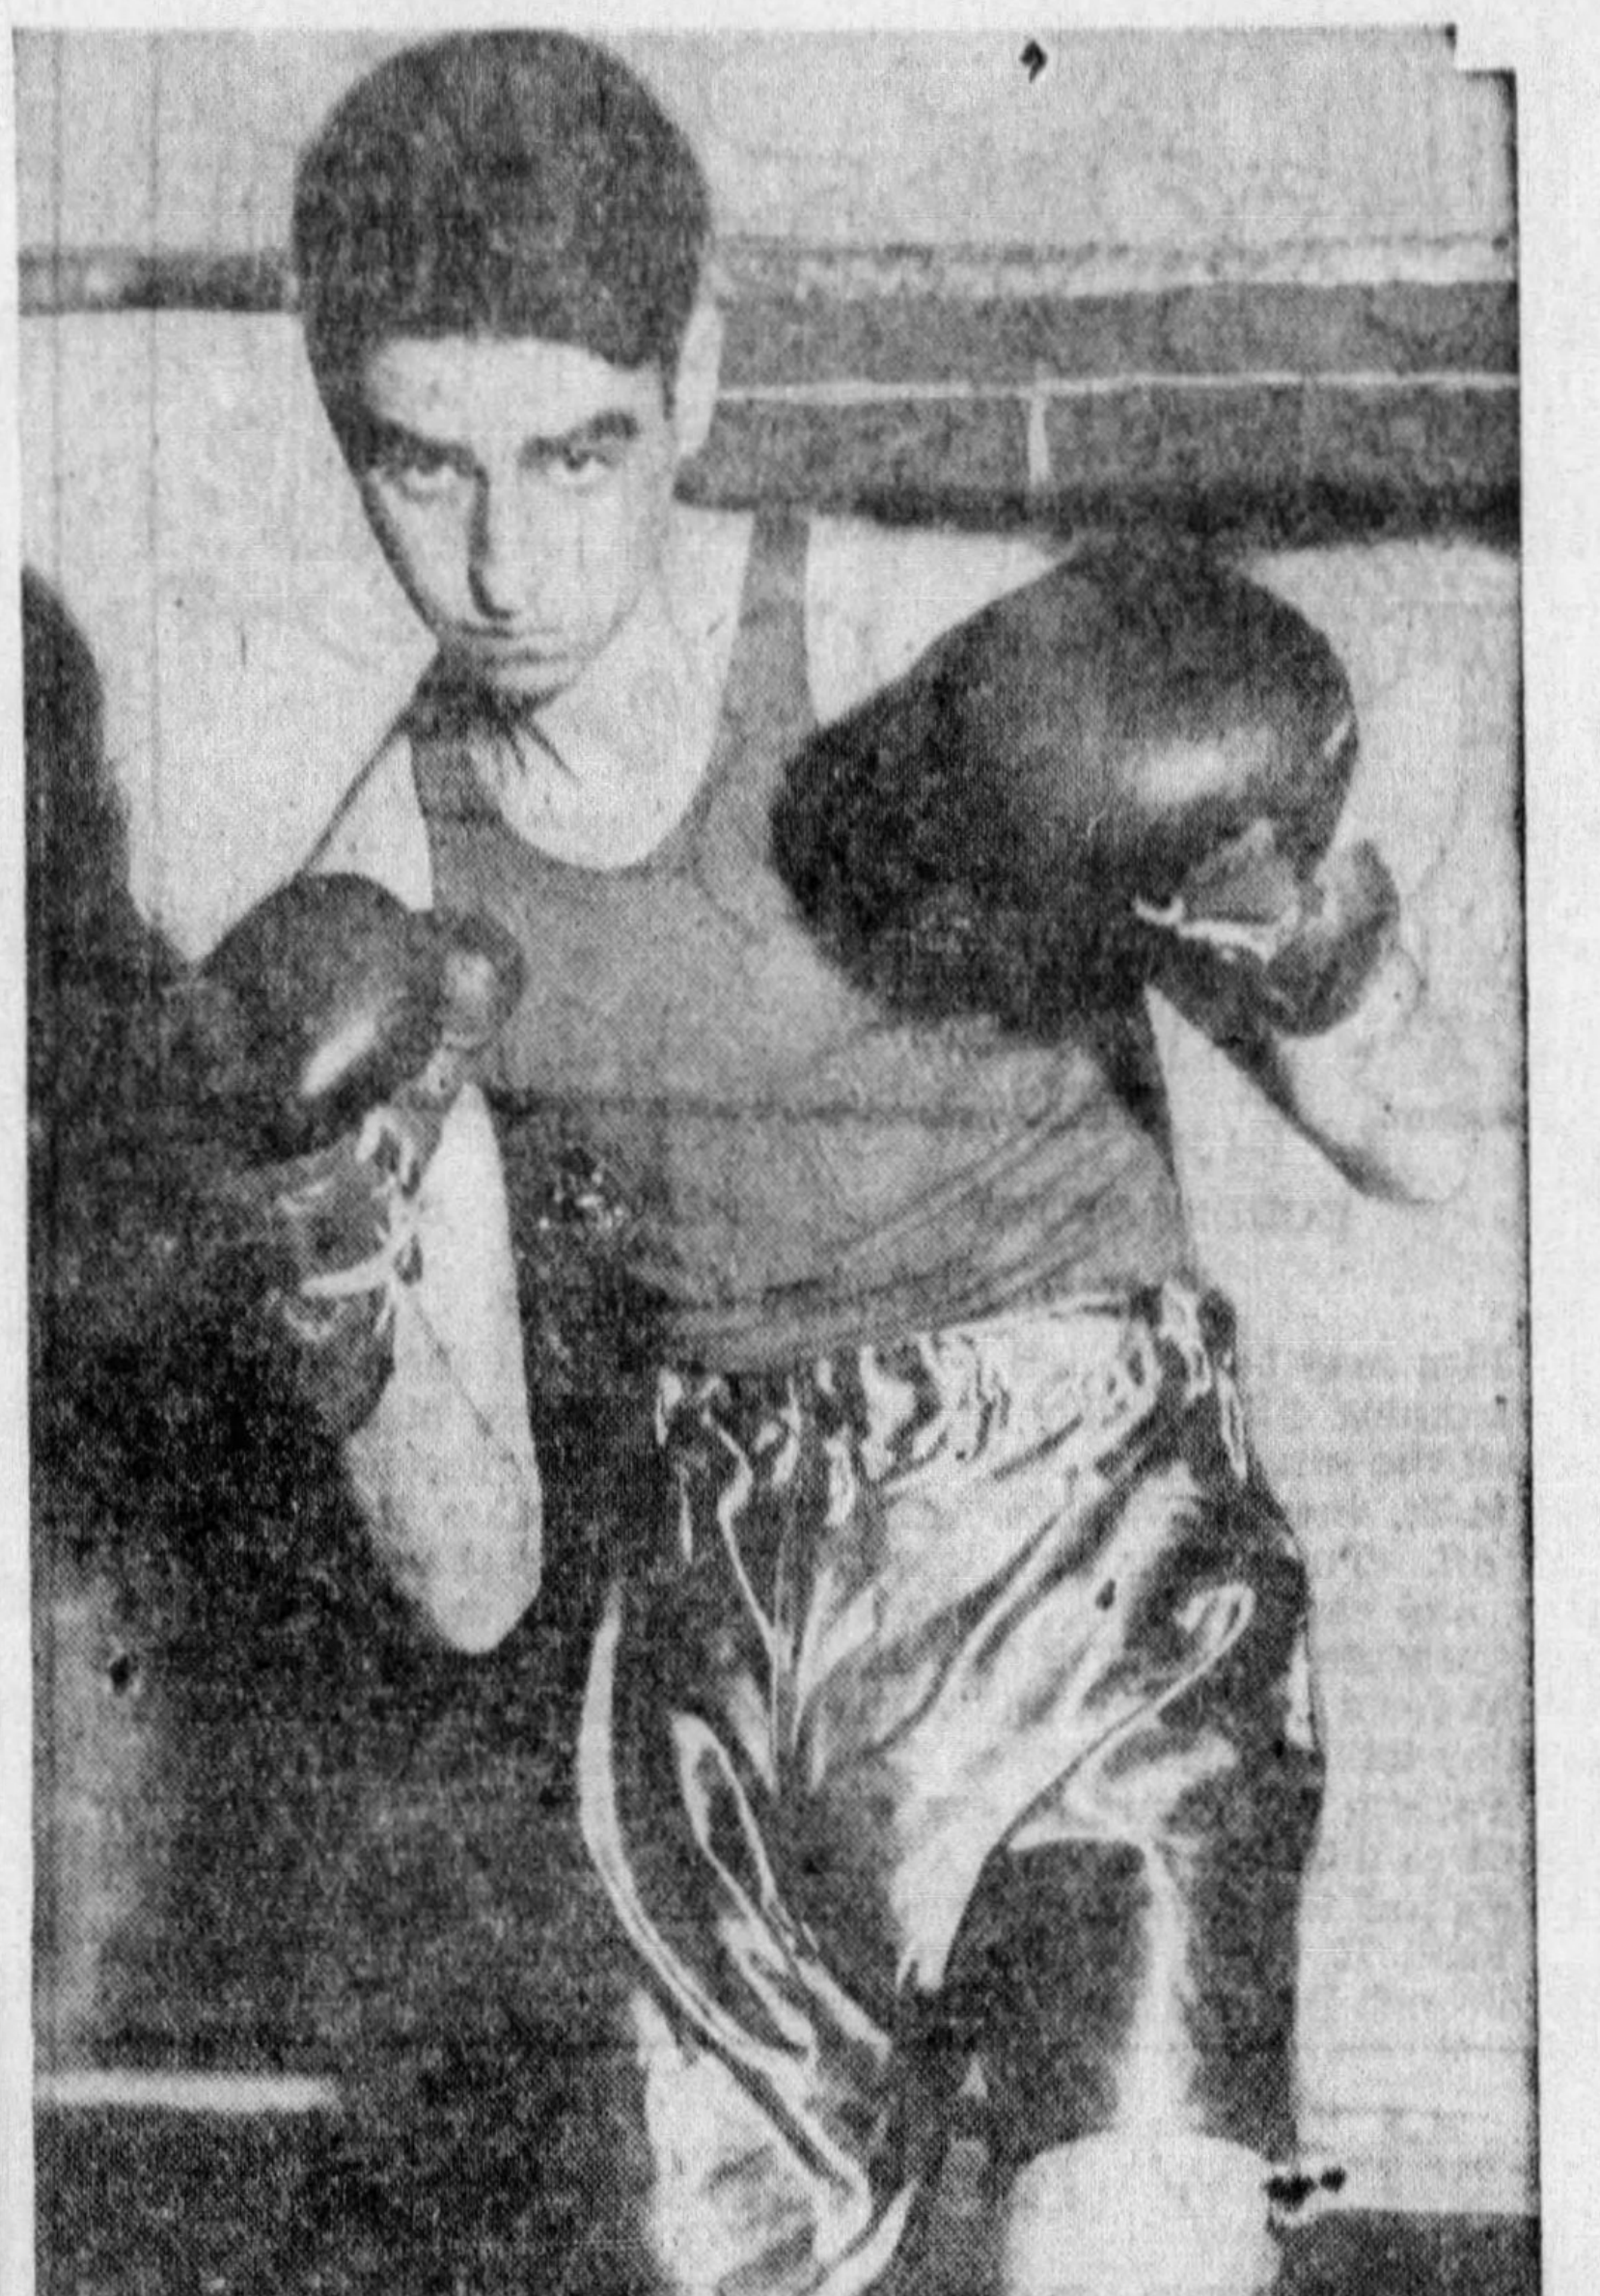


Swede Risberg

Swede argues that if he had held up a bank he would have paid the penalty by this time, and would be out of jail and able to earn a living. "Those 14 years of punishment would seem to be enough," he says, "even if I had been guilty. At the time of that affair I was going strong, with many years of good baseball ahead of me. I think I have served my term and paid my fine, and I believe I ought to have a chance to earn a living again in organized ball." Risberg believes he could hold down an infield job in the Pacific Coast League, and that when through as a player he might catch on as a coach or manager. In recent years, Swede has been playing independent ball in Canada and the Dakotas. Now he is back in his home town looking for a job. He has a wife and four sons.

Pitt Student Sports Editor Takes Up Boxing in 'Self Defense'

HYMIE COHEN IN A MORE SERIOUS MOMENT . . MUST DO A COLUMN FOR THE PITT NEWS . . . WHAT'LL HE WRITE ABOUT?



THE SAME HYMIE . . . ON VARSITY BOXING SQUAD

It's this way. Hymie Cohen is the sports editor of the Pitt News, writing a column under the name of the Campus Scout, and one of his strong points is loyalty, which takes the form of picking Pitt teams to win. Last fall he predicted Pitt would beat Duquesne by six touchdowns in football and the Dukes got hold of the forecast and pasted it up in their dressing rooms and burned up and got sore and went out and gave the Panthers a terrific 7-0 battle. And Jock Sutherland, the Pitt coach, doesn't exactly go for having his team made the favorite that-a-way, so, in joining the varsity boxing squad as a 125-pounder, 'tis rumored Hymie is simply preparing himself for anything that may come of his penchant for predicting. He lost his first bout in the match with Temple at the Stadium last Saturday night, but made a game showing. These are Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph pictures.

CADETS LISTED FOR 1935 GAME AT STADIUM

By JESS CARVER

Jock Sutherland stays as Pitt's football coach.

And there you have the athletic news of the day from John G. Bowman's college out Oakland way.

The Panthers put in a right busy time of it yesterday, what with fixing up an agreement between Coach Sutherland and Chancellor Bowman and the board of trustees; the appointing of Hartwig, star guard, as captain for the '34 season; the feeding of the football squad by the chancellor and the announcing of letter and numeral winners and the scheduling of the Army.

AGREEMENT SATISFACTORY

Coach Sutherland's contract runs out at the expiration of the present school year, but the good Doctor will remain with his alma mater for an indeterminate period. Jock and Chancellor Bowman and the trustees got together on a new working agreement, which turned out to be satisfactory all the way around.

Thus the silly rumor that Jock was planning to leave Pitt to go to Yale, which has come up every time recently the wind has changed, is definitely spiked, but at that, it can be broken out again any time the boys have nothing more important to do.

Since his arrival at Pitt in 1924, the Panthers have met with success season after season. Under Sutherland Pitt was eastern titleholder in 1927, 1929, 1931 and 1932. No eastern foe has won from Pitt since October of 1928.

Up until the current year, Dr. Sutherland was an instructor in the crown and bridge department at the Pitt Dental School, along with his football duties, but last fall he was made professor of physical education.

Since he has been at Pitt, his teams have won 71, lost 15 and tied eight games. Three times, in 1927, 1929 and 1932, Pitt represented the East in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena.

HARTWIG CAPTAIN

The appointment of Hartwig as captain was announced by Dr. Sutherland last night at the annual dinner to the varsity squad tendered by Chancellor Bowman. Hartwig hails from Benwood, W. Va., a suburb of Wheeling (if you hail from Benwood, Wheeling is the suburb). He's been an outstanding performer for the Panthers for two seasons and is rated highly by his coaches.

Doc entered Pitt in 1930, played an end on the freshman team and then lost a year of school when he suffered a severe leg injury.

The resumption of football relations with the Army comes as a very popular move. When the Cadets stormed the city three years ago, one of the most brilliant gridiron spectacles in the city's history was staged. In 1932 Pitt invaded West Point, scoring a second victory, by the way, and then the Navy was taken on last fall in the place of the Soldiers.

The 1935 game will be played Nov. 9.

It was rumored today that Eddie Baker would be named to succeed Andy Gustafson as Pitt backfield coach, and that Baker would be assisted by Howdy O'Dell, Panther halfback star of last season. Although O'Dell will be graduated in June, he plans to remain at

Leon See's 'Inside Story' Of Carnera's Career

EDITORIAL FOREWORD

At the suggestion of Paul Journee, veteran French boxer, the author has agreed to add the very green young giant, Carnera, to the See stable of fighters. Journee sends Primo to Paris. The author meets him at the railroad station . . .

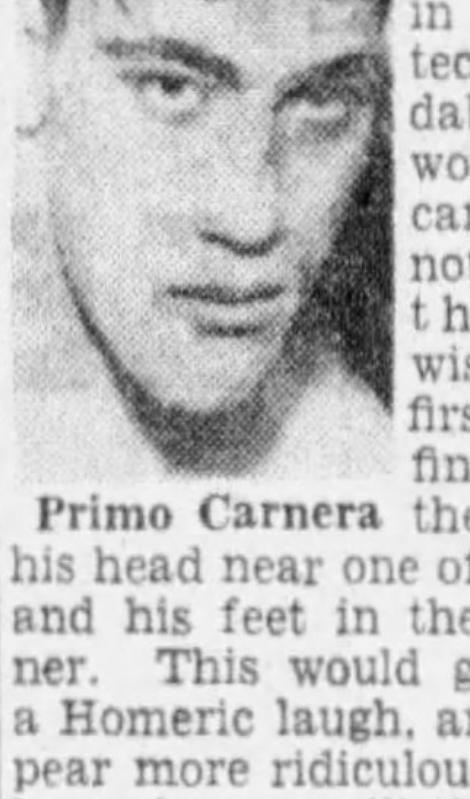
By LEON SEE

Developer and Former Manager of Primo Carnera, World Heavyweight Boxing Champion

CHAPTER FOUR.

Walking side by side with my giant, who attracted everybody's attention along the route, I arrived some time later at Saint-Germainen-Laye, where my chief trainer, Maurice Eudeline, was waiting for us. I delivered Carnera to him instructing him to teach Primo the first principles of boxing.

"Teach him how to stand on guard," I told Eudeline. "Show him how to box using his immoderately long left, with his right hand well open in order to protect that formidable jaw which worries me. Take care that he does not get socked on the jaw, otherwise after the first fight we may find him lying on the canvas with his head near one of the ring posts and his feet in the opposite corner. This would give the public a Homeric laugh, and I would appear more ridiculous than this big boy whose pugilistic career would be ended even before its start."



Primo Carnera

"O. K.," said Eudeline, "it's understood."

And, conscious that I had done my duty, I left for London where I had other engagements. . . .

FAVORABLE REPORT

Eight days later, back in Paris, I was visited by Maurice Eudeline.

"Do you know, Mr. See, your giant—"

"What happened to him?"

"What did you think of him, Mr. See."

"I suppose that he is no good. Has he made any progress?"

"If you want my opinion," replied my chief trainer, "I will probably surprise you. I think that he has a great future. He is intelligent, diligent in his work and unusually gifted. He picks up points with astonishing speed. I assure you that he is boxing already as if he had had six months of lessons. Why, he wants to fight already."

"To fight?" I all but gasped. "Why he's absolutely crazy. Maybe in three more months, and then only in an unimportant amateur match."

The same day, in the afternoon, I dropped into the gymnasium in order to take a look at the progress of my new pugilist pup. Primo took his lesson before me and sparred one round with an amateur heavyweight.

THE FIRST WORKOUT

Eudeline had told me the truth. It was impossible to believe that Carnera had taken lessons for only eight days. He moved in the ring with astonishing speed for his weight. His left jab was excellent. Undoubtedly, he was "promising."

After his workout, Primo said to me:

"Monsieur See, I want to fight."

"In a few months," I replied, "I will try to find a novice as an adversary for you."

"That is not the idea," he retorted. "I want to fight soon and as a professional. Give me a second class opponent and you can be sure that I will beat him."

I contented myself with smiling.

"We will talk it over later; considerably later," I said.

But every day he accosted me again with:

'Monsieur See, I want to fight, please sign me for a bout. I do not want to be a burden to you, you have already done plenty for me. I want to make money."

His pleadings at last convinced me.

"Well, it's his bad luck," I said to myself, "if he wants a fight so badly I feel sorry for him. He will receive a good beating. I will stop the fight as soon as there is danger and he will get a good lesson."

Even then the intuition that Carnera was the man of the Idea had not yet taken form in my spirit. I do not understand why I had not sensed it by then. But it was necessary that a word, said by accident in the opportune moment, should open my eyes, giving me the revelation. The word and time were near.

I had not shown Carnera to any of the promoters. Although his presence at Saint-Germain-en-Laye caused great curiosity among the inhabitants of the small town, he was unknown in Paris. The newspapers had not printed a word about him.

Urged by the giant, I decided to introduce him to the great Parisian promoter, Jefferson Davis Dickson, the native American, who has done so much for sport in Europe.

THE YOUNG 'FLYWEIGHT'

"Let us see what his reaction is," I said to myself; "he may find an exceptionally easy adversary for my pupil."

The next morning, accompanied by Carnera, I arrived at the famous promoter's office. I entered

Primo Nurses Jinxes–Many Of Them

The "pig on the pants" (the wild boar insignia of my stable of boxers) is not Primo's only superstition. In fact, the big fellow, like most pugilists, believes very much in jinx, etc.

For instance, if you visit him in his room, you had better not lay your hat on the bed! That is a sure omen of bad luck—at least to your hat, for Primo's idea of counter-acting the ill effects of such a hoodoo is to punch the hat half a dozen times, particularly if it is a derby!

Now, in Primo's mind, it is perhaps worse still to place a loaf of bread upside down on the dining table.

If ever the toss results in Primo having to wear the purple trunks, he will gladly pay a hundred dollars to change to the red-and-black ones.

Primo wore purple tights when he fought Maloney in Boston and also on one or two other occasions where he was robbed of the decision, and that's that!

CRACK SCHOOL QUINTETS TO PLAY TODAY

A hefty program confronts the scholastic basketballers today as both City League and W. P. I. A. L. quintets resume championship action.

In the city circuit, in Section I, Schenley meets Fifth Avenue and South takes on Connelley. The latter contest looms as one of the most important of the season. To date, both teams have been racing along at a great clip and are tied for the lead in the section.

In Section II, Oliver takes on Langley, South Hills meets Allegheny and Vocational battles Perry. Langley and South Hills are deadlocked for the lead and both figure to win today's clashes.

Some important tussles are scheduled in the W. P. I. A. L. For example, in Section III, Butler meets Beaver Falls at Beaver Falls. In Section VI, Leechburg and Ford City clash, and in Section VII, Munhall tests Bill Campbell's Homestead five. Homestead long has held athletic sway over Munhall, but this year it looks as if the Steelers may have to back down. Leastways, Coach Campbell is plenty worried over tonight's struggle.

Other outstanding frays find Greensburg and Jeannette matched in Section X, Ambridge at Monaca in Section IV, Hurst and Connellsville in Section XI and Scott and Braddock and Rankin and Swissvale in Section VIII.

STRAW SHOE CHAMP

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Sinking his "ringers" dead to the peg, Steward Straw, of Berwindale, Clearfield County, today won the farmer horseshoe pitching championship of Pennsylvania. Straw defeated Park Wilson, of Hickory, Washington County, 50-38, 50-28.

REPORT GIVES COLLEGES PAT

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—American universities are taking the financing of athletic sports out of the hands of committees, are soft-pedaling athletic scholarships, and are resisting the commercialization of athletics, the Association of American Colleges was told here today.

A report of survey made by the colleges was read at the annual meeting of the group by Daniel Marsh, president of Boston University. It was prepared by Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, head of a committee on college athletics.

Referring to a report on college athletics, made in 1928 by the Carnegie Foundation, Mr. Gates asserted that from this report may be dated the housecleaning on a large scale that occurred in a good many colleges, and the reorganization of departments of physical education and athletics.

Facts and figures for the 1933 trend were compiled from more than 200 explanations made by presidents, deans and directors of colleges and universities.

W.-J. QUINTET LOSES, 28-24

HUNTINGDON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—With neither team gaining more than a four-point lead at any time, the Indians of Juniati College handed the Presidents of Washington and Jefferson at 28-to-24 defeat on the basketball court last night.

The Presidents' attack was led by Barkell, center, who equalled the point-score of Garner for the game. Each man dropped four field goals into the net. The lineup:

New Contract for Davies

CHARLES R. (CHICK) DAVIES SIGNING NEW THREE-YEAR CONTRACT AS DUKES' COACH

Davies, popular coach of the undefeated Duquesne University basketball team, who concludes his tenth year as mentor of the Bluffites in September, signed a new contract for three years at noon today in the office of the Rev. M. J. Brannigan, vice president of Duquesne University, as shown above. Father Brannigan appears with him. Davies' record as coach shows two City championships and three Tri-State Conference titles. He will be graduated from Duquesne's School of Education in June. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

Carnegie Tech takes its turn at attempting to check the mad dash of Duquesne University's high-powered basketball machine tonight as the Skibos entertain the Dukes in the Tartan gymnasium.

The game is the third of the annual round-robin series for the city title, involving the Tartans, Dukes and Pitt. So far, the Dukes have a strangle hold on the situation, having already beaten Pitt. Pitt, in turn, defeated Tech Tuesday night, so there is plenty of incentive for a Carnegie win tonight.

DUKES FAVORED

However, the Dukes will enter the contest very much on the long end of what wagering there may be. Duquesne figures to have too much experience and speed for the Plaid warriors, who hardly have recovered from their grueling battle with Pitt on Tuesday.

Coach Max Hannum is contemplating making a change in his starting lineup for tonight, a change made necessary through the injury to Gibson, star sophomore forward. Spisak may get the call over Gibby, although Coach Max will not have made up his mind definitely before game time.

If the Dukes take this one, they'll sport the finest consecutive basketball victory record now existing among American colleges. The triumph will be No. 23, which will put 'em one up on Notre Dame, which has won 22 in a row.

Chick Davies, the worried young man at the head of the basketball department at Duquesne, figures on starting his regulars against the Techs and hopes they'll start off more impressively tonight than they did Tuesday when they were led for the first half by Geneva.

The freshman fives of the rival institutions will clash in a preliminary tussle, scheduled to get under way at 7:15 o'clock. The varsity game is set for 8:30.

Carnegie Tech will be Navy's first opponent in small bore rifle competition this season. Officials of the Naval Academy announced today that the match will be shot at Annapolis January 27.

PITT ON EDGE

Doc Carlson has his Panthers at a fine edge for their important tussle with Notre Dame tomorrow, one of the most important college basketball games ever offered in Pittsburgh.

The Panthers were not unduly pressed by Tech Tuesday and are in tip-top physical condition for the battle. There will be no starting of the second team against the Irish, for it will never do to permit the South Benders to get off to any sort of a flying lead.

Victorious but once in five starts on the Stadium floor, the Irish will attempt to break the jinx that has always bothered it in its Pittsburgh appearances tomorrow night. The last defeat handed this present combination of South Benders was dished out by Pitt right here in Pittsburgh just about one year ago.

ARMY SETS CARD

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A return of Harvard to the Plains for an October game features the 1935 football schedule of Army announced yesterday by Major Ludson D. Worsham, graduate manager of athletics.

With Harvard coming to West Point the Corps will get a trip to Pittsburgh for a game with the Panthers on November 9. The corps of cadet is allowed only four trips away from home during the year and when the Crimson is played at Cambridge that trip generally is elected.

West Va. Cancels Navy Floor Game

A revision in the examination schedule forces 12 members of the basketball team to keep engagements with professors, thereby preventing them from making the trip to Annapolis.

HOCKEY LEAGUE PLANS FADE

Indications today were that Carnegie Tech's will be the only local college hockey team to play a schedule of more than a game or two.

Duquesne plans to meet Tech in one, and possibly two games, but plans for a local college circuit, to be made up of Tech, Pitt and Duquesne, have just about evaporated.

The Tartans propose to continue to practice regularly, and to meet Eastern college teams and independent sextets before the season's close. They are to hold their next workout at Duquesne Garden Sunday morning.

In goal Tech has F. S. Dubin, former Connecticut football, track and hockey star. Hudson, former Kiski ace; Adamson, who received his training in Canada, and Dickson make up a sturdy defense trio. Higgins and Bell, Canadian products, and Jerge, Ailles, Kelly, Fuechie and Dona are the front line candidates.

Jess Coulter, brother of Tom Coulter, former Carnegie Tech star, will be at defense for the J. Scott Morgans when the undefeated leaders of the City Hockey League oppose the Sewickley Red Ravens at Duquesne Garden tomorrow night. Jess, an experienced performer, this season transferred from the Hershey, (Pa.) team to the Baltimore team of the Eastern League. A fractured shoulder which resulted in his return to Pittsburgh, has healed sufficiently to permit his return to action.

Temple Announces 1934 Grid Card

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Two night games and a possible Thanksgiving Day contest with Bucknell are included in Temple University's football Schedule for next season.

Putting an end to reports that Glenn S. (Pop) Warner's gridiron pupils would play all games in daylight next fall, the schedule lists Texas A. and M. for a night game on October 5 and West Virginia two weeks later.

Temple's schedule follows:

September 29, Virginia Poly; October 13, Indiana University; October 27, Marquette at Milwaukee; November 3, Holy Cross; November 10, Carnegie Tech; November 24, Villanova.

Leon See's 'Inside Story' Of Carnera's Career

alone, leaving Carnera outside. I greeted Jeff with:

"My dear friend, I have brought you a tiny flyweight. I consider him an excellent prospect. Could you arrange a fight for him next week?"

"What's his name?" asked Dickson.

"It doesn't matter, you don't know him. However, his name is Carnera."

"Carnera! I never heard of a fighter of that name. Besides, you know, flyweights are not good box-office attractions. Moreover, if your flyweight were any good, I would have heard about him. Better bring me a heavyweight."

"Just the same, I would like to present my flyweight to you," I suggested without smiling; "you will see if he interests you."

"All right. If you want to, tell him to come in."

JOKE ON PROMOTER

To this day I can remember Dickson's astonished face when—after expecting to see a little man weighing 50 kilograms (about 108 pounds)—he beheld framed in the door-case an individual who occupied all the space and whose head had to be bent low in order that he could enter.

For a moment Jeff remained speechless.

"What! . . . Who! What is this? Who is he?" he shouted.

"This is my flyweight!"

Dickson had arisen. His face revealed the most varied expressions in succession: stupefaction, amusement, interest and already calculation.

"And he knows how to box?"

"A little, not much."

"Astounding! What an attraction! . . . He will be a sensation . . . but where the Devil did you find him?"

HIS FIRST FIGHT

It was necessary to recount the whole story, my trip to out-of-the-way Arcachon, the sandals like bellows in the dust, my hesitation, the arrival in Paris, the training at Saint-Germain-en-Laye, Primo's early progress and, at last, his insistance on wanting to fight.

"Why, certainly, I will arrange a fight for him. . . . I should say so. . . . Never seen anything like him."

"I do not want a very tough opponent," I put in.

"What do you want? Your man is a heavyweight or I don't know my own name. . . . I can't have him facing a featherweight. With such stature, and reach and weight he should be invincible. Here, I will have him fight Sebillo, next Wednesday in the Salle Wagram semi-final. I will give him 1,000 francs. I don't know of any boxer who has been paid that much money (about $40) for the first fight of his career. As you see, I am spoiling you."

Sebillo was not a champion, but he had considerable ring experience. I hesitated . . . but Carnera begged me to accept and I signed with reluctance and the idea that I was committing a blunder. We left, Primo exultant; I deep in thought.

A FORMIDABLE MAN

A man like that should never be beaten, I reflected . . . but even then the relation between Carnera and the Idea did not come to me yet. . . .

On that fateful September night in 1928, at the Wagram Hall, Primo, full of confidence, was undressing in a big room in the basement. Stripped to the waist he sat on a bench, leaning forward, his enormous chest almost touching his knees; his large hands busy tieing the laces of his stupendous shoes. All of which was truly eye-filling.

By chance, at the same moment, one of my best pals descended to the basement. He was Antoine Boyer, who had been my friend for 20 years. He had never seen Carnera and came to ask me to introduce him.

"They told me that he was formidable," Boyer remarked to me, "but he exceeds further the idea which I had of him. What breadth of shoulders . . . he is really formidable!"

'WILL NEVER BE BEATEN'

And it was at this exact moment that Boyer pronounced the phrase—the phrase which brought forth the ray of light:

"Such a man must never be beaten!"

I was as one dazzled. The Idea! Carnera, the man of the IDEA! And I said to Boyer:

"He will never be beaten!"

The Zivic brothers, Eddie and Fritzie, are in for tough tests in bouts in California next Monday and Tuesday nights, a letter from their manager, Luke Carney, reveals.

Eddie boxes Fred Zavelitch in a four-round windup at Pico, Cal., on Monday, and Fritzie goes to the post against Baby Sal Sorio in a four-rounder in the Los Angeles Olympic arena the following night, on a card headed by Baby Arizmendi and Vias Mark Dias in a 10-rounder.

Sorio once boxed Tod Morgan for the junior-lightweight title in a bout which drew a large gate. Fritzie was working out with Eddie Ran until the latter returned East recently.

The Zivics plan to leave California for home at the end of January, traveling by easy stages and stopping off for bouts. They expect to play a big part in the outdoor program here next summer.

Al Rossi, Newark middleweight, will come here direct from his bout with Red Affinito in New York's Madison Square Garden tonight for his 10-round windup battle with Billy Holt, which will usher in the season at McKeesport, Monday night.

The McKeesport card was completed today with the signing of Farmer Bill Schwerin, making his professional debut, against Kid Berry in the six-round opener. Dominic Mancini meets Joey Bazzone in the eight round semi-final, and Irish Jimmy Ferry and Joey Adams are in the second bout.

Headquarters of the Ted Yarosz-Jimmy Smith fight in the Seventh Avenue Hotel are being swamped daily by fans buying tickets in advance for the show, fearful of being frozen out in the impending sellout of the limited capacity of the Garden. Pittsburgh's first legalized 15-round bout, with the State middleweight title at stake, has caught on that way.

LOCAL WOMAN WINS

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Mrs. Sarah Fownes Wadsworth, of Pittsburgh, yesterday won the Class A trophy in a handicap medal play event of the Silver Foils Golfing Society. Her score was 85-5—80. Mrs. Emmet French, of Southern Pines, was second with 94-11—83 and Mrs. H. J. Blue, of Pittsburgh, third, with 97-10—87.

HEAVY SQUASH CARD SET FOR WEEK-END

A heavy week-end of squash racqueting looms ahead locally with the Pittsburgh-Cleveland-Buffalo interurban competition set for the Keystone A. C. tomorrow and Sunday; the second annual Pittsburgh Golf Club invitation singles tournament spurting off to a Saturday getaway, and windup of class B competition in the P. S. R. A. Inter-Club League rounding out the bill. The high point of the campaign from angle of both quality and quantity of play appears definitely in the offing.

City Champion McCook Reed tops Ben Pope's quintet that will seek to stand off the Buckeye and Bison invaders. Backing him will most likely be his Keystone conferees, Henry Blaxter, Bill Bickell, Ed Seifert and Charley Fagan. Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, P. A. A. ace, rejected a bid to cavort for the Steel Citians when compelled to choose between the squash event and the indoor tennis tourney currently in progress on the Pittsburgh Golf Club covered courts. Cleveland offers such stars as Andy Ingraham, LeRoy Weir and George Francis for the impending action, while Buffalo's lineup will include talent of the caliber of Cy Polley, Jack Nitterour and Adrian Smith.

Cleveland and Buffalo will inaugurate the inter-city series at 11 a. m. tomorrow. The Ohioans will return to battle at 3:30 p. m., when they will clash with Pittsburgh. Sunday feature brings together Buffalo and Pittsburgh, teams that tussled a year ago here, with the victory going to the New York staters. All engagements will be staged on the fine new K. A. C. board courts.

Forty-four racqueters, including virtually every active performer in the district, will square off in the Pittsburgh Golf Club conclave. W. Barnet Wolfe and J. K. Ebbert are handling the meet with the able assistance of Warren Kruger. First and second round hostilities will occupy attention from tomorrow until Monday and jousting will be continued throughout the week. Because of the size of the field, entrants are urgently requested to present themselves promptly at hours listed for play. The pairings and schedule follow:

VINES, TILDEN ALL EVEN

CLEVELAND, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Young Ellsworth Vines has evened the road tour tennis series with big Bill Tilden at three matches all in a short power show which included a spray of baffling drives and a breath-taking service good for 17 aces.

Tilden utilized his contract privilege to shorten the match to three sets last night when he saw the crowd of 2,300 at the Coliseum virtually spilling over the edges of the court. Vines' victory was on scores of 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 19.—(Universal.)—Officials of the Cleveland Baseball Company today received word that Mel Harder, pitcher for the Cleveland Indians, now at Omaha, Neb., had mailed a proffered contract back unsigned. BOOKIE READY TO GET BACK IN LINEUP

By TOM BIRKS

With so much at stake in Sunday's game with Morgan, it is likely that Manager Johnny Bruce, of the Curry Soccer Club, may take a chance and inject Mike Bookie into the lineup for the national open cup game at Greenlee Field.

On last Sunday's form, there is little to choose between the two clubs, and the introduction of a player of Bookie's class may swing the tide of victory to the South Park aggregation. Bookie crushed some of his toes in a mine accident early in the season and the injury has slowly mended. However, Mike appears to be willing to get back into harness and Bruce may take the chance.

Fred Donnelli again will be in the backfield as partner for Cimerolli, despite the fact that many soccer critics feel that Fred would fit into the club better in the forward line.

Morgan does not intend to make any lineup changes, according to Dave Matthews. Dante Villani and Cyle are classy fullbacks, but Felix Mitchell certainly plays a lone hand in that forward line.

In the Central League tomorrow three games are scheduled. The Strip has a battle all of its own as the Rovers clash with Arsenal, Clan Douglas goes to Beltzhoover and Dunwick meets Old Carnegie at Beadling.

Two important league meetings are scheduled for this evening. The fate of the Mon-Yough circuit will be decided at Monessen as the officials meet in Turner Hall, and the Keystone League has a get-together at the Rosie store in Bridgeville. Both sessions will get under way at 8 o'clock.

Presidents of the leagues involved want all managers and club representatives to be on hand. President Doig and Secretary Alcorn, of the local governing body, will be at the Monessen meeting.

WOLFE, M'CASKEY WIN IN LOCAL NET TOURNEY

SINGLE UPSET MARKS PLAY AT GOLF CLUB

By PAUL C. SULLIVAN

Second, third and perhaps quarter-final round contests comprise hectic program this evening as the fourth annual Pittsburgh Golf Club invitation indoor men's doubles tennis tournament swings into the pitch of serious competition. With the starting field of 34 teams already reduced to 21 in consequence of yesterday's inaugural play, the covered court classic should pass the unwieldy stage before start of the Saturday matinee bill.

Thirteen tussles, with nary a default, were run off last night as Chairman Charley Lockhart and Professional Warren Kruger drove the combatants far beyond 11 o'clock. Prevalence of extra-set fracases, there were no less than six of 'em, prolonged the soiree considerably.

WOLFE, M'CASKEY WIN

Karl Wolfe and Stan McCaskey, brand new Stanton-Edgewood combination, sprang the surprise of the opener by eliminating George Henderson and Russ Unger, hard-driving Stantonians and fifth seeded array, 6-1, 2-6, 10-8, in slashing skirmish signalized by the splendid consistency of McCaskey and the indomitable, often brilliant, resistance of Wolfe. Other favored outfits, the O'Loughlins, Dr. Billy McEllroy and Collie Burgwin, Frank Broida and Irvin Goodman and Bob Madden and Ralph Bald, copped in consecutive cantos.

The summary:

Lower half—Dr. William S. McEllroy and G. C. Burgwin, Jr., defeated Dr. Charles H. Cochran and Charles B. Maits, Jr., 6-4, 6-1.

Second round: Upper half—Dr. David L. O'Loughlin and Dr. John L. O'Loughlin defeated George B. Berger and A. Rex Flinn, 6-2, 6-1; Robert McClintic and James Bovard defeated William Frew and A. S. Humphreys, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3; Thomas A. Robinson and Stanley Brown defeated John R. Brown and Don C. Snyder, 6-3, 6-3; Jack Redmond and Paul G. Sullivan defeated H. M. JONES TO PLAY IN TOURNEY

By ROBERT G. NIXON
International News Service.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 19.—Bobby Jones, retired emperor of the links, will definitely return to the golfing wars this winter.

But this time he'll be out for fun instead of blood.

Bobby, in announcing his emergence from retirement in an exclusive interview today with International News Service, wants it distinctly understood, however, that he isn't staging a "comeback" attempt.

He hasn't changed his mind since he hung up his clubs three years ago and said that the sweets of victory were just sour grapes under the nerve-wracking strain of title play. He said:

"I don't want to go through that again."

He will dig out his trusty putter, Calamity Jane, and his other championship sticks and fare forth on his own Augusta National Links, March 22, to pit his skill against the cream of the world's professional and amateur golfers for the first time since he tucked them away in September, 1930.

But his return to competition probably will be only a brief interlude in his retirement. He says he has no ambitions again to compete for the National Open championship and has no plans for entering any other tournament. He said:

"This tournament is on my own course and is one in which I naturally am intensely interested. That's why I'm playing in it."

The club has invited approximately 75 professionals and some 15 to 20 amateurs from the United States and foreign countries to compete in the event, the first since Bobby's course was opened last year. The cash prize awards will total $5,000. All acceptances are not yet in, so that the invitation list still remains a secret.

MISS BETTY ROBINSON . . . SHE PLANS COMEBACK

1928 Olympic Champ Speaker at Local High Schools

By JULIUS LEVIN

The time-worn adage—"They never come back"—has been tossed into discard by one of the greatest girl sprinters ever to represent the United States in the Olympic Games.

Miss Betty Robinson, who won the 100-meter sprinting championship in the 1928 Olympic Games at Amsterdam and whose brilliant athletic career was believed to have been terminated as a result of painful injuries suffered in an airplane crash in 1931, not only has recovered completely, but is actually planning to stage a comeback.

TALKS AT SCHOOLS

Miss Robinson is concluding a week's tour of the district high schools, speaking on "The American Girl in Athletics" under the auspices of the Henry Clay Frick Educational Commission.

Believed to be crippled for life as a result of compound fractures of the left leg and hip, Miss Robinson has amazed medical authorities by her rapid recovery. She shows no ill effects from the mishap, which has left her cousin, the pilot of the plane, an invalid.

Miss Robinson, in her talks to the local high school students, revealed that she has started training for a comeback. Aside from a little stiffness in her left leg, all signs of the 1931 near-tragedy have disappeared.

At the time of the airplane crash, Miss Robinson was said to have been more seriously injured than her pilot. She was in a state of coma for seven weeks as a result of a concussion. Her companion still requires the use of crutches. She attributes her recovery to the vitality she built up as an athlete.

TELLS OF GAMES

In her talks to the pupils, Miss Robinson relates her athletic experiences, dwelling mainly on her trip to the 1928 Olympic Games at Amsterdam. She was the only American girl to qualify for the 100-meter final, in which she defeated three Canadian and two German rivals in the remarkable time of :12.1, a new Olympic record.

Miss Robinson stresses seven points which play an important part in the making of a typical American girl. The seven requirements she outlines are:

Miss Robinson is a graduate of Northwestern University, where she was a member of the basketball, swimming and rifle teams.

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Baseball news first begins to pop at Hot Springs on top of a winter of discontent on the part of many an athlete. Uncle Sam's Arkansas reservation is a convenient and enjoyable spot for the lads who like to take off weight . . . Fred Clarke's Buccos trained at the Spa through many seasons and George Gibson and Bill McKechniee also led Pittsburgh outfits to the Ozark foothills for spring training stunts.

Gibson still is a "Dan O'Leary," but 20 years ago he was said to be such a fierce walker that the rookies who tried to follow him up and down the mountains come back in a state of collapse . . . Whenever it rained, Clarke would remark casually to his youngsters that they were to go for a walk with Gibson . . . Then for something like five hours the kids would try to stay in Gibby's footsteps.

Gibson yesterday smiled as he went into retrospect on a raw-boned rookie named Pie Traynor, who went to Hot Springs with the Pirates in the spring of 1921 . . . Somerville Pie did everything wrong at the outset, but there was a determination about him that made a hit with everybody in camp . . . Harold Joseph could run as fast the first day out as the last . . . Everybody dropped what they were doing to see him sprint around the sacks in the batting sessions, and he addressed Gibby as "Mr. Gibson."

Traynor had no idea of scientific baserunning when he joined the Pirates 13 years ago and the fact that he developed into one of the best path artists on the club was due to his perseverance . . . As Gibby remarked:

"Most of the players crabbed a little about the two long workouts which I insisted on having, but these were not enough for Pie . . . He would ask for permission to stay on the diamond during the luncheon period in order to brush himself on baserunning pointers offered by Scoops Carey."

Speaking of baserunning, the Pirates are not likely to be as apt in larceny as they have been during the past few years, inasmuch as their two Polish Flyers are headed down the river to Cincy . . . Polish athletes of a varied hue appear to have the gift of speed . . . Stanley Ketchel was said to have had plenty of the mercury stuff and the football fields are dotted with the fair-haired gentry that fly over the terrain.

The Rotary Club of East Pittsburgh together with Coach Johnny Coleman's crack football squad of the town's high school were thrilled yesterday when Bill Benswanger featured as principal speaker at the luncheon given by the Rotarians in honor of the gridders . . . Benswanger, Gibby, Honus Wagner, Lloyd Waner and Rosey Rowswell took their act to Braddock last night and the Pirate president has two bookings for today, one at Steubenville and the other at Crafton.

Runyon's Daughter Weds Sports Scribe

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—True to the traditions of her family, Mary Blaine Runyon, chaming and talented daughter of Damon Runyon, has married a newspaperman. He is Dick McCann, a sports writer of Washington, D. C., and the young couple will spend part of their honeymoon at Biloxi, Miss., where McCann will cover the training camp of the American League Champion Senators.

Like all budding sports scribes, who tour the Southland with the ball boys in the spring, the young man likely will pick the team to which he is assigned to win the pennant. Which it may in this particular case. Surely Joe Cronin's hustling outfit must be given a good chance to repeat.

VETERAN DE ORO HOLDS LEAD IN CUE PLAY

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Alfredo De Oro, 71-year-old New York billiard star, goes into the third quarter of the national three-cushion championship tournament today with a half-game lead over his nearest rival, Kinrey Matsuyama, also of New York.

Brilliant shooting in the last two frames saved the Japanese from defeat last night. Matsuyama was trailing the third New Yorker, Arthur Woods, until the fiftieth inning. Then he shot two frames of six each to run out the game, 50 to 45. The 51 innings made it the shortest match yet played.

De Oro, eastern sectional champion, has won four straight games; Matsuyama has taken four and lost one.

De Oro won the longest game of the tourney by a single point yesterday, defeating Earl Lookabaugh, of Chicago, 50 to 49 in 74 innings. In the day's other match Charles McCourt, of Cleveland, bested Robert B. Harper, of Denver, 50 to 41 in 65 frames.

The Cuban leader meets McCourt today. Matsuyama is idle and Kenney gets a chance to tie him for second place by beating Woods. Harper opposes Marc Catton, of Oakland, Cal., in the remaining match.

LEVINSKY GETS TITLE BREAK

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The will o'wisp match of boxing, a heavyweight title bout between Primo Carnera and Max Baer, flitted out the window again as negotiations in progress several days were terminated abruptly yesterday.

Col. John R. Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden, ended discussions he had carried on first with Jack Dempsey, then with Ancil Hoffman, manager of Baer, when the latter refused to sign with the Garden for future fights just in case the big Californian won Carnera's heavyweight title.

As a result the Garden promptly launched a campaign to build King Levinsky, Chicago heavyweight, to stature of a legitimate title challenger. The Garden signed Levinsky for two bouts, the first against Charley Massera, February 9, the second against Walter Neusel, March 2.

Levinsky, his sister Lena, who acts as his manager, and officials of the Chicago Stadium Corporation, came here yesterday seeking a match in Chicago with Max Schmeling, former heavyweight titleholder, due here today from Germany to start a comeback campaign. Unable to reach any sort of agreement with Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling, the Kingfish and his sister moved over to the Garden at a most opportune moment.

Weight, Mat Stars In Title Tourneys

College, athletic club and Y. M. C. A. wrestlers and weight lifters today were concluding their training for the Allegheny Mountain Association Junior championships, to be staged at the Boys' Club of Pittsburgh, 4412 Butler street, at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

J. Kipp, of Gettysburg College, is to referee the mat bouts, and Loughran and Coxe are to serve as judges. John F. Britt is to referee the weight lifting events, in which John and Joseph Opatchen will serve as judges. The entry lists are large, and keen competition is anticipated.

Mel Ott Signs With Giant Club

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The business of bringing the world series heroes into the fold for 1934 proceeded in orderly fashion yesterday with the announcement the New York Giants had received the signed contract of little Mel Ott, the boy slugger from Gretna, La.

Although no figures were revealed, it was indicated Ott shared in the financial upswing which has already been marked by substantial increases in salary for Manager Bill Terry and Carl Hubbell, the southpaw pitcher.

IOWA, U. S. C. FEUD FLARES

International News Service.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Jan. 19.—Around the disappearance of two University of Iowa freshman athletes a controversy today appeared to be brewing between this institution and the University of Southern California.

Reports that the two freshmen, Duane Swanson and Fred Froning, departed for the Pacific Coast school with their baggage sent in care of Sam Barry, U. S. C. basketball coach, caused Rollie Williams, Iowa's mentor, to protest.

By telegram Williams said he informed Barry that neither Swanson nor Froning ever will compete as Southern California athletes. Barry was formerly Iowa's floor coach, and Williams was his assistant.

"Someone from Southern California has been contacting athletes here for some time."

INNOCENT, TROJANS SAY

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Athletic heads of the University of Southern California today denied reports from Iowa City, Ia., that Iowa athletes were being lured here. Willis O. Hunter, director of athletics here, declared:

"If Bud Froning and Duane Swanson, freshman athletes at Iowa, are en route here to transfer to the University of Southern California, we, like Will Rogers, know only what we read in the papers.

"The Iowa migration to California has been going on for some time, and it doesn't seem to be in our power to stop it.

"However, if the boys do arrive we shall endeavor to persuade them to return. It always has been our policy to persuade students to remain at the college of their first choice."

YALE TO NAME NEW FOOTBALL COACH SOON

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The cogs in the machinery of the Yale Athletic Association moved more swiftly today as the appointment of a football head coach was imminent.

In response to the controversy stirring among graduates and undergraduates alike as to who should coach Yale football, the date for a decision was advanced from about February 1 to the first of next week.

The board of athletic control met last night in New Haven, and the advisory football committee was reported in session in New York.

When word first came that no decision would be made before February 1, a protest arose that the delay was designed to let the agitation for an "outsider" die down.

Schwartz Signed As Chicago Aide

GENEVA QUINT SCORES VICTORY OVER THIEL

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Geneva last night captured its second Tri-State Conference basketball battle of the season, defeating Thiel 46 to 38.

The Greenville club pushed the Beavers hard throughout the first half. Littell's accuracy on set shots gave Geneva a fairly comfortable lead in the later stages of the game.

STOCKS PUSH UP; DOLLAR RECEDES

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Financial markets displayed climbing tendencies today as the dollar lost most of its yesterday's advance in foreign exchange dealings.

While there was no wild rush for either stocks or staples, prices pointed upward during most of the session. Support shifted from group to group in the share transactions, with the rails and industrials stepping forward briskly at intervals. Wheat recovered more than a cent a bushel and cotton and other commodities improved. The continued demand for bonds at substantially higher quotations was encouraging to the financial district.

The sharp early rally of sterling apparently was not unexpected in some brokerage circles, although just what effect the turnabout had on equity prices was a matter of argument. Most traders, it was said, are not now basing their operating judgment entirely upon foreign exchange movements.

There was a tendency among bankers, however, to deplore the wide swings in international dollar rates and the hope was expressed that a currency conference among the leading powers would be inaugurated soon. Such a meeting, it was believed by some financiers, might be held in Washington.

Wall street was impressed with the Federal Reserve Board's January bulletin on economic conditions which found general stability of business activity, an increase in the aggregate volume of employment, a considerable increase in the income of wage earners and substantial gains in net profits of large corporations during the second and third quarters of the past year. An investment survey said:

"The outlook for business activity over the coming several months has been materially improved by the rather momentous events since the turn of the year. Government spending at a rapid pace is one of the most potent forces making for this better outlook. The more distant risks of an inflationary nature have not been eliminated. They have merely been pushed into the obscure future. The question of how business will react when the 'prop' of government spending is removed, for instance, remains to be answered by events a number of months ahead, perhaps as late as next autumn. These problems, however, do not affect the immediate future of business conditions. The nearby prospect is reassuring, both in respect to business activity and in regard to prices."

RETAIL DEMAND BROADENING

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—General trade movements were slower this week, but developments were sufficiently numerous to furnish a background for the continuance of recovery, said the Dun & Bradstreet Weekly Trade Review today. It continued:

"While the year has not advanced sufficiently to reveal the breadth of the recovery now under way, the first quarter at least seems destined to be characterized by fewer interruptions than marked the checkered course of that period in 1933.

"Even though considerable unevenness appeared in the trend of retail demand in many sections of the country, volume was maintained practically at the level established thus far in January, which ranges from 10 to 20 per cent above the extremely reduced position of January a year ago.

"Retail sales in the majority of lines are now sufficiently above those for the comparative period a year ago to confirm the belief that consumer demand definitely has assumed broader proportions.

WHEAT PRICES TURN UP

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—An upward trend showed itself in grain markets early today. A jump in sterling had a stimulating effect, and so too did strength displayed by securities.

Opening ⅝ to 1¼ up, wheat afterward gained further. Corn started ⅛ to ½ higher, and subsequently altered little.

General buying, together with scantiness of offerings, accompanied advances of wheat values. Bulls urged that the wheat market had been sold out, and that a recovery was overdue. Corn and oats were responsive to wheat price upturns and to advices that other markets were overbidding Chicago for corn in Chicago territory.

LOCAL MARKET MOVEMENTS NARROW

Securities on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange maintained a steady to firm tone in the early dealings today as the New York market went ahead on the rise which has been in progress since the middle of last week. Initial changes in the active stocks here were confined to fractions with the market showing a slightly smaller volume than was handled in the initial trading yesterday. Fuels were quiet and there was less activity in the heavy industrial section.

Harbison-Walker showed a small fractional recession on its initial trade while bids and offers for the other heavy manufacturing stocks were about at the levels prevailing on the close last night. Plymouth Oil was up sharply from its last previous sale, recorded several days ago. The brewing issues were handled in moderate lots at unchanged quotations.

COTTON VALUES RULE STEADY

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Cotton futures opened steady, unchanged to 4 higher on steadier Liverpool cables and higher foreign exchange. March, 11.20; May, 11.30; July, 11.43; October, 11.63; December, 11.77.

The market continued very steady later in the morning. The trade continued to buy March while there was more covering or commission house buying in the later deliveries which may have been influenced by the action of the stock market. March contracts sold up to 11.27 and July to 11.56 with active months ruling about 12 to 15 points net higher at midday. Some local spot houses reported a fairly good business overnight.

Trading was moderately active at the start with the market meeting further liquidation or scattered selling, but offerings were absorbed by the trade. There was also some commission house buying or covering, and while the volume of business tapered off after the call, prices held generally steady.

March contracts worked up to 11.24 and July to 11.54 by the end of the first half hour, making net advances of about 8 to 13 points on the active months. The opening action of the stock and grain markets was an encouraging factor. Offerings were comparatively light after the early pressure had run its course.

DOLLAR DROPS IN EXCHANGE

Associated Press.

The dollar was buffeted around in a stormy foreign exchange market today and, unable to resist the strong tides of profit taking and factors connected with governmental monetary policies, developed acute weakness.

At London the American unit abruptly retraced its path of yesterday and after a firm opening at $4.95½ to the pounds sterling dipped to $5.05⅛ under an avalanche of selling orders and then steadied to close at $5.02, off 6¾ cents net. In New sterling also rallied sharply.

In Paris the dollar had comparatively easy selling and finished 8 centimes lower at an equivalent of 6.29 cents to the franc. In New York the French currency was unchanged at 6.24½ cents.

In terms of the franc the dollar was valued at approximately 62.77 per cent of parity. Based on the domestic gold price of $34.05 an ounce, it had a theoretical value of 60 per cent of its former parity.

DOLLAR VALUE VERSION HELD 'ALL WRONG'

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—You rarely find as much misunderstanding and half-baked thinking as now exists concerning money.

In a recent article, it is said that the latest change in our monetary policy is the first definite action to reconstruct the international monetary system taken since 1931.

But the fact is that there is not one single definite feature in the policy. Our policy is not taken for the purpose of reconstructing an international system. And why stop at 1931? Apparently that year is picked to shut out the earlier definite revaluation of their currencies in gold by France and Italy, and England's courageous, but ill-timed attempt.

DOLLAR'S VALUE

More astounding still, is the statement that the new policy is a definite commitment to hold the dollar between 50 cents and 60 cents gold, and that the dollar thus becomes the first international currency to have "some publicly known relation to an objective measure of value."

The latest change in "policy" makes no commitment whatever to hold the dollar to any level of value. The American dollar is, and will remain, a paper dollar. The value of that dollar depends entirely upon what it buys. If wheat sells for a dollar a bushel, then the value of the dollar is one bushel of wheat, etc. That is all there is to it.

And the purpose is to raise prices to a "fairer" level. That must mean to reduce the value, or purchasing power of the dollar.

NO DEFINITE RELATION

No definite relation between the dollar and gold is suggested or proposed. There is talk of a 50-60 cent dollar; but that is 20 per cent indefinite, and that concerns just a theoretical "gold dollar."

You and I can't have any gold dollars. There is no convertibility of paper into gold. Silver dollars at a greatly overvalued rate may be substituted. More than that, there is no limit to the amount of paper dollars to be issued.

And why say the first "international" currency? I doubt if the dollar is any more international currency than the franc. Nor is it true that the franc is overvalued. (It has already been devalued 80 per cent.) If the value of the franc is uncertain, it is solely because of our inflationary manipulations, which are disturbing all currencies.

'ROOSEVELT DOLLAR'

It is said that the "Roosevelt dollar" has its value "publicly and legally" fixed. This is absolutely untrue.

In the first place, no government can fix the value of anything—wheat, cotton or dollars. The value of a thing depends upon what it will exchange for. That depends upon demand and supply — upon what individual buyers and sellers think.

To say the value of the dollar is "publicly and legally" fixed is to say that we have "fiat money!"

You see, even if a definite quantity of gold (somewhere between 11.61 and 13.93 grains!) is put in "the gold dollar," that doesn't determine what a dollar is worth. We use paper dollars —reserve notes, silver certificates, and bank checks.

I challenge anyone to say what the dollars we use are worth—in gold or anything else.

AUTOMATIC STANDARD

We are told that we must understand that the American policy does not resemble an "automatic gold standard." Well, what does it resemble? There can be no real gold standard but an automatic one.

The crowning piece of logic is the suggestion that for a real gold standard we substitute a monetary Supreme Court of eminent gentlemen, who will from time to time hand down decisions as to what the dollar is worth! You see, that is not a gold standard at all. These cloistered gentlemen would decide. That would give us a judicial fiat money.

Money Deal Brings New Hubbub

By B. C. FORBES

NO SOONER did we get the NRA hubbub off front pages, than currency agitation and speculation and distraction obtruded.

Mr. Forbes

The sooner all this disturbance subsides, the better the prospect that the mind of America will concentrate on work, on business, on going forward.

All classes have been perturbed anew. So much is being dinned into the ears of ordinary folks about a 50-to-60 cents dollar that they are fearful lest something terribly revolutionary, not to say destructive, impends. The financial world and men of affairs read and hear so many threatenings of an "international currency war" that they, too, are upset.

While it was inevitable and proper that President Roosevelt's new gold deal should excite tremendous interest, should become a nine days' wonder, the fact is that it should modify, not intensify, apprehension over America's currency outlook.

His step is strictly in harmony with the recent monetary trend here and in most other countries. Our dollar had already moved down towards the 60 cents level, as measured by gold; indeed, its value yesterday was at practically the same level it had reached before the President's announcement. His action is intended and calculated to narrow rather than widen fluctuation in the (international) value of the dollar.

SEVERAL sales managers have exhorted their salesmen:

"Let Washington attend to its affairs; let us attend strictly to ours."

The less difficult it becomes to concentrate on our own daily activities, the greater the probability that genuine recovery can be achieved with reasonable dispatch. We have been distracted by three-ring circuses long enough already. It is to be hoped that Congress, the administration, everybody at Washington, will henceforth go about their duties unspectacularly, unobtrusively, undisturbingly.

Neither you nor I now need lie awake nights trembling over what will befall the dollar. We can confidently conclude that it will continue to have purchasing power.

Let us apply ourselves energetically and optimistically to the earning of more dollars.

ALTHOUGH BANKERS are perhaps the least cheerful and most apprehensive group in America, worrying daily over the prospect of having to pay the losses sustained by depositors in poorly-managed institutions after July 1, examination of what has happened to the stocks of leading banking institutions reveals that investors now have more faith in banks than they had some time ago.

From their low point of last year, the shares of the principal metropolitan banks have recovered anywhere from 19 to 111 per cent. Chicago's two largest banks have enjoyed the biggest rebound recorded in the following table, compiled exclusively for this column.

*Preliminary.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

Business Editor.

BUSINESS HAS RESUMED an upward trend. Following the brief interruption which took place as usual at the year end, activity has been increasing at an encouraging rate.

This has been particularly apparent in steel production, which at present is estimated at about 33 per cent of capacity. This represents a gain of 2 points during a week. It still is below the rate which prevailed in the final week of December, when consumers were rushing to get shipments before increased prices went into effect.

The promptness with which steel output has resumed an upward trend indicates that the buying in anticipation of higher prices is not having any lasting effect on operations.

* * *

Automobile and Rail Orders Still to Come

THE STEEL INDUSTRY has not yet received anticipated automobile and railroad orders in any great volume so that the effect of this type of business still is to be reflected in operations. Automobile tonnages may be expected soon as motor car builders get into full production schedules on new models. Railroad orders may be somewhat delayed owing to difficulties in arranging for government financing.

Steel men are more optimistic at present then they have been for some time. Various predictions have been made on the probable increase in operations to take place within the next few months. An output of 50 to 60 per cent capacity has been mentioned as probable in April. Just how much reliance should be placed on these estimates at this early date is uncertain.

* * *

Pittsburgh Index Records Decline

THE INDEX of business activity in the Pittsburgh district, as prepared by the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Pittsburgh, has declined sharply during the past two weeks. This largely reflected the slump in steel output after December 31, and it has not reflected the increase in steel production schedules this week or the volume of orders being received in the past few days. The index for the present week probably will reflect the changes.

The index for the week ended January 13, stood at 51.7. This compared with 55.1 in the previous week and 60.0 in the week ended December 30. The index for steel production stood at 38.1 last week as compared with 41.6 in the previous week and 51.1 in the week ended December 30. Other factors of the index showed small declines.

PUBLIC SHOWS FAITH IN MONEY PLAN

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The American political set-up makes it difficult to get an expression of the opinion of the electorate on any single issue.

Mr. Rukeyser

What does the man on the street think of the money question, which has again been placed on the lap of Congress by President Roosevelt?

If a plebiscite were held on reflation, what would the outcome be?

A scientific sampling of consumer opinion was recently made in New York City. Both men and women were questioned. The test was conducted under technically sound conditions.

FAVOR INFLATION

The trend of opinion was that under the present administration inflation could be controlled, and that such reflation would be helpful to business and to the diversified consumers questioned.

The inquest started out with this simple question, "If there were much more money and the same amount of goods, would prices be higher?" Seventy-two per cent answered the question in the affirmative; 18 per cent said "no" and 10 per cent replied that they didn't know.

Of the 72 per cent who answered "yes," the group divided as follows on the next query as to whether the foregoing definition constituted inflation: 42 per cent said it was inflation; 26 per cent said it was NOT inflation, and 4 per cent did not know. In other words, out of the entire group, 42 per cent both knew ofe effect of more money on commodity prices and were ready to characterize it as inflation.

REFLECTS CONFIDENCE

Other questions caused a division on whether the administration intends inflation, as follows: of those who think that the administration intends inflation 59 per cent of the total group interviewed looked upon the prospect with favor and 17 per cent with disfavor; of the remainder, who believed that the administration intends to avoid inflation, 11 per cent looked upon this prospect with favor, and 13 per cent with disfavor.

Sixty-eight per cent of the total group (and 76 per cent of the men) expressed the belief that the dollar is well protected.

Eighty-four per cent of the total professed to believe that our national financial policy is in good hands.

If this test represents scientific sampling, then the pulmotored effort among certain reactionary interests to create synthetic distrust in American monetary policy springs from no widespread lack of confidence among the broad public. Public opinion and public acceptance are of primary importance in the success of any monetary policy.

Police were mystified today over a bombing which occurred early this morning at the Green Lantern restaurant, McKeesport.

The bomb, said by police to have been a charge of black powder, exploded at 1:30 a. m., under the kitchen. The explosion blew off part of the siding, ripped plaster loose and broke two windows. No one was hurt.

The restaurant is owned by Hannah Garrity, according to police. She was unable to advance any cause for the bombing.

Price War Follows Chicago Milk Strike

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Chicago's milk war was on in earnest today when two large dairies announced they were delivering milk at 10 cents a quart, while smaller cash and carry firms declared they would continue to undersell rival dairymen. CHAPTER XIV.

The inspector's distrust was so apparent that I burst out laughing.

"I'm serious," protested Anderson. "You don't know the fellow as I do. He just can't play straight to save his life."

"What do you think of his theory?"

"Oh, it's all very well; it has possibilities. I'm more than half-inclined to believe that Mrs. Paige was accidentally murdered myself. But, Kay, when you write your story will you be careful not to mention those cigarets? I want that kept dark for a while."

Synopsis

Sonia (Sunny) Paige, wife of socially prominent Randolph (Ranny) Paige, is found hanging by a silk dress cord from the chandelier in her boudoir. An autopsy reveals that Sunny had been suffocated first with the tassel of the cord and then hung. Mrs. Deane, the housekeeper, says the night of the tragedy was her night off and that Mrs. Phelps, a neighbor, was to spend the evening with Sunny. Inspector Anderson is furious when Ranny employs Kirk Judson, a shady private detective, to investigate the tragedy. Anderson and Judson decide to forget their antagonism and work together.

Now Go On

"I'm off on vacation," I answered. "I don't have to write anything at all, though I've promised the office to watch the case and tip them off."

"I believe I'd rather you were writing it," answered the Inspector. "I trust you to stick to the facts and be discreet. Go on back and write whatever you like—only omit all mention that we have even found those butts."

"Then you do think that it was a question of burglary?" I pressed.

"Not by any means. I haven't said that. Don't you forget that Judson is in Paige's pay and the one thing that he wants us to do is to overlook any connection that Paige may have with the case. Maybe some crook was out here that night, but I doubt it very much. There aren't the proper earmarks of a burglar. No jimmied windows or unlocked doors. I imagine that open cellar window was an accident. And burglars don't stop to gag people. They hit 'em with the butt of a revolver and get out.

Returns to Office

"No, Kay, it was no crook who smoked those cigarets in the basement that night and left those smears of lipstick."

At this moment MacNalley appeared.

"Someone wants you on the phone, sir," he said.

"That's probably Hughes & Co., the jewelers. They promised to call me as soon as they had appraised the pendant. I'll see you again?"

"Yes," I answered. "I'm going to shoot back to town and talk things over with Reynolds. They have another man working in my place, but they'll be glad to get the story first-hand. I'll come back as soon as I've finished."

"Goodby," said Anderson, nodding. "I'll either be in my office or out here. Look me up."

And he turned on his heel and started back for the house while I started my automobile and headed back for the city.

Reynolds greeted me with ill-concealed eagerness.

"What's the news, Kay?" he inquired, seeking to make his voice casual and failing entirely.

There is an idea that newspapermen, particularly editors, are most blase and indifferent to the trend of the news. That's wrong. I don't know any group of men more wide awake or with a keener interest in what goes on in their communities.

"Plenty of news," I told him. "I've been up at the house all the morning, and they've been quizzing Paige. His alibi sounds pretty fishy, though it hasn't been disproven yet. Carroll's gone over to Washington to investigate it. Mrs. Deane, the housekeeper, tells a strange yarn about a mysterious letter and a telephone call. I dictated all that to Harris—I suppose I caught the noon edition?"

Writes Story

Reynolds nodded.

"The real news is that Paige has engaged Kirk Judson to investigate his wife's murder. That's what Judson claims, but Anderson seems to think that Paige is trying to cover his own tracks."

"That sounds pretty serious," commented Reynolds. "We'll have to be careful what we say. I wish you could write the story. Feature Judson but don't imply Paige's guilt. Suppose we get out an extra."

I sat down at my typewriter and a copy boy took up his stand beside me. Every dozen or so lines, I whipped the sheet out of my machine, handed it to the waiting boy without even glancing over it. This youngster dashed up to the composing room with it, while another lad took his place.

In this fashion I wrote three columns relative to the Paige murder—the story of Mr. Paige and his engaging of the services of Kirk Judson and the strange facts related by the housekeeper. I avoided all mention of the cigarets and matches we had found in the basement.

The last line was finally written and the last boy left my side. I reported to Reynolds and told him that I was headed back for the Paige house to rejoin Anderson, who I imagined would be about ready to talk to Mrs. Phelps, the next-door neighbor who had spent the evening with Mrs. Paige the night of her death. I promised Reynolds faithfully to phone in any new facts as soon as possible, and put on my hat.

It was now almost dusk, and the first day of the Paige murder case was rapidly drawing to a close.

Outside the building dozens of trucks were parked and my extra was already being loaded into them. That's what an extra is—a few minutes of feverish, frantic activity and presto, the man on the street has the latest news.

Carroll Back

A newsie dashed up to me.

"Extra! Extra, mister!" he bawled. "All the latest news about the Paige murder!"

I bought a copy, anxious to see what the copy desk had done in the way of headlines.

And there, to my consternation, across the front of the green sheet was an eight-column head, like this:

ARREST DUE IN PAIGE MURDER!

I smiled, somewhat wryly. My story hadn't said anything about an arrest—which was a small matter—but I could see Anderson's face when he picked up that paper and realized that I had written it— Oh, well!

"Hi, there, Kay!" I heard a familiar voice shout, and there was Dickey Carroll beaming at me as if I were his long-lost brother, his young face alive with animation.

"Back already?" I asked in surprise. "I didn't expect to hear from you until tomorrow."

"I'm back," said Carroll briefly. "I got the dope all right." And, looking at him closely in the twilight, I noticed a curious, triumphant look on his face. Either he had accomplished something, discovered something, or else he had another wild idea about the Paige case.

"Come on, get it off your chest," I said, ready for almost anything.

"Listen, my boy." His voice was mysterious and confidential. "What I've got will have to be reported first to the Inspector. I've phoned him and he's out at the Paige house. I thought I'd pick you up on my way out."

Not in Hurry

"Good idea," I answered. "But do you know who did it?"

"There, there, old man," said Carroll quietly. "Just you be patient and come along with me. I've got news for you but it's not official yet. Subdue your professional zeal for the time being with a bit of my profession's calmness. Come on."

"Look at that!" he exclaimed. "McPherson's been selling two-dollar ties for one berry. What do you say we take a look at them?"

"The hell with ties! If you aren't in any hurry let's duck into this cafeteria and get some sandwiches and coffee. I've had nothing since breakfast."

An hour later we were with Anderson again in the library of the Paige house. The Inspector looked worn to a frazzle. But he smiled at us.

"Back?" he said to Carroll.

"Yes. I spent the entire day in Washington on Paige's business and it's hot business, if you ask me. I'd suggest, Inspector, that you call him and ask him to come out. There're some things we'll want him to clear up, I think."

"There are some things I want to ask him myself," said Anderson, glancing at a paper in his hand. "I've already phoned him to be here at eight-thirty. But I'm afraid that I can't listen to your report just now. Mrs. Phelps is here to see me and I've already kept her waiting almost an hour as it is. Suppose we talk to her first—I don't imagine it will take long. MacNalley," calling to the officer in the hall, "ask Mrs. Phelps if she will come in here."

Neighbor Questioned

A young woman promptly appeared in the doorway, and we all arose. She was quite young and pretty in a flashy sort of way. Her bobbed blonde hair was just a shade too fair and her cheeks were a little too red even to a casual glance. But the traces of tears were unmistakable.

"This is Mrs. Phelps, gentlemen," said Anderson courteously. "Please come in and sit down. It is very kind of you to come. I should have called on you had I not been too busy to leave here."

"I was very glad to come," said Mrs. Phelps, in a husky voice that trembled a little. "I loved little Sunny dearly. I only wish that there were something I could do to really help her!"

"You are her next door neighbor, I believe?"

"Yes. We live about a mile to the south but we are the closest house to the Paige estate."

"Mrs. Deane tells me that you spent the evening here with her the night she died?"

"Yes, that is quite true. Sunny telephoned me herself about half-past five and said that Ranny had been delayed in Washington and invited me to come over. Mr. Phelps is away in the West and I was alone so that I was very glad to come."

"You and Mrs. Paige were friends?"

"We were very close friends, although I had known her only since her marriage when she came here to live."

GEN. SCOTT AT THE HEAD OF 12,000 TROOPS, VERA CRUZ

In the Mexican War (1846-48) Gen. Zachary Taylor battled his way from the Rio Grande southward; Gen. Winfield Scott, dispatched to Vera Cruz, landed in March, 1847, started his westward march to Mexico City. On September 14 he planted the Stars and Stripes over the Mexican capital.

Col. Stephen W. Kearney operated in the Southwest, seizing the outlying parts of Mexico from the Rio Grande westward. He entered Santa Fe without a shot, and turned to aid Fremont, engaged in California. Informed of the proclaimed independence of the Sacramento Valley, he completed the conquest of California after some skirmishes about Los Angeles. The treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (1848) closed the war, expanding United States with New Mexico, Upper California and California ($15,000,000 paid for latter) (U. S. History)

BREAD BY STRAIGHT DOUGH METHOD

Dough is mixed from 100 lbs. flour, 1½ lbs. salt, 1 lb. yeast, 1½ lbs. fat, 2 lbs. sugar, 1 lb. milk powder and 60 lbs. water. Afterwards fermentation is allowed at 80°F. for five to six hours, during which the dough is worked three times by hand to liberate CO_2, which would hamper fermentation. Then it is cut, allowed to rise (15 minutes), moulded to loaf, allowed to rise again in pans at 100°F. and baked in oven (above right) at 500°F. 30-40 minutes. Above left: primitive Mexican ovens. LAUE DIAGRAM—PROOF OF ATOMS

Dr. Laue directed X-rays upon thin crystal (quartz, above left) which passed the rays to a photographic plate, producing a diffraction pattern (right), called Laue Diagram. Central spot marks incidence of X-rays; spots around mark X-rays reflected by atoms in different planes of the crystal, proving its space-lattice construction, the wave nature of X-rays and the very existence of atoms. VASCO DA GAMA AT THE COURT OF THE SAMORIM OF CALCUTTA

Courtesy of John D. Morris & Co.

Revival of the works of ancient scientists suggested that the earth was round. Nations west of Italy, wishing to participate in the lucrative trade with the Orient, wanted to reach India, via west and south. Diaz, of Portugal, rounded the Cape of Good Hope (1487) concluding the exploration of the West African coast. Columbus, under the Spanish flag, sailed westward (1492) discovering America, believing it India.

Vasco Da Gama, Portuguese, reached, via Cape of Good Hope, Calcutta, India (1498), a new trade channel. Magellan, Portuguese, was the first to circumnavigate the earth, meeting his death, 1521. The Dutch and French soon took the lion's share of the Oriental trade with the British as a new claimant in the following centuries.

KINDNESS WINS FRIENDS

Jack and Tom went rowing on the lake. They also swam a lot and had a wonderful time. Late in the afternoon they came ashore to prepare a meal. A little dog greeted them with friendly barking. "Poor fellow," said Tom, "you must have been lost or abandoned, I'll take care of you." After that the dog became Jack's most grateful pal. Being kind to others may win us friends. —A Simple Form of Wireless Transmitter. Each discharge across the spark-gap is accompanied by electric oscillations in the oscillating circuit, and these set up oscillations in the aerial.

SIMPLEST RADIO TRANSMITTER—RECEIVER

Transmitter consists of a source of high tension alternating current (battery combined with induction coil), an oscillating circuit (condenser, coil, gap) and an aerial coupled to it. In the aerial are set up electric oscillations which generate electro-magnetic vibrations of the ether, the radio waves. The aerial by its length and distance from the ground sends out these waves effectively (1).

The receiver is an oscillating circuit, which is "tuned" to the emitted wave length (by adjusting length of coil); it contains also a detector (simplest a crystal: galena, carborundum, contacting a steel point) and a telephone receiver parallel to the detector. The crystal acts as a valve, admits current in one direction only (half wave). The current flowing in the other direction is forced to go as a pulsating direct current through the parallel connected receiver, producing sound (2). Graph shows rectified current (3).

By depressing key of transmitter (shorter or longer), sounds of the same duration are received through the ear phone similar to those of the sounder of Morse's telegraph. (Communication)

Bugs Baer

A Posse Is No College Huddle

It is not usually our intention to get whiskerly and editorial. But all this agitation against and for lynching has been rocking the cradle of liberty for months.

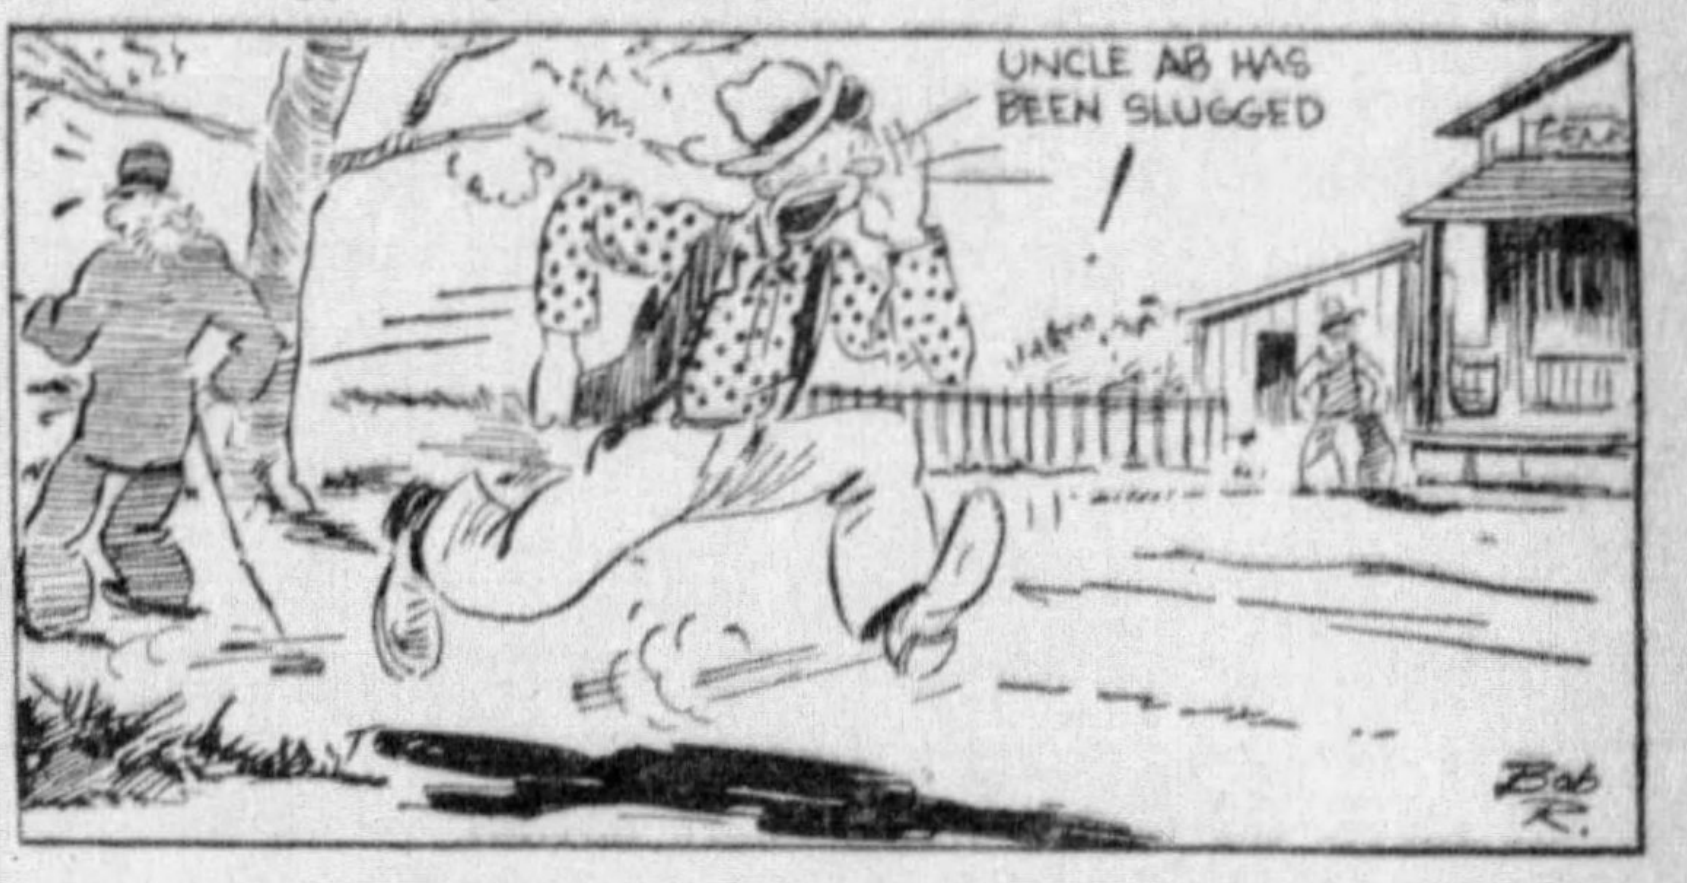
We don't approve of lynching unless we have both hands on the rope. It is the most sinister form of the old game of tug-of-war. And when they are playing it that way we don't want to be the anchor man.

The citizen who lives in New York, London, Paris or any big overtaxed city fails to see the sporting end of lynching. The large town man is willing to let the law take its detoured course. He never gets excited. That's because he knows nobody connected with the crime.

But in small towns and farm districts everybody knows each other.

So when Uncle Ab is waylaid and slugged all you have to do is run down the road yelling, "Uncle Ab has been hijacked."

In five minutes all of Unk Ab's pals and relatives are looking for the mugg who put the finger on Uncle Ab. You have a posse of his friends searching for you. And if they ever catch you while they're still hot and boiling they will fix you so you can wear a very tall collar.



UNCLE AB HAS BEEN SLUGGED
Bob R.

Let's take the same scenario and move the locale to New York City. Uncle Ab has been slugged. What of it? And who is Uncle Ab? Sounds like publicity for a new movie.

If you do get a small but refined posse together and rush down Broadway hollering, "Uncle Ab has been slugged," you are either pinched for parading without a license or some radio agent offers you a commercial sponsor for a dill pickle hour on the air.

If the posse travels over a mile the boys lose interest. One decides to finish the trip on a Fifth avenue bus. Another drops into a bowling alley for a few games. Two more see a couple of blondes walking in the opposite direction. They reverse their line of march. Finally, you are the only one left in the demoniacal posse. And you are carrying an umbrella instead of a rope.

Still, you are marching onward, chanting, "Uncle Ab has been slugged." After a while you go home and go to bed. You can't sleep because Uncle Ab snores so loud. He hasn't been slugged hard enough.

The answer being don't commit a crime in a small town where they all know each other.

The Failure of Justice

Honest as Well as Crooked Lawyers Are Responsible for The Breakdown of the Courts

When public abuses become intolerable, and reforms can no longer be deferred, the first task in bringing about a better order of things is to FIX RESPONSIBILITY for the evil facts.

In this country, the most lamentable of all long-continued abuses has been the progressive failure of justice in the states.

The federal courts are generally good. Federal laws are feared and respected by criminals because federal justice is relatively swift and sure.

But our state courts, with negligible exceptions, are mired in politics, and the "justice" they dispense is all too frequently the rotten outcome of legalistic racketeering.

This disgraceful condition has spread until it permeates our whole economic and social existence.

It affects the well-being of every citizen.

It endangers human life and the security of property.

It impairs the conduct of honest enterprises.

It permits blackmailers and extortioners to infest our communities, in criminal alliance with local politicians, and it permits gangsters to wage machine gun battles in our streets.

Only lately, when a veritable "crime wave" of kidnaping began to terrorize the country, the federal government had to step in and save the situation for the states.

And in spite of federal intervention, we have seen the fateful consequences of these accumulated disorders expressing themselves in public contempt for our so-called ''administration'' of criminal justice and in tragical outbreaks of mob violence.

Now, who have been responsible for this ghastly breakdown in American civilization?

Certainly not the people as a body. On the contrary, the people want law and order and equable justice to prevail.

The answer is—the LAWYERS and the LEGISLATORS. They have been and THEY ARE the responsible ones.

During our entire history, by statute and by precedent, the lawyers and the legislators have been the custodians of justice.

They have created the courts and written the laws.

Consequently, if American "justice" has come to be a miserable and costly travesty, nobody EXCEPT the lawyers and the legislators CAN be blamed.

Moreover, the LEGISLATURES have commonly been composed very largely of LAWYERS, so that the responsibility rests in double measure primarily upon the lawyers themselves.

Worst of all, the lawyers have been the greatest OPPONENTS OF REFORM.

It means, saving only a few commanding figures, the legal profession as a whole, which TOLERATES crooked lawyers within its ranks, and which PERMITS justice to be betrayed.

The lawyers naturally will not admit this, BUT IT IS TRUE.

At any time in the last half century and more, the lawyers—with their bar associations and their compelling influence in the legislatures—could have cleansed the courts and purged their own profession, and given America the kind of justice that England has had since 1873.

They have not done so—and why? Simply because IT PAYS THEM NOT TO DO SO.

The majority of practicing lawyers in this country make money out of legal delays and gross abuses of justice, and so the best of them—profiting only indirectly, perhaps—TOLERATE the abuses, although they may not COMMIT them.

Are the American people going to submit to it any longer?

The people have all the weapons of self-government in their own hands. And the people of the states of America can COMPEL their legislatures to effect reforms—or else, if reform be denied, the people can CHANGE the legislatures.

Why, then, should the people wait longer for the bar associations and the lawyers to do something WHICH THEY WILL NOT DO?

The time has come for the people to take the matter into their own hands.

Let them go directly to their legislatures and DEMAND reform.

Let them elect legislators pledged to reform and retire legislators who will not carry out the public will.

Let the civic organizations and the voters' organizations take vigorous and immediate action.

Let PUBLIC OPINION overwhelm the discreditable resistance of the lawyers, and let the lawyer politicians feel the powerful discipline of that opinion.

The lawyers in and out of legislative bodies need a good cleaning up and carbolic soap is none too strong for the public to use in this wholesome process.

LET US HAVE AN AMERICAN JUSTICE CAMPAIGN—a campaign for JUSTICE and HONESTY.

The Starling

A starling, found injured at Ross and Diamond streets, was taken in charge by a Springdale resident, who hopes to restore it to health and make a pet of it.

We read at the same time that an enormous flock of starlings has taken possession of the Capitol at Washington, where the birds are regarded as a pest.

It is curious that there should be such a divergence of opinion concerning starlings. The English think highly of them. Many is the story told in England of the intelligence and attractiveness of pet starlings. It is said they have remarkable imitative power and can be taught to whistle tunes. A British ornithological authority says of the starling:

> "A more engaging bird scarcely exists, for its familiarity during some months of the year gives opportunities for observing its ways that few others afford, while its varied song, its sprightly gestures, its glossy plumage, and, above all, its character as an insecticide—which last makes it the friend of the agriculturist and the grazier—render it an almost universal favorite."

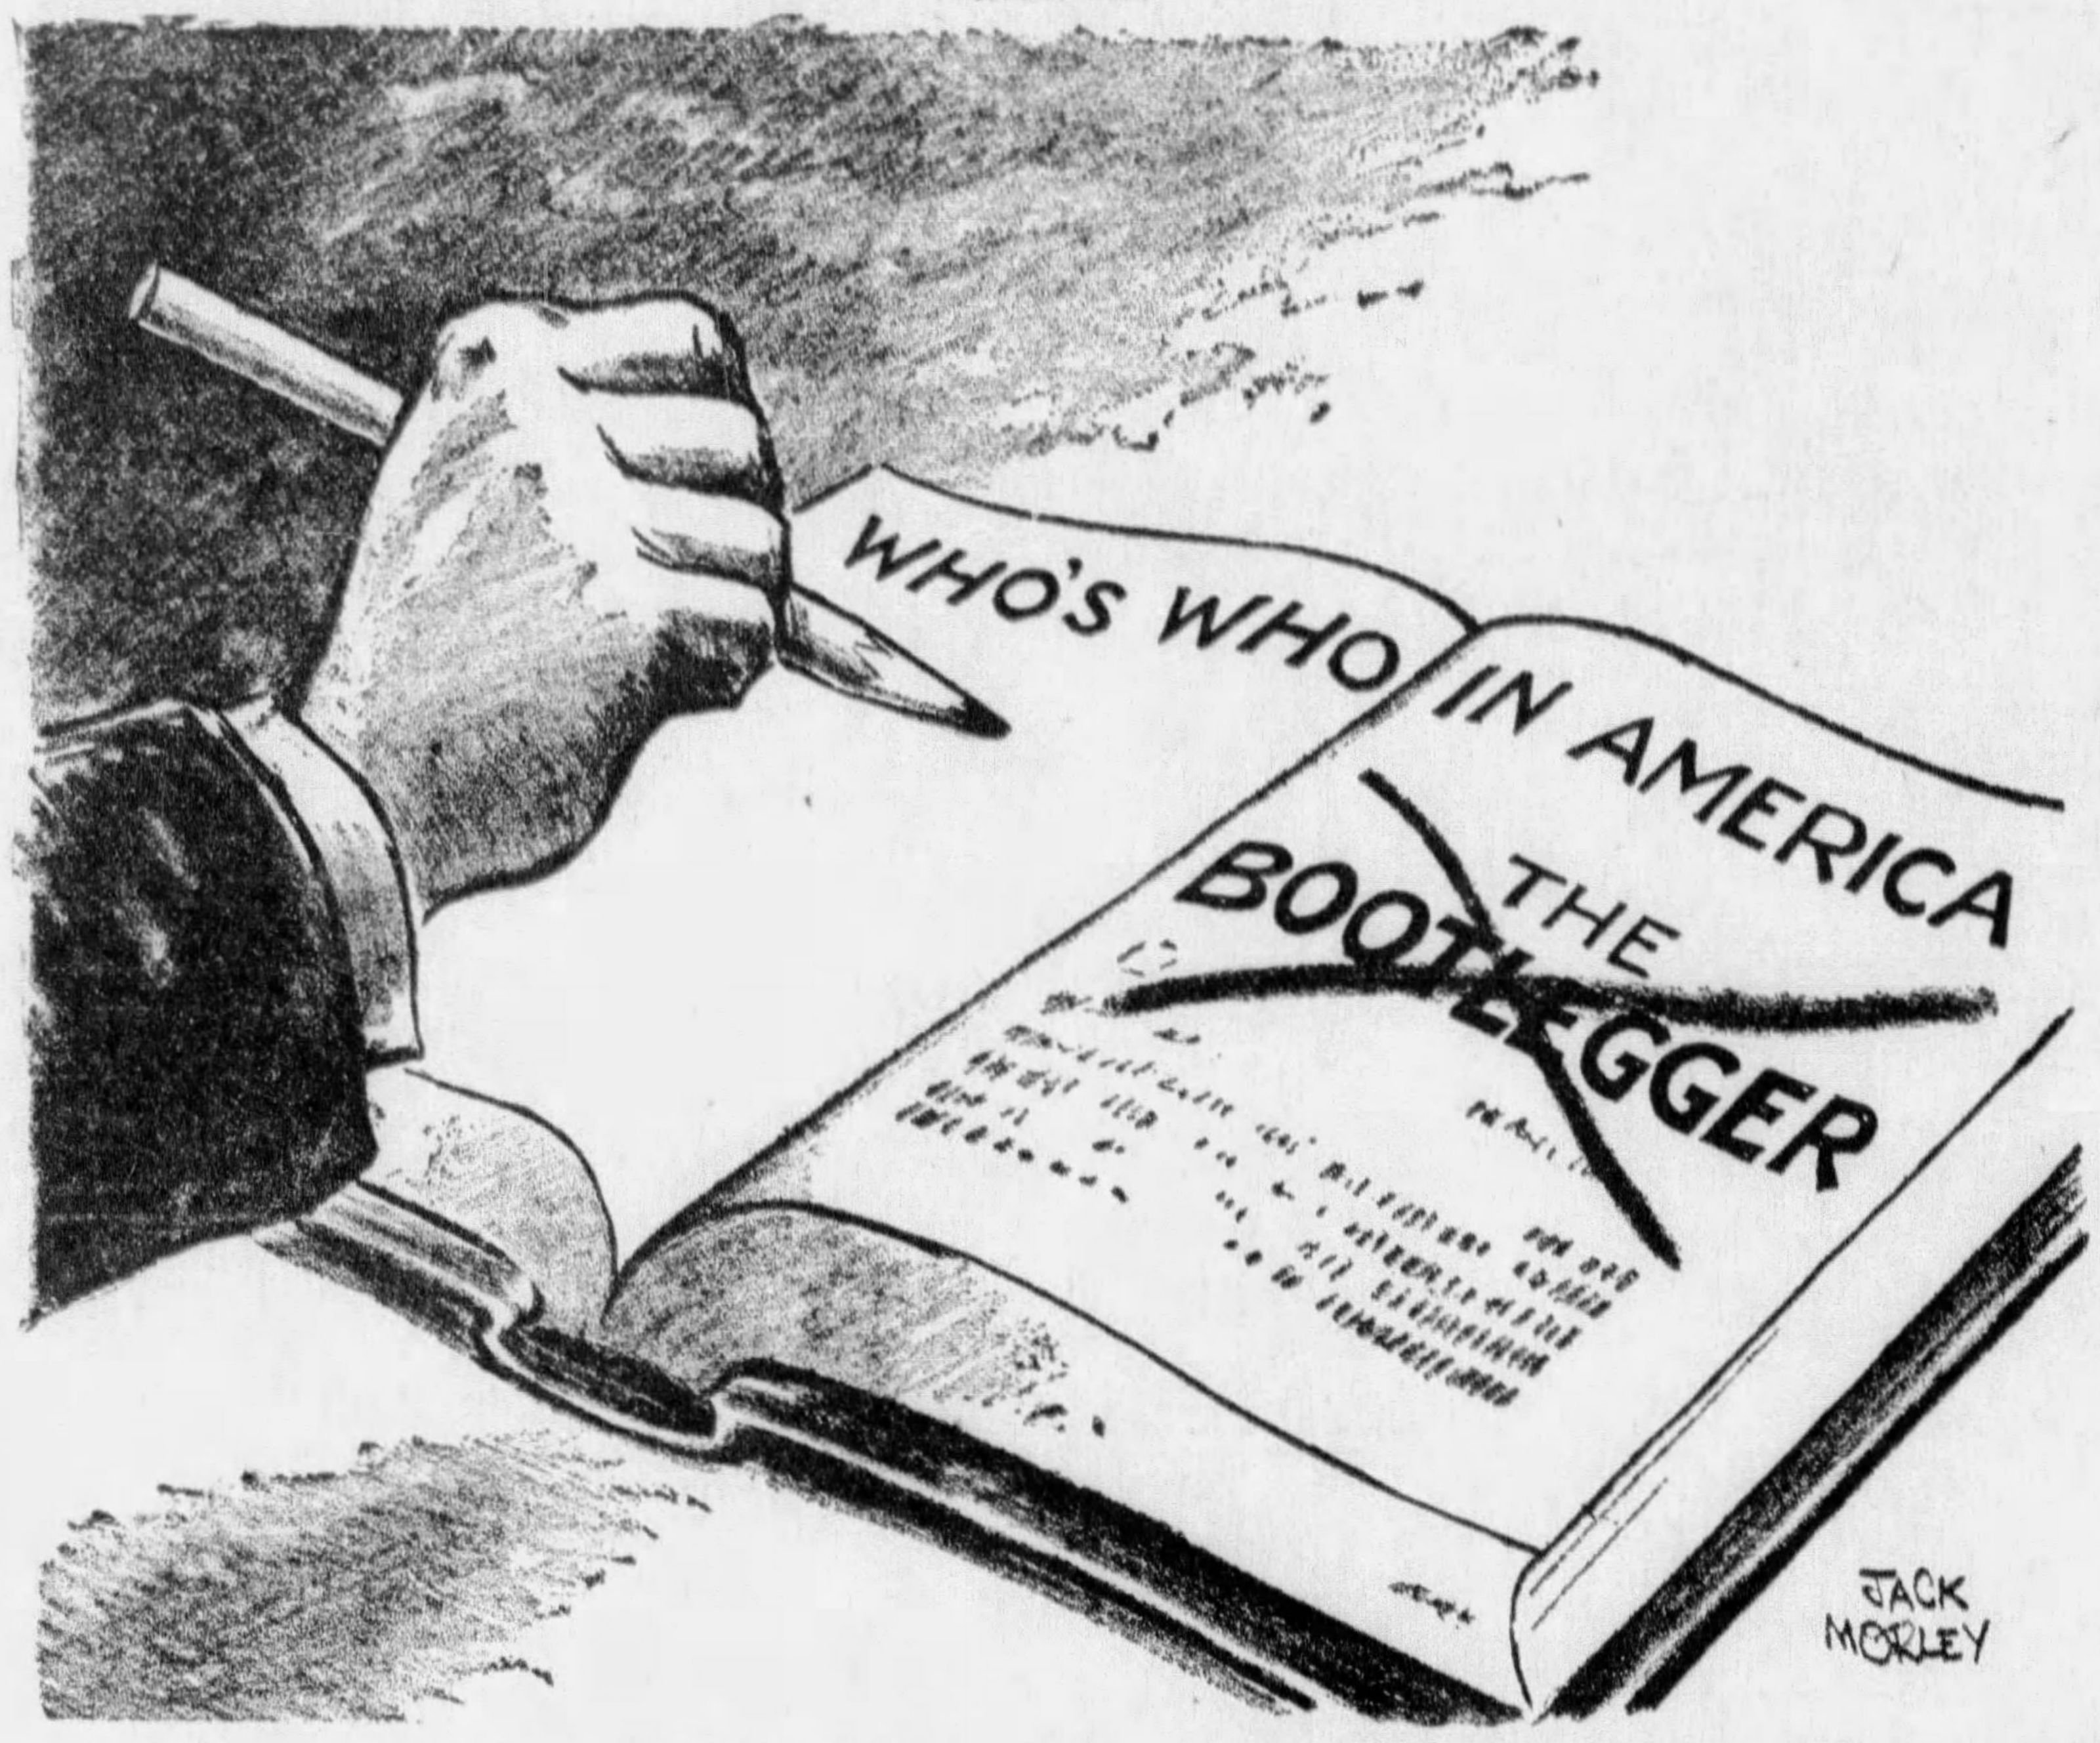
Far different is the appraisal of the starling in the United States. Because of the good qualities for which the British vouched it was deliberately introduced in this country. The starlings from which our present starling "population" has sprung were released in Central Park in New York City in 1890. Starlings became permanent residents of the Pittsburgh district in 1920. They had not been in the state long until the authorities at Harrisburg decided they were "und[illegible]able citizens" and withheld from them the protection give[illegible] other song and insectivorous birds.

We can only hope that after they have lived here longer they will "settle down" and become good citizens like their European kinsmen of whom the English are so fond.

Cross Him Off the List!

(Copyright, 1934.)



Prohibition was abolished by vote of the people because of its great evils.

Speakeasies and bootleggers were among the greatest of these evils—and both are trying to remain now that Prohibition is gone.

Both must go. And if the American people could rid themselves of constitutional Prohibition they can also rid themselves of its lingering evils.

First, let there be law enforcement. And second, let the public obey the law and boycott bootleggers and speakeasies.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Thoughts while strolling: That revue jeering Radio City better take another looksee. Always know a western clerk by his "You bet I will." The silky satirist Fred Keating. Cab Calloway and his blue chow, "Smokey Joe." The old Plaza cabmen are worthy of a Currier and Ives.

One word description of Fifi D'Orsay—spurty. Every hotel seems to have a cocktail hostess. Wonder if other non-smokers always carry away one of those free holders of matches, too. Anyway Peaches Browning is rosy around the gills. Nobody seems to enjoy life more than that Rialto physician, Dr. Leo Michel.

The suspended animation and eddy of self-consciousness when someone cries "Stop thief!" I'm always forgetting to ask somebody who should know just what is genius. France beginning to bellyache about poor U. S. wine sales. So you won't pay! Park avenue has become a bedlam.

One of my favorite people—Elmer Oliphant. Judith Anderson and Mrs. Lisle Bell could pass for twins. And if anyone else tells me I'm a double for Ned Sparks I'll fume. He's a good looking guy. But I'm kind to animals and a wizard at guessing games. May Quirk has the laughingest eyes.

How middle-aged Yascha Bunchuk looks in the orchestra pit! In close-up he's a juvenile. But the biggest fooler in a near view is Douglas Fairbanks. He's not much bigger than A. C. Blumenthal. Whenever you see a pair of feet and a big cigar, it's likely Dave Stamper.

* * *

Most people whose faces become familiar by constant repetition in public prints often discover there is still confusion. Christopher Morley in one of his essays tells of being approached on a train by a young man who asked him to settle a bet. He said: "I said you were Mr. Morley but my friend said no: he said you don't look a bit like the pictures in the book ads."

So far as I know, New York has only one enormous St. Bernard dog with tired looking Wilton Lackeye eyes. I see it walking occasionally with a priest in the Yorkville section, lumbering along lazily and totally oblivious of the brave little pooches that always rush out to snarl at an oversized dog.

* * *

My chiropodist from Harlem tells of a customer whose face was vaguely familiar. He finally confided she resembled Ethel Watters. "That's no compliment," she sniffed. "I'd rather have anybody's face than hers." There was a coolness for the rest of the visit, for Miss Watters is the high yellow favorite. However, conforming to office custom, he asked for her name and address. The card read: "Ethel Watters, No. —— Seventh avenue." And she went har-har-haring out to her limousine.

A new wrinkle in the Broadway ballyhoo has an Atlantic City boardwalk tang. Up side streets from the barny after repeal type of dinner and revue places are roller chairs with customary rachitic pushers. Banners along the side proclaim: "Free ride to Soandsos." And now and then a couple is tight enough to be rolled away.

* * *

The old Astor Theater has for years specialized in stupendous signs since it went cinema. It is now exploiting the biggest single starring splash ever seen along the street. The entire front is blazing in a rainbowy jet—G-A-R-B-O in shimmery semicircle. Greta's first name no longer matters. She has, in the cinema world, taken her place with Duse and Bernhardt. Or at least so Hollywood thinks.

The novelist, Louis Joseph Vance had for many years fallen to sleep over his after-dinner cigar, especially after he had dined well. Three conflagrations were started in one apartment where he lived and all his carpets and furniture were seared with scorching spots. The late Arnold Daly, who died in a similar holocaust, did the same thing for years. A further coincidence is that both Vance and Daly were among few Americans to wear monocles.

New York lives with blinds up. Back home every home had a darkened room. In our house it was the parlor, which was never opened save Christmas day and when the silk-hatted traveling optician made his yearly call to fit grandma's spectacles.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

If We Could 'Become As Little Children'

I'm still thinking, with a laugh and a choke and a troubled longing, of that story which came over the radio Christmas Eve. Yes, a true story. It happened a year ago at the little French Catholic Church in San Francisco, on the hill where the cobbled street swings down and down to the wide, bright bay, and up and up to the high, bright sky, with the light falling spangled and soft as Mary's own blue veil.

And now the year had turned until the stars hung low and white over the midnight hills—and the wind smelled of violets and roasted chestnuts and Chinese lilies—and it was Christmas again in California.

So, once more, the good pastor of the little French church wreathed the altar with fragrant fir and pine, and set the candles blazing, and laid out the old loved scene, with Mary and Joseph bending over the little Babe and the great Kings kneeling beside the humble ox and ass.

Such a wonderful scene it was, to the small ones who came scampering down the hill, peering in through the door, tip-toeing up the familiar aisle, now suddenly grown mysterious with the lights gleaming and blurring through the scented shadows and falling, at last, in a great, golden pool about the manger where the Christ Child lay!

A bit frightened, those small ones, with the strangeness of it all. But when they came at last to the manger, then there was no more fright. For there was the little Jesus, so friendly, looking exactly like baby Tony or Josephine, whom they had left at home. So, though their eyes were still round with wonder, they laughed easily now; touching His little hand with their plump, brown fingers; talking to Him—for He must be lonely, lying there all alone, so far from other babies—telling Him about the holiday fun to come.

So, through all the sweet Christmas days, the Babe lay in the manger and the small ones came visiting.

Then Christmas was over, and the New Year had come, and it was time to set everything in order. So the good pastor came bustling with his helpers, taking down the holy-day wreaths, putting away the holy-day candles, laying aside the nativity scene.

But now, suddenly, there arose a great clamor and questioning. For where was the Christ Child? Everything else was there in its place—Mary and Joseph, the ox and the ass, the haughty camel, the kneeling kings—but where, oh where, was that most treasured and sacred object, the image of the Little Jesus?

Frantically they searched every nook, up and down the aisles, into forgotten closets, but never a trace did they find. Finally, to soothe his desperation and cool his heated brow, the good Father stepped out on the little balcony that hung over the cobbled street.

And there—could he believe his outraged eyes?—there, coming up the street in a small red wagon, pulled by a chubby, ragged, smiling little boy, came the little Jesus!

"But what—but what—" stammered and stuttered the amazed pastor, rushing down the steps, towering indignantly above the small criminal, snatching up the sacred image. 'Do you know, child—do you know what you have done, taking the Christ?"

"But it wasn't wrong, Father," said the small, puzzled face, looking up at his late companion with a knowing smile, even in this awful moment. "It wasn't wrong. For, you see, I promised Him I would."

"You promised Him!"

"Sure I did! I said to Him, 'Listen, little Jesus, I want a red wagon awful bad. A red wagon like the one Guiseppe has. And here's a swap. If you will get the red wagon for me, little Jesus, I will take you for a ride in it.' And He did Father! On Christmas morning, there it was, just as we had talked. So, as soon as we had tried it out down Green Street—all us kids—why, I came and took Him for a ride."

* * *

Such a gay little story! Why do the tears come with a rush—why does my heart twist with such a wrench—whenever I remember it? Perhaps because I'm thinking how different this sad world might be if we could all have faith like that.

But only a child could have such belief in a plaster image?

Yes, that is true. But that little child believed in more than a plaster image. He believed in love, and kindness, and the little red wagon of joy! He believed that these were the important things in life, and that one could have them if one honestly asked.

And the oldest and wisest of us might believe that, too—and go riding down the bright streets with Love on Christmas Morning—if we could but put our hate and fear away, and be little children once again.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

The Sweet and Lowdown

A bachelor always thinks of marriage, academically, as something that may happen to his buddies—but never to HIM. Yet, marriage does happen to nearly all men, sooner or later.

MY BUDDIES ARE ALL GETTING MARRIED— BUT NOT FOR ME - I'LL--- OH YEAH ?

The modern man seldom takes a woman seriously, unless he finds that she can't be taken casually, lightly or intermittently.

* * *

Divorce started out as a desperate surgical operation for the relief of intensive domestic suffering; but, nowadays, some women seem to think they must have their husbands removed almost as regularly and casually as they have their eyebrows shaped.

* * *

* * *

Getting along with men in the office, without either slopping over sentimentally or growing prim and hard-boiled, is the greatest feat of a modern business woman's life.

* * *

No matter how long she has been threatening, no man ever can believe that his wife is actually through, until he discovers that her tooth-brush is missing.

* * *

Advice to girls: Never permit yourself to be blinded by any woman-charmer's headlights. No man is as dazzling as he seems while he is making love to you.

It seems to be every man's divine right to think of himself as a potential Don Juan—no matter what his mirror or his birthday may tell him.

Only the unfavorable seems to interest you.

The greater the filth the more you seem to relish it.

Why is it that your mind runs to the vile or criminal side of human nature?

If you were clean and wholesome yourself wouldn't your greatest gratification be in referring to the good emanating from others?

If you cannot keep yourself from evil it is bound to show itself in evil deeds or conversation off color.

Where do you get the idea that it is amusing to talk filth?

What sort of a mentality have you that you cannot find clean fun and clean language to express entertaining thoughts?

The older you grow the more the level of your thoughts shows in the expression of your eyes and face when you think you are unobserved.

Economic Slavery

By ROBERT H. HEMPHILL, Financial Authority.

THE issuance of bonds due to the cost of the Civil War precipitated a crisis which came near resulting in the repeal of the National Bank Act and the issuance of full legal tender money by the government.

Salmon P. Chase, Secretary of the United States Treasury, and subsequently Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, eventually realized that he had been imposed upon by his friends, international bankers, and denounced the National Bank Act as follows:

> "My agency in procuring the passage of the National Banking Act was the mistake of my life. It has built up a monopoly that affects every interest in the country. It should be repealed. But before this can be accomplished the people will be arrayed on one side and the banks on the other in a contest such as we have never seen in this country."

DURING this controversy Lord Goschen, eminent English monetary authority, and director of the Bank of England, said:

> "What, it may be asked, will be the value of gold to them—the people of the United States—if they neither require it for internal circulation, nor for payment of foreign liabilities, from which, under our hypotheses, they will be comparatively free?
> "If that mischievous financial policy which has had its origin in the North American republic during the late war in that country should become indurated down to a fixture there, that government will furnish its money without cost. It will pay off its debts and be without a debt. It will have all the money necessary to carry on its commerce. It will become prosperous beyond precedent in the history of civilized governments of the world. The brains and wealth of all countries will go to North America. That government must be destroyed, or it will destroy every monarchy on this globe."—London Times, 1865.

AFTER this controversy subsided, international bankers affiliated with the Rothschilds began a concerted campaign in all countries to demonetize silver in order to further reduce the amount of money coined by the various governments, and increase the opportunity of the bankers to furnish a credit money at a profit to themselves.

During this campaign, on March 12, 1893, the National Bankers' Association sent out to all banks what was known as "the panic circular," as follows:

> "Dear sir: The interests of national bankers require immediate financial legislation by Congress. Silver, silver certificates and treasury notes must be retired and the national bank notes, upon a gold basis, made the only money. This requires the authorization of $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 of new bonds as a basis of circulation. YOU WILL AT ONCE RETIRE ONE-THIRD OF YOUR CIRCULATION AND CALL IN ONE-HALF OF YOUR LOANS. Be careful to make a money stringency felt among your patrons, especially among the influential businessmen. Advocate an extra session of Congress for the repeal of the purchase clause of the Sherman Law; and act with other banks of your city in securing a large petition to Congress for its unconditional repeal, as per accompanying form. Use personal influence with Congressmen; and particularly, let your wishes be known to your Senators. The future life of national banks as fixed and safe investments depends upon immediate action, as there is an increasing sentiment in favor of governmental legal tender notes and silver coinage."

AGAIN the nation's hope for economic freedom centers in our President and our present Congress.

They have it within their power to write a new declaration of independence. To complete the work begun by the patriots whose courage and devotion founded this great social democracy, they can by recovering the complete control of the issuance of the money of the nation, by issuing full legal tender money to replace bank credit, the most unsound money on earth, free us from the bondage of predatory men.

They can prevent a recurrence of this tragic depression which has cost us, in capital loss, two hundred billion dollars, in loss of revenue, two hundred billion dollars, in wrecked lives and ambitions, in broken hearts, in human suffering and in despair, a staggering total which is beyond computation.

Will they have the courage to write a new declaration of independence, or will they, like their predecessors, betray the country into another period of slavery, and eventual revolution?

(The foregoing is the fourth and last of a series on "Economic Slavery.")

Human Side of the News

Paris Reported No Longer Naughty—Monsieur Chiappe, The Prefect of Police

By Edwin C. Hill

PARIS, once reputed the naughtiest, wickedest city in the wide world, has become a city of excellent and healthy morality. For that statement there is the best authority, none other than Monsieur Jean Chiappe, its prefect of police—one of the most interesting human beings who have a stirring spoon in the great caldron of human activities.

He's a short man, Jean Chiappe, as this speaker noted, interviewing him in the Surete by the Seine. He stands barely five feet three, and may be a trifle sensitive of this, because he wears specially made shoes with high heels. He is stocky, as well as short, with large features and an eye that can bore through chilled steel and drill the fear of God into thugs and murderers.

He is 58 now, and bald except for a fringe of gray hair; and except for those remarkable eyes, Corsican eyes, little of the dynamo that is the man shows on the surface.

* * *

The Tale of The Rose Diamond

STARTING as a clerk in the French Department of the Interior, he was head of the whole secret service and master spy hunter by the time the war rolled around. For 10 years or so he has been head of the Paris police, of the men in the dark blue capes with their little white batons.

Many and varied have been the exploits of this remarkable little steam engine in boots. There is the tale of the great Rose Diamond. It was worth a million dollars and was once owned by the Great Conde, chief general of Louis XIV. Louis XIV gave the great diamond to the Duke d'Enghien, and in 1926 it was stolen.

The mystery was complete. Chiappe himself went to Chantilly to take charge of the case, in person. Using those gimlet eyes of his, he watched and waited until one day he saw a chambermaid bite into an apple left upon a table in one of the rooms of a cheap hotel. She bit not only into the apple but almost cracked a tooth on the great Conde diamond. Chiappe got the apple, the diamond and the thief, but he had to get the chambermaid another job because of the notoriety she brought to the hotel.

Force as the last resort only—that is the motto and modus operandi of the great detective of modern times. A few months ago, 8,000 angry farmers poured into Paris, bent upon making a demonstration against the Chamber of Deputies because wheat was selling so low. Out of such demonstrations revolutions sometimes explode. In solid ranks the farmers marched into Paris and made rendezvous, bristling with menace.

Monsieur Chiappe, carrying his umbrella, wearing his dingy bowler hat—little, inconspicuous — went to the rendezvous, shook hands with the ringleaders and announced that he was ready, with a police escort, to guide the parade. Away it moved in perfect order, flags flying, men cheering, little Monsieur Chiappe stepping along on his short legs, showing the way.

* * *

Protected Embassy During Riots

MILES the column moved before the farmers, not familiar with Paris, began to grow suspicious.

"Oh," he said, "only about three miles, but not in the direction you are marching. It's just the opposite way."
